On its Efficient, Modern-Equipped Laundry Department

PROBLEM—Linen inventory required at this 214-bed hospital was large and costly. Yet shortages in clean linens continued to hamper hospital functioning.

SOLUTION—The problem was placed in the hands of our Laundry Advisor, who made a careful survey. His report recommended new, high-speed equipment specifically adapted to hospital's needs, and listed benefits and savings it would accomplish. Detailed plans were approved and the efficient, modern laundry installed.

RESULTS—Linens and uniforms are returned to service on exceptionally fast schedule. Linen inventory has been reduced, effecting large savings. Yet laundry easily maintains abundant supply of sterile-clean linens in all departments of hospital. Management is pleased with excellent quality of work produced and low laundering costs.

BEFORE YOU READ this I must warn you that any resemblance between the following report and a travelog is purely coincidental.

The hedge-hopping Hatfields did some far and wide traveling during April and early May. We left Philadelphia April 11 and returned to our home base late in the evening of May 3, having attended regional hospital association conventions in Kansas City, Seattle and Chicago. Between meetings we made good use of time by seeing something of Denver, Salt Lake City, the San Francisco Bay area, Monterey, Yosemite, Vancouver and Victoria. Flying conditions, for the most part, were excellent. On the whole we had no reason to complain about the weather. This report will deal primarily with our travels. Therefore, I shall ask those who chance to read it and who have been over the same ground to forgive me for waxing enthusiastic about some of the sights.

Our flight to Kansas City was uneventful. When we arrived, the sun was shining and the temperature was comfortably cool. During our three days there, the sun shone brightly but it was cold as blazes—abnormally so. It was a pleasant surprise to find it very much warmer in Denver and points west.

We had a delightful time at the Midwest Hospital Association meetings. I was told that the attendance was disappointingly low, compared with other years, but I thought it was good. At any rate interest and enthusiasm ran high and the program was good. I had the pleasure of participating in the program a couple of times and, additionally, I had the honor of inducting the new president, Roy Anderson of Denver. As the mantle of office, figuratively speaking, was lifted from the capable shoulders of Charlie Newell and placed on the sturdy and equally capable Roy, I had the thrill that comes to one who serves as the instrument of transferring from one to another the responsibilities and honor of high office.

AT NOON ON APRIL 14 the Hatfields hopped by plane to Denver where we were joined by Dr. and Mrs. Wilmar Allen (Bill, you know, is president of the American College of Hospital Administrators) for a sight-seeing trip about the city and environs. We are indebted to Hubert Hughes, administrator of the General Rose Memorial Hospital, for acting as host and guide, as well as chauffeur, on that most delightful trip. We are likewise indebted to the Rt. Rev. Msgr. John R. Mulroy of Denver, president-elect of the Catholic Hospital Association, for meeting us at the airport and arranging the sight-seeing trip. It was an afternoon and evening we shall remember.

Early the next morning the Allens and Hatfields entrained for the trip through scenic Royal Gorge and Tennessee Pass. We had rain until noon, but the weather was clear while we were in the gorge. At Tennessee Pass we went through a snowstorm of rare beauty which lasted until we were well down in the valley west of the Great Divide.

OUR SCHEDULE called for an all-day stop-over in Salt Lake City. We made the most of it by visiting the Mormon Tabernacle and taking two sightseeing tours—one around the city and the other to the Bingham open pit copper mine and the improves maternity pad technic

The New, 35% Longer
No. 656 KOTEX* MATERNITY PAD

The new No. 656 KOTEX (12" Pad) greatly reduces the need for multiple, overlapping applications. This is possible because the new No. 656 is 35% longer than ordinary maternity pads.

Savings Up to 45%. In actual hospital tests, the new No. 656 12" KOTEX Pads effected savings up to 45% over previous methods.

Softer, More Absorbent, More Efficient. KOTEX Maternity Pads absorb quicker, draw moisture along the length of the pad, then hold drainage. Patients prefer KOTEX because it is softer, more absorbent, more efficient. They use more KOTEX than all other brands combined.

Used with the More Sanitary and Economical
NEW KOTEX HOSPITAL BELT

This new belt, another Bauer & Black exclusive, is ideal for use with the new No. 656 KOTEX Pad. A one-inch wide elastic waistband of the finest quality affords soft, uniform tension. A special snap fastener makes applying and changing pads easier. The new Hospital Belt gives these advantages:

- More sanitary than T-Binder because it does not become contaminated with drainage.
- Easier to apply pad on the belt than on a T-Binder.
- More economical than T-Binders. Saves money and time.
- Far more acceptable to patients.
- More comfortable for patient during early ambulation.

Hospitals and patients will benefit by using this new and better combination of the No. 656 KOTEX Maternity Pad and the New KOTEX Hospital Belt.

Great Salt Lake. My wife and I had the pleasure of meeting and dining with two Pennsylvania Hospital ex-interns and their wives while in Salt Lake City. We had not seen them for 20 years, and you may be sure we had many things to talk about.

I can't remember having seen more picturesque country than the Feather River Canyon. For four hours, the following day, we sat spellbound in a vistadome car of the California Zephyr watching this wonderland pass. Truly it was a spectacular journey. We left the Allens at the ferry pier in San Francisco, knowing we would see them again in Seattle a week later. They were splendid traveling companions.

FROM THE SEVENTEENTH to the twenty-third my wife and I were guests of friends who live in Burlingame, on the peninsula just south of San Francisco. Something interesting was planned for us every day. We saw San Francisco. We visited Monterey and Carmel, where we saw one of the earliest Spanish missions. We were in the Calavaras gold mining country and in Yosemite. We saw the giant sequoias and Yosemite Falls. All in all we were driven more than a thousand miles — a series of tours unmatched in all our previous experiences. Very reluctantly we left our most hospitable friends and central California on the twenty-third for Seattle, by plane. There were many more wonderful things to see in the great northwest and there was a four-day convention to attend, all of which we looked forward to with much interest.

THE ASSOCIATION OF Western Hospitals convention was well attended and the program was superb. The entire four days were packed with activity, with little time for sight-seeing. We did, however, manage a hurried auto trip about the "city of homes" under the guidance of our gracious host, Charles Rowlands. He also led Bert Whitehall and me on a ferry expedition to Bremerton one afternoon. Because of strikes threatening his hospital in Oakland, Cal., President George Wood was called home suddenly at the end of the first day of the convention. First Vice President Frank Gabriel of Albuquerque, N. M., ably carried on with the assistance of Walter Heath, the new president-elect.

The day after the convention my wife and I slipped off for a three-day trip to Vancouver and Victoria, B.C. We had a delightful, restful, leisurely boat ride of some 142 miles with over night stops in the two cities. On our return to Seattle from Victoria the rain-free weather, which had been so kind to us for more than two weeks, forsook us. We left Seattle early the next morning by plane—our destination, Chicago. It was still raining, but the skies cleared before we reached Denver.

THE STOP IN CHICAGO was primarily to pay our respects to our many friends attending the Tri-State Hospital Assembly and to take part briefly in the program. For years I have heard glowing reports about this meeting. It began as a tri-state affair, with Illinois, Wisconsin and Indiana participating. More recently Michigan joined. Attendance at this three-day meeting has grown steadily in the past 20 years, from about 250 to about 7,000 this year. It is more than a three-ring circus—it has all the aspects of a world's fair. Some 50 local organizations were involved, with the program divided into 34 sections. Tri-State differs from other regional meetings in that the sectional sessions are featured—they are department head programs or miniature institutes so to speak. All through the years the moving spirit of this great organization has been that genius, Dr. Malcolm MacEachern. He and the Hahns—Albert, the executive secretary, and his wife Grace—have done a sensational job. One wonders how much larger the assembly can grow. It now taxes the convention facilities of Chicago. There is not nearly enough space available to the exhibitors who, of course, are a most important feature of any hospital association convention.

Barnstorming the country, I have found, is somewhat a chore, but it has its compensations—mainly that of making new friends.

Castle No. 52 Explosion-Proof Safelight

How to give operating teams better lighting with Explosion-Proof safety

SAFER: You can insure safety by specifying the Castle Explosion-Proof Safelight. It is Underwriters' approved for use in Class 1, Group C, Hazardous Locations.

MORE EFFECTIVE: The revolutionary Castle Safelight helps operating teams to work more smoothly for two reasons: 1. It gives superior illumination—cool, with maximum shadow reduction through a newly developed optical system; the light is color-corrected to give natural contrast between flesh colors. Universal focus gives maximum light without adjustment where the surgeon is working—2. Finger touch "pointing." The unique Castle pantograph arm allows even an inexperienced nurse to instantly point the light where the surgeon wants it.

CASTLE NO. 51 SAFELIGHT: The No. 51 explosion-proof Safelight has the conventional counter-balanced arm instead of pantograph arm of the No. 52. The lamphead raises, lowers, tilts to any required angle. It gives the same exceptional quality illumination.

WHAT OCCUPANCY PERCENTAGE IS 'CAPACITY'?

THE QUESTION of why "capacity" is so variable and so far below 100 per cent is often accounted for by construction or personnel deficiencies. Specific explanation for and examples of their capacities are cited below by six administrators in answer to the question: "What percentage of occupancy do you consider 'capacity' for your hospital, and specifically what factors limit it to that figure?"

Service is most efficient if census is about 85%

IN A GENERAL hospital having varieties of accommodation, with the usual number of services, and following desirable practice as to the segregation of services, it is hardly possible for census to equal total bed complement.

Each semi-private room must have only men or women occupants; each ward serves either men or women, never both. Only infants are cared for in the bassinets; children, in the children's ward, and new mothers, in the maternity unit. It is rarely likely that the exact combination of patients will appear on any one day, and it is certainly virtually impossible that the percentage of occupancy for a month, or even a week, can rise above 90 per cent of the theoretical total. The larger the hospital, the less possible a higher percentage.

Also, patients have a yen to go home on the weekend; doctors are naturally prone to slack up Saturday and Sunday, and the working force was reared with the weekend habit—all this results in two days with a comparatively low census.

In addition, reservations are sometimes cancelled at the last minute; doctors get sick or go to meetings; key personnel may be unavoidably absent; essential equipment may be temporarily out of order, and rooms or wards must be "out for painting or repairs."

Aside from the simple mathematics governing the situation, the pressure of 100 per cent occupancy is too great for the personnel to bear up under for any considerable length of time. Inefficiency and multiplication of error would unavoidably result.

All things considered, then, our 320-bed general hospital, treating acute medical and surgical disorders, is crowded and is not performing in its most efficient fashion (medically) when census for the month exceeds 85 to 90 per cent. If your figure is higher, are you quite certain of your mathematics? How about those emergency beds? Did that girl really count noses correctly? Better look again at the "official rule" for computing census.—R. F. WHITAKER, superintendent, Emory University (Ga.) Hospital.

Admitting procedures add to percentage of load

IT IS SURPRISING to find out how better admitting procedures by capable admitting officers will add to the percentage of what had been thought to be the capacity load. The admitting office cannot do the job itself, and maximum use of hospital beds means efficiency all along the line, including the discharge mechanism. Efficient nursing supervision and efficient housekeeping prepare a room for re-use with a minimum of delay.

With the best in personnel and techniques assumed, the ability to make the most use of hospital beds is dependent on the number of single rooms, the number of two-, three- and four-bed rooms and the larger wards. The hospital with a relatively large obstetrical service may, during some months of the year, have all obstetrical beds filled most of the time. At other times the occupancy may be less than 50 per cent. This fact must be considered before making any estimate of maximum bed occupancy.

I have seen a 100-bed unit of single rooms with 95 patients day after day, all receiving good care.

The experience of the hospital with which I am associated is that anything over 85 per cent occupancy is too much to handle. Eighty per cent is good; 75 per cent, a little more comfortable. The hospital has at the moment 144 adult beds and 25 bassinets. There are 49 single rooms, two 10-bed wards (one for men and one for women), 14 two-bed semi-private rooms and 47 beds in four- and three-bed rooms.

To sum up, the determination of a hospital's patient capacity is dependent upon the quality of its administration, the number of private rooms, the number of rooms of more than one bed and the number of larger wards. The elasticity of a hospital plan of smaller bed units is obvious, and this is necessary when the demands are heavy.—DR. GERALD F. HOUSER, director, The Faulkner Hospital, Boston.

Rapid turnover of patients increases unused beds

OUR HOSPITAL was designed for 60 beds although we now operate with a 92-bed maximum capacity. We consider capacity an average utilization of 65 per cent even though our annual statistics consistently indicates an average of 70 to 75 per cent.

There are many factors, not entirely peculiar to our own situation, that limit capacity. The rapid turnover of patients, promoted by early ambulation, "miracle drugs" and other advancements in medical science, necessitates a greater percentage of unused beds to make possible the more frequent, complete clearing of rooms and equipment. Also, the increase in patient load beyond that originally planned proportionately increases maintenance cost and at times causes reduction in available rooms for patients.

The fluctuation in the number of patients from day to day and from month to month is a major factor in reducing occupancy percentage. Patient census fluctuates as much as 60 patients within 36 hours. Admissions vary as much as 200 patients from month to month.

The segregation of patients for specific services limits capacity to less than 100 per cent of maximum. Surveys of various units for obstetrical, surgical and medical services and for white and for colored patients reveal some units operating at maximum capacity while others have few, if any, patients. A more flexible building design would have made possible utilization of empty beds in one area by incorporating them into other areas for needed services.—R. C. BARNES, manager, Eliza Coffee Memorial Hospital, Florence, Ala.

Fixed appropriation budget allows 85% occupancy

THE ADMINISTRATIVE interpretation of percentage occupancy for the government hospital operating on a fixed appropriation is somewhat different from that of a voluntary hospital. The Denver General Hospital has a bed capacity of 495, and the budget is projected to provide minimum personal coverage for an occupancy of 85 per cent.

This means that our operation is fairly comfortable in terms of availability of beds and service to patients at occupancies that approximate this percentage. Should the occupancy rise higher, it becomes an increasingly difficult task to meet the patient needs, even though there may be plenty of bed space available. This is because we operate on a fixed annual appropriation and do not debit patient income to the operating appropriations account. Conversely, when the occupancy figure drops below 85 per cent, the staffing problem eases up.

There is, of course, obligation to the taxpayer to create any savings that may be effected through a reduction of utilization of hospital beds. It is my belief, however, that in a hospital of our type, occupancy must drop to the extent that it is possible to close an entire patient care unit before appreciable savings can be made. The distribution of patients is such, though, particularly in a teaching unit, that it is necessary to drop the census nearly the equivalent of two times the bed capacity of the unit to be closed before it is possible to close the unit. This means that the per diem cost will steadily increase as the census drops from 85 to 75 per cent occupancy and will increase even more as the census falls below that figure if no patient care units are closed.—DR. JAMES P. DIXON, director, Denver General Hospital.

Elective surgery admissions, wards limit occupancy

CAPACITY? At Municipal Hospital, Virginia, Minn., which has 100 beds and 25 bassinets, we consider approximately 75 per cent occupancy as capacity. Some review of our past year's experience will be necessary to explain this capacity. During the past year our pediatrics division had a 56 per cent occupancy and our maternity department had a 48 per cent occupancy whereas the medical and surgical departments had an occupancy of 88 per cent.

Items that enter into the per cent of occupancy for medical and surgical units often involve the question of a large ward that necessitates the admission of patients of just one sex. If 50 per cent of that large ward were vacant and patients to be admitted were of the opposite sex, those beds would not be available for the patients to be admitted. That is one of the reasons why I feel that rooms with not more than four beds should be used in new construction or in rearranging present hospitals.

Another experience that we have had in our medical and surgical departments is that patients for elective surgery are admitted Sunday afternoon or Monday morning for surgery early in the week. We have also noticed that quite a few of these patients will be discharged

Internal revenue requests

Can the Bureau of Internal Revenue force the hospital to provide a list of names and addresses of doctors' patients?

The Association's Council on Government Relations recently concurred in the following:

1. Names and addresses of doctors' patients are not privileged. The hospital ultimately could be forced to provide this information by subpoena.

2. The hospital is not legally required to provide names and addresses of doctors' patients to internal revenue agents simply on request, but it might be poor public relations to refuse without good reason.

3. If possible, the hospital should avoid the responsibility of deciding whether or not to release names and addresses of doctors' patients. When asked for such information, the hospital should request written permission of the doctor concerned. If the doctor refuses to give written permission to disclose such information, the board of trustees should advise the administrator whether or not to release it anyway or wait for subpoena.

4. In any event, the hospital should endeavor to avoid a situation that might require it to do a great deal of work compiling lists of information, and this is probably best accomplished by demonstrating an attitude of willingness to cooperate within limits of clerical ability and the interests of patients.—ALBERT V. WHITEHALL.

Group nursing

What is the system of group private-duty nursing, and what are its advantages?

At the time of the extreme nurse shortage during the war, group private-duty nursing in hospitals was a promotion of hospitals and the nursing groups. As a result of this practice a substantial number of nurses doing private-duty work transferred to hospital employment, and hospital nursing staffs thus were augmented. One private-duty nurse took care of two, three or four patients. The fees received from the patients were proportionately reduced, but it was to the advantage of the private-duty nurse, since her aggregate income for the day's work exceeded the fee that she would normally charge to one patient.

Group private-duty nursing still seems to be a customary practice in a large number of hospitals. Current statistics on nurses active in their profession indicate an increase in the total number of nurses practicing, with a far greater increase in those employed full time in hospitals than in the private-duty group, but with some increase in both. In many urban communities there still seems to be a shortage of nurses for private duty work.

One development from the institution of group nursing by private-duty or special nurses is the permanent organization of group nursing by nurses of the full-time hospital staff. The management of two, three or four patients by the special nurse proved to the satisfaction of hospitals that the regular full-time staff could apply the same principle in its organization in the routine care of patients. The institution of group practice by the fulltime staff may or may not have reduced the need for special-duty nurses. It seems logical that group nursing by both the special-duty and the fulltime staff will continue and will be utilized a great deal more as economic conditions deteriorate. Apparently, as long as hospital patients can afford the luxury and the attention of a special-duty nurse in addition to the general staff, private duty will continue to flourish.

At the present time in many communities the general-duty nurse as a fulltime hospital employee has a higher monthly or annual income than the private-duty nurse. This is because the general-duty nurse works regularly and the private-duty nurse works an average of 15 to 18 days each month. The differential between monthly and annual salaries of the fulltime staff nurse and the daily rate charged by the private-duty nurse has narrowed over a period of years and is not substantial.

One further development which grew out of group nursing is the organization of what the nursing profession refers to now as the comprehensive nursing team, giving total care to a patient or a group of patients. This team includes one or two professional nurses, one or two practical nurses and several trained ward aides or nurse aides. The team, which is in the charge of an experienced professional nurse, organizes itself so that the various functions of nursing care are performed by them in relation to the training. In this manner the team assumes complete responsibility for several patients and provides the various types of nursing care needed on a comprehensive basis. This type of organization within the hospital nursing staff has, in addition to many other advantages, that of some economy. —DR. CHARLES T. DOLEZAL.

Displaced persons

In our hospital we have as a patient a displaced person who is unable to pay his bill. Because he has not been in this country long enough and is not a citizen, the county will not be responsible for him. Do we have any recourse?

When displaced persons are admitted to this country from Europe or elsewhere, it is customary for relatives or friends to assure the admitting authorities that such displaced persons will not become public charges. According to the Displaced Person Commission in Washington, however, that obligation of the sponsors is moral, not legal. Even a moral obligation, though, should carry considerable weight, and the hospital should be after five days, thus causing a decrease in the census for Saturday and Sunday. There is nothing that can be done regarding this type of occupancy; so we must accept certain reductions in the per cent for the annual figure.

In the planning of new hospitals, the maternity section should be planned in such a way that beds that are assigned to that division could, with just a small amount of rearranging, be assigned to a medical or surgical unit that could be on the same floor. That is one of the projects under discussion at our hospital at this time. As noted above, our maternity section has had a 48 per cent occupancy with just a very small decrease in the number of babies being born in the community; but with modern techniques and early discharge of patients, we have found our maternity division reducing in patient days. If these extra beds could be utilized for medical and surgical care, we would have a more comfortable situation.

For the pediatrics department, which showed an average occupancy of 56 per cent, we are unable to advance any type of a solution. Because this department is equipped for children, we would be unable to convert it for adult use without major rebuilding.

In a hospital the size of the Virginia Memorial Hospital, a higher annual per cent of occupancy can be maintained through the building of wards no larger than four beds and the planning in advance for the expansion or reduction in size of a maternity unit.—JOHN M. ALEXON, administrator, Municipal Hospital, Virginia, Minn.

Physical, staff shortages influencing factors

SPRINGFIELD (Vt.) Hospital has 50 beds, exclusive of nursery bassinets. The percentage of occupancy for 1949 was 72. While all beds are now available for use of inpatients, we are very much understaffed for graduate staff nurses and adequately trained laboratory technicians. The physical set-up of the x-ray department and of the laboratory should be expanded. It is these handicaps that influence the occupancy. — N. GERTRUDE SHARPE, R. The hospital and collective bargaining

J. RUSSELL CLARK AND ANNETTE AULD

HOSPITALS SEEM to have a false sense of security about their inpregnability against unions. So often when the possibility of unions is discussed, hospital people dismiss the topic with the remark, "Don't you know it is illegal to strike against a hospital? We don't have to worry about unions."

In 1937, thanks to the determination and leadership of one hospital, strikes against hospitals were ruled unlawful by a state supreme court. The Taft-Hartley Act of 1947 in section 2, paragraph 2, states that voluntary hospitals are exempt from responsibility under the labor law and therefore are not required to recognize unions or bargain collectively with them. But does this leave us immune to unionization and strikes? Can hospital management sit back, passively cling to the protection of a law and say it cannot happen here? If so, administrators and personnel executives may be left in the same position as the complacent French who said the Germans would never break through the Maginot Line.

The courts will declare a hospital strike illegal should it occur, but that is too late; the damage will have been done. A court order will not modify the injustices that caused the workers to strike, nor will it restore their confidence in management or develop a spirit of cooperation with the administrative staff. Judicial vindication will not relieve a hospital of the task of caring for patients, minus vital employees, during a strike; nor will it restore the public's confidence in its impeccable quality of patient care.

Hospital personnel specialists have a primary responsibility for developing in management a realistic attitude toward the problem of unions. Tested management techniques in dealing with organized labor are part of the skills the personnel executive must have to carry forth the industrial relations function of his job. These skills cover three areas: (1) The personnel specialist and management should have a realistic program for avoiding unionization in any of the hospital departments. (2) In the face of a union drive, the personnel executive should know what actions he can expect from union leaders and members and how management should proceed. (3) If the union organizing drive is successful, then the administrative staff must know the techniques of collective bargaining.

First, how can we avoid unions, and why do they start? A prominent New York hospital personnel executive set the stage for this question in his study of handling grievances. He coined a phrase which summarizes the situation. "A grievance is a gripe which has been let go unanswered." When gripes are ignored and continue to multiply, men get angry and unite to exert mass pressures. Public relations has a cardinal principle which is applicable to personnel relations. "Do the right thing before you have to do the right thing." Handle employee relations with distinction, and there is less possibility of a union watchdog trying to call the plays.

Unionism is a mass social movement with more than just security as its goal. It also appeals to the fighting instinct which is part of all men. Unions permit a release from frustration which, if blocked, will cause an explosion.

Employees need to identify themselves with a cause — what better battle cry is there than "Save Lives." How can hospital administration harness their enthusiasm into constructive challenge? It can be done through the personnel tool of communication! The word should be passed up and down and across. What is the score? Are we whittling down the deficit? Has the research department discovered a new treatment? What citations have we received? More important than reporting conditions, we should listen. Where can we cut costs? How can we make patients more comfortable? Why do nurses get four weeks vacation and porters only two?

We have entered a new collective era. Unions can be avoided, but nowhere can management avoid group discussions and organization. Continued unilateral action on the part of hospital administration — with human nature being what it is—will only serve to precipitate the organization of unions. Advanced managements with extensive unionization of employees now see the need for changing the emphasis from collective bargaining to collective planning. Through the medium of consultative management we can provide employees with an emotional release and cultivate the expression of initiative and resourcefulness in informed workers.

Many employees join unions because unions provide an outlet for activity. These people become committee members, hold office, attend conferences, and in some cases are given community posts which are honorary and important in nature. Previously their jobs have given them no such outlet for personal action.

CONFIDENCE OF MANAGEMENT

There is one key point we must remember. Employees will select committee organization in preference to union organization only if they know they have the confidence of management. At The Brooklyn Hospital we make the following statement at the conclusion of our grievance procedure and insist that all supervisors abide by it at all times:

"You may be confident that in no instance will you be the victim of retaliation or discrimination because you have had the interest to make dissatisfactions known to the administration."

Ideas such as these are neither original nor startling. The important question is are we using them to the best advantage, are they used in every department in every situation? Dr. Leighton of the American Red Cross has made a wise comment: "The striking thing about this new science of human relations is not the vast areas of what is unknown — which many are fond of emphasizing—but the degree to which what is known is not used."

Union activity arises sometimes before the personnel philosophy has seeped through the entire organization; or one hospital may be singled out by an external group for a piloting job in organization. There is no standard procedure for management to follow when it is faced with a union drive. It must survey the individual situation and proceed on the basis considered most appropriate to it. The most judicious approach is to avoid doing under pressure what would not be done under normal conditions.

No matter how disturbing the knowledge that activity exists may be, an outward appearance of calmness and confidence must be maintained. Psychologically the cards are with management. The overt act of calling a strike must be taken by the union, and the employees are forced to defend their action before the public. By nature a hospital strike could be a ruthless act ending in the death of a seriously ill patient. It is not just passing an inconvenience on to a paying customer. Few established national unions want to risk the public indignation that would be aroused at such action.

When the administrator learns there is union activity in the hospital, he should immediately call together all executives and supervisors. The immediate purpose of this meeting is to assess the real strength of the movement, familiarize the staff with applicable labor law, and guide them in their behavior and attitude toward the organizing employees. No menacing actions or bitter words should be used by the management, and no personal hostility should be displayed. Because commitments can be made only by the administrator or his representative, the subordinate staff must refrain from expressing the hospital stand. Above all else, the administrator must caution supervisors to keep their poise.

First among the sore points a union probes are wage rates, but probing does not stop there. Unions have learned, through long dealings with grievances, those incidents in the day's work that employees find irritating. Campaign material will promise employees that joining up can correct matters such as the lack of a generous sick-leave policy, inequities in vacation allowances and irregularities and delay in promotions.

If working conditions are in good order, employees will diagnose accurately the chronic "beefer" and spot the fiction in imaginary grievances. If personnel policies are not in proper order, adjustments should not be attempted once the union is on the doorstep. Such adjustments are likely to backfire. Experience shows that employees consider such changes a by-product of the union's activity, even if that is not the intention of management. The union will point to these gains as a preview of what it can wrangle once organized.

ONE EXAMPLE

Let us look at the experience of a large eastern hospital in 1936 and 1937. This case is one of the most extreme in violence and terrorism, but it shows the spirit of irresponsibility one hospital had to grapple with when faced with a wildcat union.

In June 1936 three members of the Hospital Employees' Union, C.I.O., met with the hospital management to request recognition of the union and a 25 per cent increase in pay for employees. Such recognition would negate management's right to hire or discharge without the consent of the union. Management refused the demands.

Almost a year passed, during which the union threatened strikes and engaged in minor acts of violence such as breaking open files and tampering with minutes of meetings. An eight-hour strike in March 1937 resulted in the stopping of elevator service, locking up of nonstriking employees and such general confusion to the operation of the hospital that the administrative staff received police protection. Disturbers were arrested.

Picketing and another strike were attempted again two days later. The hospital and the business offices of trustees were picketed, typical placards reading: "Inexperienced and untrained scabs are endangering lives of patients," and "Consider the patient—don't endanger him by sending him to —— Hospital."

The hospital began litigation, with the support and encouragement of all local voluntary hospitals, to test the union's right to strike. In August 1937 the state supreme court ruled:

"Whatever may be right or wrong in the present wage controversy, the health of the community may not be made subservient thereto. Acts which would not be unlawful under ordinary conditions become unlawful when linked with a purpose inimical to the welfare of the community."

Other more recent and less extreme examples of organizing activity in hospitals are useful in illustrating the scope and methods of union operations.

During 1946 a building construction trades council maintenance organization, A.F. of L., organized a group of hospital maintenance employees. The hospital's refusal to recognize the employees' right to collective bargaining led to a court ruling that bars hospital strikes but permits picketing.

Another large hospital, in an Atlantic Coast city, entered into a weak agreement, from the union viewpoint, with a local of the State, County, and Municipal Workers of America, C.I.O., in November 1945. Now expired and unrenewed, the contract contained no union security clause. It permitted employees to submit grievances independently and not through union channels. It specifically guaranteed the union would not strike, sit down, slow down or stop work.

In November 1948 about 400 of the nonprofessional employees of a midwestern hospital struck. They demanded only that the Hospital Employees Union, A.F. of L., be recognized as their bargaining agent and that they be granted a closed shop. Physicians, interns and nurses shifted to the kitchens, laundry and elevators, and many volunteers offered their services.

A New England hospital experienced an attempt to organize its building service employees in 1946. The state labor board ruled against the union, saying that it held no jurisdiction since the hospital was a nonprofit institution.

ASSESSING UNION STRENGTH

Faced with a union drive, management must attempt to assess the strength of the movement. In many of the cases mentioned above, examination showed that the organized group had really signed up far fewer members than they had claimed. For a group to be recognized as a bargaining unit, it must have the support of a majority of the group it wishes to bargain for. For example, if 300 of a total 1,000 full-time employees banded into a union, they could not be considered an appropriate group for hospital-wide bargaining. If 250 of these persons represented 80 per cent of the dietary department, however, those 250 could be considered an appropriate group for bargaining on dietary conditions.

The present extent of unionization in hospitals is very limited. In 1947, a series of incidents seemed to indicate that several national unions were planning to organize hospital employees. At that time Ann Saunders, personnel specialist of the American Hospital Association, estimated that approximately 55 hospitals had union contracts. The annual salary survey of the Association, released in October 1949, reported that 81 hospitals, representing 3.2 of the reporting hospitals, now have unions. Minnesota reported the largest number of contracts, with California second. Hospitals with union contracts are concentrated mainly in the west, north, central and Pacific regions. While the number of unionized hospitals has not decreased, organizing attempts definitely declined in 1949.

The American Hospital Association requested exemption of hospitals under the Taft-Hartley Act, and this exemption is definitely stated in the law. The 1949 labor relations bill, which was reported out of committee and defeated, did not exempt hospitals. The Association feels that hospitals should continue to request exemption under proposed labor laws.

Technically speaking, the whole problem of union recognition is antecedent to collective bargaining. Willingness to bargain implies recognition of the union as the representative of employees. At the same time, almost every hospital employs collective bargaining techniques to some degree. Graduate nurses are one example. These groups are supported by the personnel policy recommendations of their respective district nursing associations. It is imperative that personnel executives and administrators inform themselves in the tested techniques of management strategy in collective bargaining procedures. If they do not, individual hospitals will fall victim to granting excessive conditions to professional groups or will develop tense personnel situations because of unsatisfactory handling of professional group demands.

MANAGEMENT TEAM

The first major thing for management to do when confronted with a collective bargaining situation is to select the management team. After this come the actual negotiations.

In selecting negotiators, the need for continuity of personnel on the team is understood. The membership for formal union collective bargaining should include the chairman and two assistants chosen from second level executives. Usually the personnel director and two line persons, such as an assistant director or chief dietitian, are chosen. In this way the team reflects both management staff and line point of view on issues. All members of the team should be thoroughly familiar with hospital policy, organization, procedures and problems.

Experienced negotiators advise that the top executive director be eliminated from the team. He need not be tied down by prolonged negotiations which take him away from important operating problems. His absence from the team also will eliminate situations where a final decision might be made in conference, although many hospitals are organized in such a way that final agreements can be made only with the approval of the board of trustees. All agreements made in conference should be tentative, subject to management approval. This gives management time for reflection, appraisal and outside discussion of unexpected situations.

Department heads and supervisors who have close contact with employees also should be eliminated from the team, because their job of dealing with employees later would be made more difficult if there were prejudice against their stand in negotiations.

The job of the supervisor is to interpret and administer rather than negotiate the agreement. He should be kept informed on the progress of negotiations and held in reserve as a consultant. When the final agreement is signed he should be educated in the contract terms.

The usual pattern of negotiations consists of: (1) Presentation of the union demands; (2) analysis of the demands by management; (3) preparation of the hospital's counterproposals; (4) bargaining, and (5) writing the agreement.

The first meeting with employee representatives is devoted to an appraisal of their demands. As the demands are presented, they should be fully explained. Demands ought to be presented in writing, and management should find out exactly what the proposals involve if the wording of any clause is not clear.

Management's prime concern at the initial meeting is to determine what is the core of the union program. It must sift the wheat from the chaff and separate the real issues—those for which the union is prepared to fight—from the ones which are thrown in mainly for collective bargaining purposes. In their first proposal the employee representatives will ask for more than they expect to get, and their demands should be regarded in this light.

The first meeting should be concluded with arrangements for a further meeting at which the hospital will present its views on the demands and make a written counterproposal.

A DOCTOR pitches in and helps carry food for the kitchen during a midwestern strike.

In the intermission between meetings, management must work at top speed to analyze the union or group demands. The full financial implication of the program is determined by figuring the annual cost of a wage increase, liberalized vacations, overtime, extra holidays or other demands. The total figure should be compared with the amount the hospital could budget in light of the current financial conditions.

If the hospital is prepared to spend some funds for personnel improvements, the next problem is to determine where it would be best spent. Which demands will be met? The criteria used in considering the relative merits of demands are:

1. What has the most employee appeal? A wage increase is the most obvious.
2. Will it improve labor supply?
3. Will it increase production?
4. Is this demand the result of a poor practice which obviously should be corrected?
5. In comparison with other hospitals in the area, is this one behind the majority? For example, if most hospitals recognize 10 legal holidays and this one recognizes only seven, this would seem to be a proper concession.

Because management's counterproposal must be defended in cross fire, demands that correct poor practices or have wide employee appeal usually are the wisest to select as the ones that might be acceptable.

Preparatory to drawing up counterproposals, management determines its general objectives in negotiations. It must decide what it wants in the way of employee concessions or revisions of clauses and practices.

The board of trustees has the ultimate decision as to how far the hospital will go on monetary issues. Before making a decision, board members will want the advice of the negotiating team, which must defend their decision. The trustees must establish policy on questions of union security such as closed shop, maintenance of membership and arbitration. Line supervisors should be consulted on the nonmonetary provisions such as seniority, leave of absence, bulletin boards, grievance and transfer procedures. This is the stage at which the trustees determine the limit beyond which the hospital will not make concessions.

General objectives set by top management must be understood by the negotiating team. It must know what the hospital is ready to grant, what it will concede to avoid a strike, and what it will not concede, strike or no strike. The negotiating team then is ready to implement the adopted policy through collective bargaining. Members of the team are well briefed in their objectives, supported by information, data and arguments.

Since an essential ingredient of bargaining is a little haggling, the hospital's counterproposal should not be drafted as a final offer. It should not go as far as management is prepared to go in meeting the employees' demands. Neither side of the bargaining table expects its initial offer to be the final agreement. Negotiations are a fluid, dynamic process, requiring flexibility on the part of negotiators and requiring room for adjustment in management's position as negotiations progress.

FIRST COUNTERPROPOSAL

The first counterproposal usually grants demands where existing practice is clearly out of line with well established area or hospital-wide practice. It may contain concessions on demands preserving an area for bargaining within the limits previously determined. For example, if employee representatives ask for 10 holidays, management may offer seven.

Mention is not made of a general wage increase in the first proposal. Because of its broad employee appeal this is the best trading point management has. Settlement on other issues will effect the amount of increase to be granted.

Routine practices, such as the laundering of uniforms, can be omitted in order to negate the assumption that this privilege continues as a matter of course. Later the hospital can demand a counterbalance to include it.

In addition to offering less than it is prepared to give, the hospital should ask for more than it expects to get. Collective bargaining is not a one-way street. Management may demand that inequitable situations be corrected by writing into its proposal clauses that fix employee responsibility for better performance. Among these could be penalties for absence or tardiness. Any provisions that will strengthen the agreement from the management's point of view are presented.

Bargaining begins with the mailing of the hospital's first counterproposal to the employees' representatives so that they will be prepared to discuss them. Main points of difference now are apparent. As negotiations get under way, each side will attempt to center discussion around its own proposals. Hospital management, even though it is prepared to concede on one of its own proposals, must let the burden of showing inadequacies fall on the union. Employees respect, rather than hold in contempt, a management that bargains astutely, sharply, firmly, honestly and straight from the shoulder. The best defense is a strong offense.

Collective bargaining involves psychological as well as factual, economic and legal considerations. Negotiators can well afford to follow the rules of human behavior used by diplomats in international treaties and by horse traders in the open market. These rules are:

1. Be honest — tell the truth. Management cannot practice deception. It must support its position by honest reasoning and accurate facts. Management's "word" must be respected. Exposed deception is a potent weapon for the union.

2. Be firm—with a smile.

3. Be calm. A powerful weapon in management's favor is a confident, united team showing no anxiety over the outcome of negotiations or fear of a strike. Management should give the impression that everything is under control.

4. Do not be provoked. Management should show no irritation, should practice self-control despite the provocation offered by the other side, and should avoid random outbursts. A display of anger is permissible occasionally to win a point, but it should always be under control.

5. No name calling. An employee representative who is insulting or abusive should not be accepted. If a hospital negotiator insists on being emphatic, he should vent his wrath on a nonemployee union representative, but he should select the cause of action carefully.

DEMAND PROOF

6. Question the evidence. Management should demand proof of the other side's broad factual statements. Challenging the opposition to produce substantiation of data when it is unable to do so is most effective. Timing is important. Overuse of this technique will degenerate into baiting and frayed tempers.

7. Do not be arbitrary or legalistic. A reasonable basis for opinions should be presented. Employees do not understand legal or technical arguments. Management's position should be related to employee interests whenever possible.

8. Time all moves carefully. The timing of the presentation of material is an important art. Quite often, like the proverbial novice teacher who gives his whole course in the first lecture, the inexperienced negotiator will make the mistake of blurting out all his facts and arguments early in the bargaining process. Good timing involves holding most factual arguments well in reserve until the bargaining settles down and the real issues become apparent. Certain information can be used to best advantage by being held still further in reserve for future rebuttal purposes. No formula can be cited to simplify this problem of timing, but the sensitive and alert negotiator will find that with experience his skill increases.

STRATEGIC RECESSES

9. Take advantage of intermissions. After a prolonged, heated discussion of a disputed issue, a short intermission sometimes will provide an ideal cooling off period. Recesses provide time to appraise and discuss new proposals, to decide whether or not to accept certain proposals or to formulate counterproposals. A clever tactic is to suggest a recess for members of the opposition to discuss a matter freely among themselves. If one man is obstinate, the others may sell him on compromise privately.

10. Keep employees and public informed. They should get accurate information regarding the progress of negotiations and should be told the hospital's position and the reasons for it. Letters, circulars and newspaper releases may be necessary to correct misinformation distributed by the union. Only facts should be stated.

11. Be attentive. Management should listen as well as talk. It is better to let the opposition blow off steam in the collective bargaining conferences than in the union meeting hall.

12. Quid pro quo — what for what. Contingent or tentative proposals may be useful. Management should insist on union concessions in return for hospital concessions. The withdrawal of a hospital proposal should be tied to the withdrawal of a union demand or the acceptance of another hospital proposal.

13. Make final offers final. No offer should be tagged the hospital's "final offer" unless it is the last and best one, beyond which management will not go. Careless and injudicious protestation by a negotiator that he has "gone the limit," only to be followed in short order by even more liberal proposals, can seriously prejudice the satisfactory disposition of many demands. The opposition will doubt management's sincerity and also will believe that further concessions may be granted. The employee representative may be afraid to accept any offer for fear the hospital might make a better one.

14. Complete settlement. It should be made clear that the hospital is not obligated by any agreements reached during negotiations until a complete agreement is executed by both parties.

15. Do not break off negotiations. The opposition should be allowed to make the announcement that further negotiations will accomplish nothing. Management should remain willing to bargain.

The concluding step in collective bargaining is the writing of the actual agreement. In phrasing a specific clause, the final choice is just as much a matter of collective bargaining as is the negotiation of the basic intent and meaning of the clause. Elegance of expression must be subordinated to simplicity and clearness. This fact is too often overlooked by negotiators who suffer from pride of authorship to such an extent that proposed changes in wording cause long and bitter argument. Although a firm stand is required in opposing the deliberate or inadvertent introduction of "sleepers" or trick phrases that alter the agreed-upon meaning of a clause, this is probably the only circumstance that fully justifies rigid devotion to one's own wording.

Perhaps a good test of the clarity of any clause might be to ask, "Is this clause not only clear enough to be understood, but so clear that it cannot be misunderstood by any employee or a third party who knows little of the background?"

Attempts at unionization in Southern California

JOHN H. GORBY

TWENTY-FIVE thousand dues-paying members by Christmas—that was the goal announced on January 27, 1948, by an international representative of the Building Service Employees, A. F. of L. The place was Scripps Memorial Hospital, La Jolla, San Diego County. The international representative was seconded by the secretary-treasurer of Building Service Employees Local 102, which presented to the hospital a set of demands including coverage under the Federal Insurance Contributions Act (social security).

The governing board of the hospital refused the union demands. A nonprofit organization, it could not comply with the social security demand even if it desired to. Investigation proved that only two employees had signed with the union instead of the 75 claimed. A picket line was thrown around the hospital. The central labor council refused to sanction the "strike," and the picket line was withdrawn after 40 days.

Union strategy developed new techniques. An abortive attempt to unionize the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital, Los Angeles, in 1946, disclosed that the metropolitan hospitals were too alert, too well established with sound, progressive personnel policies to permit the seed of unionism to grow in any area of discontent. Union leaders, rebuffed, decided to apply the tactics of modern war—bypass strong points and attack the less well-defended outposts on the perimeter. Plans were laid and the union worked hard, increasing dues and special assessments to build up its war chest. This training and development period dated from 1946 to the January 1948 action at Scripps Hospital.

Hospital administrators in the area were not diverted by the lull. Through the aggressive leadership of the Hospital Council of Southern California with its 92 hospital members, area-wide personnel surveys were made. Everyone worked hard to put his house in order. The prevailing 48-hour work week was reduced to 40 or 44 hours. Inequities were corrected and fringe benefits extended as rapidly as finances permitted.

The union was working hard also. Its prestige had suffered. It was recuperating and replenishing its finances. At 7 A.M. Monday, February 6, 1950, the entire staff of nurses at the Redlands Community Hospital resigned en masse. The employees stated it was not a strike but a protest, with a contract as the basic demand.

Administrator E. L. Jury was successful in persuading the staff to return to work until the results of an area-wide personnel survey were in. This was completed March 20 and indicated an overall rise in the wage structure of hospitals in the Southern California area. Workers at Redlands immediately were granted a salary adjustment as had been promised by the board prior to the action of February 6. The demand for a contract was ignored. At Redlands the union had been put to little expense, and there was no picket line.

Action then was shifted back to San Diego County. On February 18, the local union organizer requested a state labor conciliator to assist his local in meeting with the administrator of the Mercy Hospital in San Diego. There was no strike, no dispute over wages. The sole issue was union recognition. The hospital refused to discuss a controversy that did not exist. A picket line was thrown around Mercy Hospital on March 7, and an additional picket line around the Quintard Hospital in San Diego at the end of the month.

Institutional members of the Hospital Conference of San Diego County turned over their labor problems to a labor relations counsel after the establishment of pickets. The union has been informed that when it has a majority of the total employees of the member hospitals of the conference, as determined by a secret election, and when such majority desires to have the Building Service Employees, A. F. of L., represent them, then the matter of union recognition will be discussed. Each member hospital gave the local conference its power of attorney to act. The conference then engaged labor relations counsel to represent it.

An important factor in this four-year campaign has been that the Building Service Employees Union actually has signed up a few registered nurses at the hospitals. Hospital administrators in San Diego report there has been no unrest over wages or working conditions. The sole point has been one of unionism.

Dr. W. W. Stadel, superintendent of San Diego County Hospital and president of the conference, reports that employee morale is high in the area. Several administrators have received voluntary expressions of satisfaction with the operation of employee councils, a self-governing feature in San Diego County. It is difficult to believe the union will be able to convince some 375 employees that paying dues and assessments constitutes the best method of adjusting wage and working conditions.

Learning hospital accounting by correspondence course

J. MARVIN SIPE, C.P.A.

THE NATION'S first correspondence course in "Hospital Accounting and Office Procedures" is currently being offered by the University of Houston (Texas). Although less than two years old, the course already has had 90 enrollments and a number of graduates. Each graduate receives a certificate from the university plus four semester hours of college credit.

Full endorsement to this new training program has been given by the Texas Hospital Association and the Texas Association of Hospital Accountants.

When the announcement of plans for such a course came out in the newsletter of a hospital supply company, the university immediately received more than a hundred inquiries. More than five times this number have been received since. University officials have been amazed by the interest shown in a hospital accounting correspondence course. The University of Houston offers more than 30 courses by correspondence, and this course is the most popular of all, having one-third of the total enrollments.

The course is designed to be completed in four to six months. A student normally could expect to accomplish this by spending approximately six hours a week on assignments.

Each assignment, of which there are 18, is divided into three parts: (1) Reading material, (2) theory questions, and (3) laboratory problems.

Mr. Sipe is a professor of accounting and is the head of the Department of Accounting, University of Houston (Texas).

Students are instructed to go over the reading material first, until they feel sure that they have a thorough understanding of it; then to demonstrate this understanding by writing out answers to the theoretical questions and short problems, and working out the more extensive laboratory problems. The completed assignments are sent back to the university for grading.

Six accounting instructors and one secretary grade the papers and handle correspondence. Since registrations are limited to 15 for each instructor, personal attention can be given to each student.

The two required textbooks for the course are: (1) "Handbook on Accounting, Statistics and Business Office Procedures for Hospitals," published by the American Hospital Association early in 1950, and (2) "Accounting, Statistics and Business Office Procedures for Hospitals," written by Charles G. Roswell and published by the United Hospital Fund of New York in 1946.

During the past 18 months, the 90 students who have enrolled have included clerks, nurses, bookkeepers, superintendents, business managers, assistant executives and administrators from hospitals all over the country. Twenty-six of the 48 states and the territory of Hawaii have been represented in the student body.

The gratifying interest shown in this program has been ample proof to its initiators that the course will be of continuing value in promoting better and more uniform hospital accounting.

An antibiotic room can conserve nursing hours

MARTHA E. GRAFF, R.N.

THE TWO SUBJECTS most discussed by the public and the medical profession are the nursing shortage and the wonder drugs. In March 1947 a group of nurses at the Christ Hospital, Cincinnati, had the opportunity to observe that too many precious nursing hours were spent in preparing and administering the antibiotics. Centralizing of the antibiotics was suggested, an antibiotic room was provided and 24 nursing hours a day were saved.

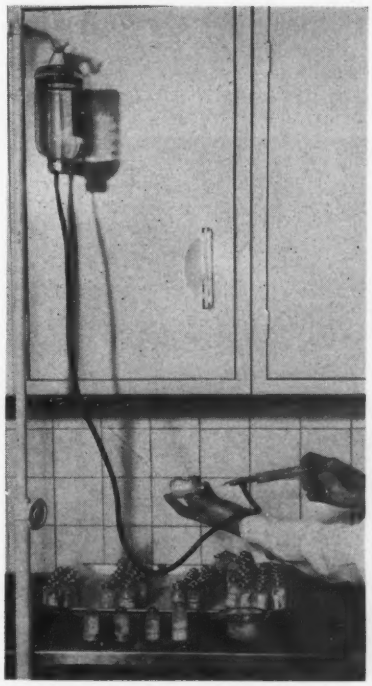
The Christ Hospital, a general hospital with a capacity of 400 beds, has a central supply service, limited to hospital equipment only, and a pharmacy separate from the nursing department. With these physical conditions and departmental divisions, it was necessary to establish, in the department of nursing, an antibiotic room that received its drugs from the pharmacy and dispensed them to each ward unit in a form suitable for administration.

This "penicillin room" is approximately the size of a patient's single room and contains a cabinet sink, electric refrigerator and wall metal cabinets for storing supplies. Counters 18 inches wide, covered with inlaid linoleum, run along three sides of the room. A bulletin board to display current publications of antibiotics, a small metal filing cabinet for keeping records of all patients receiving the drugs, and a small metal cart to transport the syringes to the autoclave comprise most of the physical aspects of this room.

All sodium penicillin is prepared in stock bottles of four standard strengths—20,000 units, 40,000 units, 50,000 units and 100,000 units per cubic centimeter. A different colored label is used for each strength. This label specifies the dilution and leaves a space for the date of preparation. Streptomycin and dihydrostreptomycin also are mixed in standard strengths of 125 mgms. or 500 mgms. per c.c. and marked by special labels giving dilution and date of mixing.

For diluting these drugs, a 500-c.c. bottle of normal saline solution is used, to which a piece of intravenous tubing is attached. At the other end of this tube, a T-shaped, special three-way metal adaptor joins the intravenous tubing at the stem of the T, while the 10-c.c. used for mixing connects at one end of the cross bar and the needle at the other. Recovering penicillin with this equipment is a pleasant streamlined procedure.

The 2-c.c. lock-type syringes used for administering the drugs are classified into two types: (1) The #19 gage, one-and-one-half inch needle, called a procaine syringe since it is used to administer all of the types of procaine penicillin, and (2) the #22 gage, one-and-one-half inch needle used for all sodium penicillin and streptomycin and called a regular syringe.



T-SHAPED three-way adaptor and intravenous tubing aid in diluting antibiotics.

The syringes are washed with a special commercial cleansing powder and are allowed to dry before being placed in metal steri-tubes for autoclaving.

Orders are filled after the drugs are mixed and labeled. A box, to which the aqueous solutions of penicillin and streptomycin have been added, is labeled for each division and stored in the refrigerator to be ready for the next morning. From these orders the number of regular and procaine syringes that will be needed for administering the drugs is determined. A rubber band is placed around the steri-tubes of the procaine syringes to distinguish them from the regulars. Syringes then are placed in boxes labeled for each division and kept on the counter to be ready for distribution. To these boxes are added any of the oil preparations that have been ordered.

The medicine nurse from each division reports to the antibiotic division between 8:30 A.M. and 10:00 A.M. and receives the 24-hour supply of penicillin and streptomycin and the syringes that were prepared the afternoon previously. Any alterations in the order are made at this time. This fresh supply is exchanged for used syringes, needles, steri-tubes or any drug left on hand.

The head nurse in each division makes out a yellow penicillin card for the following morning for patients in her division who are to receive antibiotics. By 3 o'clock in the afternoon, each division has sent an order sheet to the antibiotic room, giving the name, room number and dosage of the drugs for each patient receiving penicillin or streptomycin.

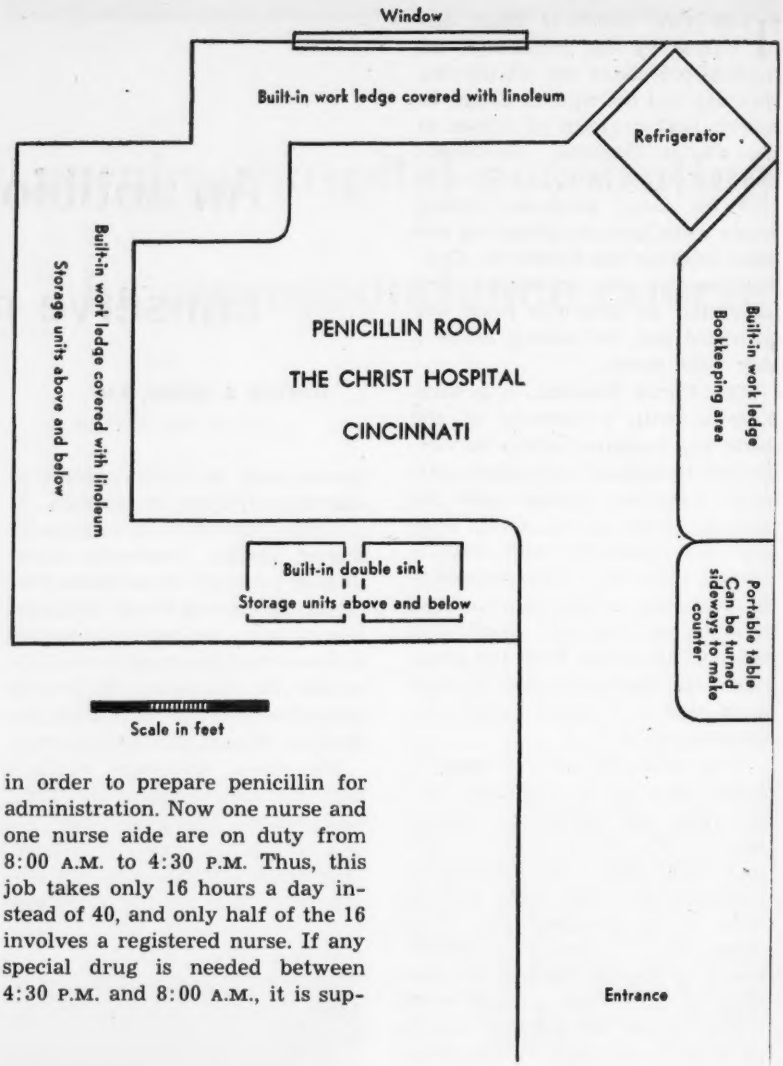
When the medicine nurse obtains her new supply of the drugs, a card that she has made out at 8:00 A.M., showing the total number of units of penicillin and grams of streptomycin given to each patient, is brought to the antibiotic room. As patients are charged by the number of units of penicillin or grams of streptomycin that they receive, these cards are used as a guide by the nurse in the antibiotic division when recording charge units. This method makes possible an accurate account of the number of units and doses of each type of penicillin and the number of grams and doses of streptomycin in any given period. Monthly totals of the drugs used are recorded on a graph.

The present plan of distribution of the antibiotics requires the services of only one eight-hour-a-day registered nurse and one eight-hour-a-day nurse aide for the entire hospital. Previously, it was necessary to place a graduate nurse in each of the hospital's 10 divisions at least four hours daily in order to prepare penicillin for administration. Now one nurse and one nurse aide are on duty from 8:00 A.M. to 4:30 P.M. Thus, this job takes only 16 hours a day instead of 40, and only half of the 16 involves a registered nurse. If any special drug is needed between 4:30 P.M. and 8:00 A.M., it is supplied by the night supervisor, who has admittance to the penicillin room.



PENICILLIN ROOM CONTAINS cabinet sink, electric refrigerator, wall cabinets and 18-inch linoleum-covered work counters that run around three sides of the room.

The main objective in organizing this special division at the Christ Hospital was to conserve nursing time. After two and one-half years of consolidating the antibiotic services, however, the realization of other benefits far exceeds the first objective.

The possibility of error has been minimized because only a few people are responsible for the mixing and administering of the antibiotics. Methods of administration have been standardized. Charges to the patient are accurately recorded. Public relations between the hospital and the patient have improved, because a vital service has been rendered an efficient service.

Dental care in a children's hospital

GORDON H. ROVELSTAD, D.D.S., M.S.D.

ONE OF THE 734 patients registered last year in the dental clinic of The Children's Memorial Hospital, Chicago, was a four-year-old boy who had a complete set of artificial dentures restoring the 20 deciduous or baby teeth that were decayed and infected. This may seem to be the peak of dental achievement inasmuch as he was able to chew and speak well and yet appear natural.

In view of the present knowledge of dental disease, however, he represents a failure on the part of society, because the cause of the loss of this child's teeth was dental caries (decay) and through it dental infection, a disease that is recognized today as preventable or at least controllable.

If this youngster had been brought to the hospital's dental clinic earlier, either as a clinic or hospitalized patient, the tragedy of his mouth could have been avoided. The tragedy referred to is not the present situation, but rather the future implications of the loss of all the deciduous teeth at the age of four. It is a known fact that the development of a normal adult mouth depends to a great extent upon the healthy maintenance of the deciduous teeth until they are lost naturally. This represents 12 years of growth and development, 12 of the most important years in the mental and physical health of a child.

Dental caries respects no age group. It involves children to a greater extent than adults inasmuch as the rate of formation of new cavities in children is greater and under the right conditions may continue throughout life. Dental caries is not of itself reparable. Once a cavity develops, only artificial restoration will prevent it from continuing. For this reason, in order to prevent progression of cavities and the loss of teeth through uncontrolled caries, the problem must be faced as early as it is recognized.

Dental caries has occurred in some mouths before the age of two. The majority of three-year-old patients seen in the dental clinic of The Children's Memorial Hospital during the past year had one or more cavities. Some of these cavities had progressed so far that extraction of the teeth involved was necessary in order to prevent or eliminate infection. Dental care and dental hygiene must start as soon as the teeth erupt in the mouth.

A number of factors are responsible for dental disease in children, and the dentist alone is unable to meet all of these factors. The principal factors are dietary and food habits. For this reason and others, there has been an increased interest in recent years in the cooperation of the medical and dental professions in an effort to combat this disease that is known to involve 98 per cent of the school children in America and more than half of the pre-school children.

PURPOSE OF AFFILIATION

An example of this interest is the affiliation of The Children's Memorial Hospital with Northwestern University Dental School. The three-fold purpose of this dental affiliation, which was completed early in 1949, is:

(1) To provide as complete and up-to-date dental service as possible to patients of the outpatient department, as well as to hospitalized patients, using the latest techniques of treatment and prevention;

(2) To provide facilities whereby dental students may learn the management and treatment of children suffering from systemic disease, or particularly for dental students to learn to recognize systemic disease. With this program the dental students have the opportunity to work with the medical profession, to understand medical problems more clearly and to apply themselves to dentistry as it relates to medical problems. The dental students also have an opportunity to meet emergency conditions involving the mouth, jaws and teeth which are encountered only in a hospital.

(3) To provide a teaching program for the medical residents and the hospital personnel on dental health, emphasizing in particular the preventive side of dental disease as well as the importance of dental health during the years of development.

The dental unit is in operation five and one-half days a week, with a dentist on call the rest of the time. Eight part-time dentists are on the service. Some are students at Northwestern University who are studying for completion of a master's degree in pedodontia (the specialty of dentistry related to children). Others are dentists who wish to better their techniques in the management of children or their knowledge of children's diseases as related to dental treatment.

The fulltime resident dentist of the hospital resident staff is the mainstay of the dental clinic and is applying clinical credit toward a master's degree in pedodontia.

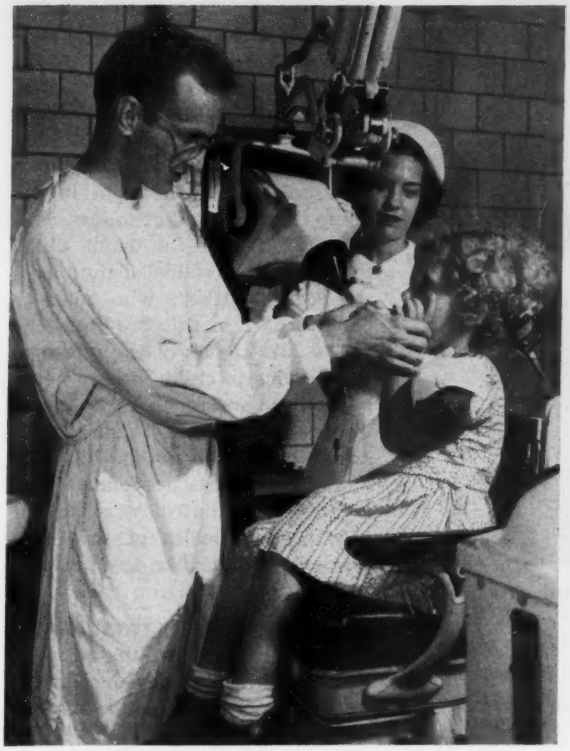
TEACHING ROUNDS

Regular teaching rounds are made with the dental staff and students. A medical resident is in attendance for these rounds, thus giving a correlation between the medical and dental problems in the wards. In addition, a regular staff meeting and student seminar is held once a week in the clinic for the purpose of studying new and interesting cases and planning their subsequent treatment and management. This is a vital part of the educational program.

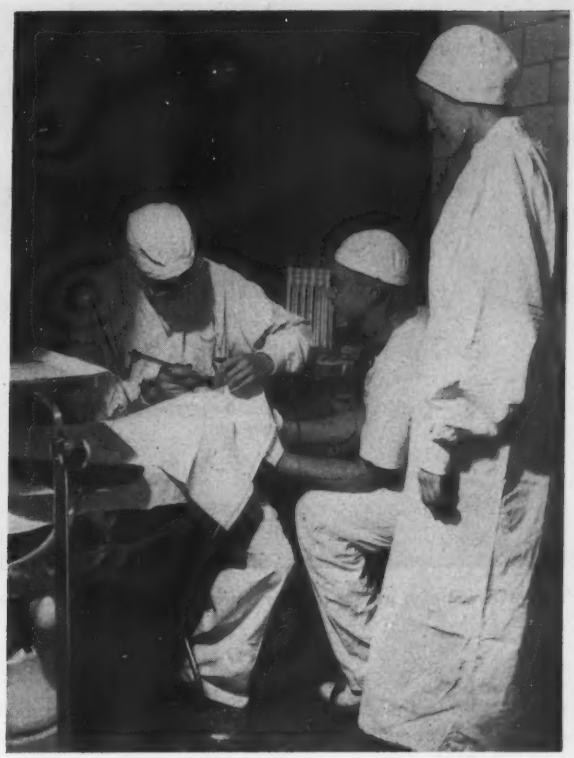
All types of dental care are provided including operative care (restoring of decayed teeth), prophylaxis, oral hygiene, surgery, prosthetics (construction of artificial dentures, appliances and bridges), periodontia (treatment of soft tissues of the teeth and gums), and orthodontia (straightening of the teeth). All types of patients are included in this program: Patients needing routine care, preventive care, corrective care, special management and combined medical care. The children are first seen in the dental unit at the age of two-and-one-half years, some special cases starting at two years. Subsequent appointments are made every three to six months (depending on the individual need) up to 13 years, the maximum age of our patients.

Because of the pediatrician's influence in the planning of an adequate dental preventive program, the hospital is the logical place for practicing the dietary control so essential to caries prevention.

THIS EXAMINATION is made into a teaching demonstration for the dental resident.



X-RAY PICTURES reveal signs of dental diseases in young patients.



GENERAL anesthesia is administered the children for extensive work.

Since last November there has been a revised dietary control for all children in the hospital. All sweets between meals have been eliminated, including cookies, confections, ice cream and soft drinks, except by order of the physician. This was done in order to reduce sugar-containing foods between meals, when the caries process is most active. Sugar, especially refined sugar, is the main dietary element necessary for dental caries. The dinners and suppers consist principally of meat, vegetables, potatoes and fresh fruit, the latter replacing puddings, cakes and canned fruits. Whole wheat bread is served instead of white in order to reduce the intake of refined flours and starches, also concerned in the caries mechanism.

Milk is served only in its natural form and not as chocolate milk or cocoa. Carbonated beverages are served only on prescriptions of the physicians. Lollipops, previously given out as rewards for good behavior are being replaced by balloons and pictures.

The aim of this dietary program is to set up ideals and offer examples of what good food habits should be. The occasional party is not to be discouraged, nor are treats at holiday seasons. In the past, however, it has been very easy for a child in the hospital to be constantly fed sweets during his convalescence. If the period of hospitalization is brief, habits are set up that are difficult to break. If the period is long, rampant caries develop and permanent damage is done.

The first step toward this extensive dental program for children was taken by The Children's Memorial Hospital in 1940, with the erection of the Thomas D. Jones Clinic building. Ample quarters for today's use had been included in this building. The facilities embrace a completely equipped dental x-ray laboratory, waiting room, office and four dental offices.

FINANCIAL SUPPORT

After the completion of the clinic, a further step was taken in 1945 when the National Park College Alumnae Foundation made the first gift of $2,000 toward the support of the clinic, a support which continues at the present time. Today's educational and research program also is aided financially by a fund of the Northwestern University Dental School.

At present the dental clinic is not able to meet the needs of all the patients registered in the outpatient department because of the enormity of the problem. But it is meeting the needs of all patients who, because of their medical problems, are not able to get adequate care elsewhere, such as the cardiac, diabetic, orthopedic, hematology, nephritic, oral surgery and endocrine patients.

The problem of providing dental care for all the patients registered in the outpatient department as well as the hospitalized patients can be realized only when one takes into consideration the fact that practically all of these children need regular dental attention from the age of two. Of the 8,556 children registered in the clinic in 1949, about 7,500 were potential dental patients of two years or over. From public health statistics giving the average time necessary to render adequate dental service to children we know that approximately two to three hours per year are needed for each child in order to keep that child in good dental health. That would involve about 20,000 hours per year, or in terms of personnel, eight to 10 dentists working 40 hours per week, 52 weeks out of the year. Even this is a conservative estimate, inasmuch as the average time necessary for the treatment and care of each child seen in the dental clinic during the past year was more nearly five to six hours. This would be expected since dental disease is more rampant in children suffering from other disease and more time is required in the management of these patients.

SPECIAL CARE

Among the children needing special care are the orthopedic patients, who are hospitalized for long periods of time. Many require special handling because of their various types of casts, including full body casts. The dental treatment must be given while many of these patients lie on hospital carts. In cases where orthopedic surgery is elective and where long hospitalizations are anticipated, the necessary dental treatment can be completed before admission.

Spastic children who are unable to control muscular action and who need dental service can best be handled in a hospital where sedation and premedication can be controlled properly.

Heart cases need to be protected against fear and shock. In conference with the physician in charge of the case, the dentist arranges for the proper premedication and anesthetic. Some of the most serious of congenital heart cases still need dental care though it be modified to the patient's tolerance. Rheumatic heart cases, especially, must be protected against infection, and when extractions of teeth are necessary, hospitalization is often advisable. Management of hemaphiliac patients requires hospitalization and the most cautious treatment when surgery is necessary.

Numerous other problems come up regularly in an institution of this kind—problems that demand constant attention cooperatively from both the physician and the dentist. One of the best examples, showing the need for this spirit of cooperation, is found in the accomplishments of The Children's Memorial Hospital Unit of the Northwestern University Cleft Palate Institute. In no area of treatment has more progress been made than in planning for the individualized program now possible for each child with a cleft palate or cleft lip. The institute is made up of specialists representing all phases of care needed by this unfortunate group of children: Surgery, dentistry, orthodontia, audiology, speech and pediatrics. Each child is studied by each of these specialists, and then the best plan of treatment and management is discussed and worked out in the group discussions that follow. This is carried out for each child through the direction of the medical social worker, who plays a definite part in this program.

The full impact of the worth of this service to children may never be realized inasmuch as its measurement is difficult. There is little doubt, however, that this institute and the activities associated with it have contributed more to the welfare and health of these deformed children than any previous plan of treatment.

PART OF TOTAL HEALTH

In large measure, the problem of management of any one disease or deformity of a child involves different specialities of the health service. A child, unlike an adult, primarily must be studied objectively, with consideration given all of the related fields of physical and mental health without much subjective reporting of symptoms by the patient. Dental health must be considered an essential part of the total health of a child, and therefore it must be included in the health services of any hospital intending to render complete services.

Much is yet to be desired in the dental clinic in order to meet the dental needs of children as discussed. There is no doubt, however, that there is a rightful place for a department of dentistry in a children's hospital. There is also no doubt that this phase of health is of vital importance to any facility where the whole health of a child is of concern. The problem is not easily solved even though the present status of dentistry for children is at a level never before realized. Possibly, with such cooperative ventures as that provided through the affiliation of Northwestern University Dental School and The Children's Memorial Hospital, greater success will be achieved and dental service no longer will be a gap in the health services of hospitals.

An ex-patient looks at hospital housekeeping

EDWARD J. GOUGH

HOSPITALIZATION for several long stretches at a time during the last two or three years has qualified me to report what a patient expects of a hospital's housekeeping department.

What do I as a patient expect? In a truly smoothly running hospital the patient has little or no knowledge of the activities of the housekeeping department. Perhaps this is the answer to the question—I expect the housekeeping department to be so efficient that I shall never be consciously aware of its activities.

The three prime requisites of the housekeeping department are cleanliness, tidiness and attention to the patient's comfort.

As for cleanliness, the patient expects a "spic and span" area upon his introduction to his prospective quarters. The many influences that have developed in recent years have reduced the time for making things "spic and span" to the point where the beds do not have time to "cool off." The set-up of the housekeeping department should be such that someone would immediately be available to "prep" a room or a bed in a ward. In this connection, other departments of the hospital must cooperate to keep housekeeping informed of impending discharges. It is obviously unfair to expect the housekeeping department to "jump through the hoop" of getting Room X ready for a new admission in 30 minutes when the fact that the former patient in the room was being discharged had been known for six hours.

After the patient has arrived and has been "bedded down," it is not unreasonable for him to expect a continuance of cleanliness and tidiness and an effort to keep him comfortable.

Cleanliness also applies to the windows, as well as to the room and furnishings. At certain seasons and under certain conditions, window-washing is difficult or impossible. Nevertheless, when a patient has been roused at what he considers an unearthly hour it is most disheartening for him to see eager daylight struggling hopelessly to peek through a dust-spattered window that has known water only when it rained.

Under tidiness I would put such expectations as that of having my toilet articles left where I put them and books or papers or any personal items in substantially the places where they were found. Just as the nurse is trained to put the call button back within the patient's reach after changing the bed, so should the maid be trained to replace the telephone, the water glass and water, the foot stool, reading matter and, in short, everything that the patient might have occasion to use.

In regard to the patient's comfort, a little more could be done along the line of special cleaning while the patient is out of the room or ward. For example, I would expect that the representative of the housekeeping department in any particular area should be kept advised by the head nurse therein as to the absences that might be expected in the case of various patients on account of operations and x-rays.

Another feature of this comfort of patients is the timing and actual accomplishment of general work such as the cleaning and care of public areas. First of all, the equipment used should be constantly kept in top condition so that no avoidable noise is annoying patients. Second, care should be taken to avoid the use of wax, polishes and detergents that have any odor that could possibly be offensive. Third, a study should be made of the routine (medical and/or surgical) in the area concerned, and the work should be planned so that its accomplishment would interfere with or affect the patient's routine and comfort in the absolute minimum.

Housekeeping personnel should think of their work in terms of speedy patient recovery: Translation—minimize confusion.

Mr. Gough, a resident of Newton, Mass., presented this paper at the New England Hospital Assembly, Boston, March 1950.

VALERIA M. SHELLY

IN THE FALL of every year, the public relations department of Nassau Hospital, Mineola, N. Y., arranges an exhibit on some phase of medical care for display at the annual Nassau County Fair.

We estimate that our exhibits are seen by more than half of all the people who come to the fair (345,000 last year), and we feel amply rewarded for the time, materials and effort involved, especially since materials cost next to nothing and all of the work is done by hospital personnel.

The theme of our exhibit last fall was prenatal care. The exhibit was set up in seven sections, on a display table 20 feet long and 3.5 feet wide. Dolls and miniature furniture were used to dramatize the care an expectant mother should receive. Plywood boxes, open in front, gave the appearance of actual rooms. The walls of the rooms were papered. A small floodlight illuminated each unit. This was especially desirable at night. Green sweeping compound on the display table added color.

The units in the exhibit were:

1. A doctor's office, with desk, blotter, scale and chairs, and dolls representing the doctor, a nurse and a patient.

2. The clinic, with treatment tables, scale and stethoscope, and four dolls representing two patients, an intern and a nurse.

3. A food tray with dolls' dishes to show proper diet. Milk of magnesia in a tiny glass represented milk. Cotton was a helping of mashed potatoes (with a piece of yellow cheese on top to indicate butter). Round green candies were the peas and our carpenter made a miniature steak out of wood. There was sugar in the bowl and coffee in the cup. Marzipans in the form of apples, bananas and oranges were the dessert.

4. To show that diversion is important in the prenatal period, a living room was arranged with bookcases, flower vases, a radio and easy chairs. The room was complete with rugs on the floors and curtains on the windows. Three-inch dolls were used to represent children in the family, and six-inch dolls represented adults.

5. To stress the importance of fresh air and exercise, there was a park scene, with three dolls as expectant mothers, plants to represent trees, miniature park benches, and a lake fashioned out of glass with tiny ducks placed on it. Toy dogs and cats were on the lawn.

6. To show that plenty of rest is essential, there was a bedroom showing the expectant mother in bed with windows open. The bed was placed so that there was no draft. There were easy chairs, a bedside table and a telephone.

7. The hospital ward and nursery unit showed three patients in bed and a nurse giving bedside care. There were chairs, bedside tables and lamps. The nursery had in it three bassinets with dolls as newborn infants and a larger doll representing the nursery nurse.

Our obstetrical supervisor planned the exhibit. The dolls were dressed by employees in various parts of the hospital. The hospital seamstress made the curtains for the windows out of leftover curtain material, and she fashioned the rugs out of drapery remnants. One of the men in our maintenance department, who is an artist in his own right, painted all of the signs. The miniature furniture was made by the engineering department and represented about three days work for one man. The cost of the materials for the furniture was practically nil since odds and ends were used to build it.

When planning a building program, a hospital's administrator and trustees often are unfamiliar with problems of design and construction. Here are some basic considerations leading up to . . .

That contract with the architect

GEORGE F. DENNISTON

"THE NEXT HOSPITAL project will be different! Considering the current project and all the ones before it, I must have run the gamut of conceivable architectural experiences."

These are the thoughts that may go through the mind of an architect who has just completed large hospital projects and is about to initiate the next one. Basically he is correct, with a major exception in regard to his financial arrangements. On architectural grounds, after several successive hospital projects, the architect has incorporated his experiences into his fund of applicable knowledge and becomes more competent and confident. In the financial aspects of his work he seems to avoid this process of cumulative experience.

There are several reasons for this condition. By the very nature of his profession, an amorphous admixture of art and science, the average architect is neither versed in business administration and legal practices nor mentally attuned to present and discuss matters that affect his gross income. He feels a reluctance to be specific in dollar matters that affect himself, as though such an attitude inferred a reflection on his skill in the practice of his architectural profession. Thus his gross income often is too small to contain the many extra-curricular activities he absorbs to please his client. Yet the architectural profession is one of the first to feel any fluctuation in the national economy.

Probably the prime factor in retarding the development of the architect's business acumen is the unique competitive situation in which he finds himself. He must seek one new project after another, in most cases indirectly and discreetly, for, bound by professional ethics, the architect rarely may appear energetically competitive. In this constant search for clients and projects, the architect has developed an acute ear for the tread of competitors on the same rail. On perceiving the first approaching footsteps, he is likely to wax vociferous on his architectural merits and become even more taciturn concerning business arrangements. In fact, he is inclined to be a little optimistic about his own creative ability and, when pressed, to accept a rather unsatisfactory contract in the hope that he will be able to work it out some way.

FEAR OF COMPETITION

The bugaboo of fear is that his competitor will take the project at a lower rate or commission, and if the competitor can do it for less, so can he. Unfortunately, neither was ever vested with miraculous powers. Naturally, if an architect conducts his contractual negotiations haunted by fear of losing the project, he certainly will not introduce for discussion and conclusion personal financial corollary matters that often arise.

The client, on the other hand, is usually a board of trustees comprising intelligent people, representative of a community and with well-rounded business experience. As practical people, they know in advance that the terms of a contract will be carried out enthusiastically only if both parties are satisfied from the initiation of the project to its conclusion. They do not expect the architect to render a high degree of skill, pay the heavy expenses of his staff and give all contractual services at a loss or without a fair and reasonable profit.

During the period of contract negotiations the client usually brings his attorney to discuss terms and phraseology. The architect will not engage an attorney at this time for fear of establishing in the mind of the client the idea of two opposing sides.

Because of the architect's lack of business training, it is readily apparent that the client often may secure a contract that would at the time seem to be quite to his advantage. Yet, as the work on the hospital proceeds, the seeming advantages would turn out to be handicaps. Like any other person, an architect working under a one-sided contract will not produce what he would if the contract were mutually favorable. Probably there is no other type of building where fractional differences in architectural fees and reimbursements are of such minor importance as in the case of hospitals. Percentagewise, the fee of the architect is the lowest of all the costs the trustees will incur; yet it is most significant to the architect and his work.

Collectively, architects, through the nationally recognized architectural associations, have standard forms of contracts available, but such contracts are relatively brief. It was anticipated that each individual architect, when explaining the brief standard contract, would simultaneously educate his prospective client about the many other matters peculiar to the actual practice of architecture. This anticipation is not always fulfilled.

The fact that practically all architects exercise special patience and accept various unexpected conditions is, for the most part, the fault of the architects. The architects, as a body, have no grounds for complaint against boards of trustees or executives of hospitals if the architects, either individually or collectively, have not endeavored to educate their clients. Certainly the ordinary standard architectural contract is devoid of many items that often occur in a construction project as complex as a hospital.

Some enumeration of items of mutual interest may be helpful to both the trustees and the architect when the next contract is negotiated. These items are important and should be settled in advance by both parties signing the contract:

1. If no medical consultant has been retained, is the architect to be required to develop the program by a concentrated study of existing conditions and departmental requirements?

2. Is the architect to provide material for a fund-raising campaign, such as a rendering or model of a hypothetical building or a breakdown of a presumed cost (for campaign purposes) of an operating suite or a patient's room?

3. If sufficient funds are not procured, is the service of the architect to be terminated? If so, how shall he be reimbursed?

4. Will the architect be expected to provide plans for site improvement, sanitation, roads and walks?

5. Is provision to be made for expert skills beyond that available in the average architect's office, and how is payment to be arranged to defray such costs? These would include: (a) Structural engineer, (b) mechanical engineer, (c) landscape architect, (d) acoustical consultant, (e) lighting consultant, (f) kitchen and food consultant, (g) sculptor, (h) mural painter, (i) interior decorator, (j) equipment consultant, (k) quantity surveyor and estimator, (l) sanitary engineer, and (m) boring and survey data.

Most projects will require only some of these skills, but a recorded preliminary discussion as to such necessity would help both sides later on.

6. Shall the architect be expected to furnish one or more architectural renderings and perhaps a larger number of prints?

7. Shall the architect have a very small, compact, authoritative committee with which to work and procure decision, or must it be otherwise?

8. Before the architect signs his contract, will he know whether construction will be on a competitive bid basis or otherwise?

9. Are the terms of the contract explicit, beyond doubt or misinterpretation, about additional payment to the architect when such payment is merited by additional work, such as changes to the working drawings?

10. Do the trustees know, and thus incorporate such provision in the contract, that if at some future date they decide to forego constructing part of the building for which plans had been prepared, the architect should be paid nevertheless?

11. When the contract is being discussed, a decision should be made as to the policy of retaining a clerk of the works, and an understanding should be reached as to the scope of services the architect will render during the construction period.

12. Not a contractual matter but certainly one that will help both parties is an agreement in advance on a schedule for presentation of plans, bids, construction and occupancy.

13. The architect owes his client an obligation to be equipped in personnel and otherwise to meet the schedule, and the client owes it to his architect to conduct his business and make decisions in such a way that the architect may comply with the prearranged schedule.

14. The architect should be prepared to make available an experienced assistant to the client so that the client can be assured of capable continuity in the event an unforeseen illness or other incident befalls the architect.

All the foregoing presumes a legal document based on a percentage fee. Thus a fee will be part of the contract. What fee? The basis for the fee must be the scope of the services to be executed by the architect, and it should not be a matter of competitive speculation. The risk to all concerned—trustees, administrator, staff, architect and patients—is too great to jeopardize such a great humanitarian undertaking on some competitive figure.

When the trustees meet their architect after they have lifted from him the burden of reaching a written and signed agreement, they will find a new man, eager, enthusiastic, skilled and anxious to begin giving them evidence of the confidence they placed in him.

Sometimes, later on, he will be discouraged; he will wish things could be a little different. He will not give up, however, and the building will come through—but therein lies another tale.

An authority on hospitals and the law explains why

EMANUEL HAYT, LL.B.

FROM A LEGAL standpoint, consent is defined as a unity of opinion in which there is an accord of the minds of two or more persons. It is an express consent when it is given in clear and direct terms, either orally or in writing.[1] An implied consent generally arises by silence taken together with other circumstances so as to warrant the presumption that assent has been given.[2]

Applied to surgery, consent may be manifested in a number of ways: As an express consent the patient may sign a formal written permission or agree orally; he may give implied authority by his conduct, as in submitting to an operation, the general nature of which has been explained to him.

Any form of consent is valid unless it is obtained by representations which are false to the knowledge of the surgeon. The performance of the operation then constitutes an assault on the patient for which the surgeon is liable.[3] To be entitled to compensatory damages, however, the patient must show that definite and substantial harm resulted from the procedure. Otherwise the award is for nominal damages for a technical assault.

PURPOSE OF CONSENT

The main purpose of consent is to protect the physician against claims of unauthorized operations and to protect the patient against unsanctioned surgery. Written acquiescence is safest, because there is less room for controversy about the contemplated treatment or for denial that permission was granted. Authorization may be the best legal defense.

When a patient signs a consent for surgery or other procedures, it should be because the attending physician considers such treatment necessary either immediately or within a reasonable time. A consent is valid only for a "reasonable time," the length of which would have to depend on the circumstances. Although no time is fixed by law, the consent should not extend beyond the present admission unless it is for a continuous course of treatment.

The patient should have explained to him the general intention of the surgery, so that he knows what he is submitting to. The routine signing of operative permits, without specifying the kind of surgery to be done, is unfair to the patient and may create misunderstanding. Until an operation is indicated, the inference that one is necessary or contemplated should not be given the patient by asking him to sign an authorization.

The surgeon has no right to go beyond the authorized scope of the operation unless an emergency arises which makes additional consent impractical. In some cases the consent is broad enough to include other pathology. When possible the better practice is to get specific agreement for each operation after discussion with the patient.

Should the patient's consent be secured for minor procedures? These would include thoracentesis (puncture of the thorax for the removal of fluid); paracentesis (puncture particularly of the wall of the cavity of body, such as the cornea, tympanic membrane, thoracic wall); lumbar puncture (commonly known as a spinal tap).

As a general rule, permission of the patient is required for all operations, whether minor or major. A minor surgical procedure is also an operation for which authorization is necessary.

As distinguished from general medicine, surgery deals with manual operations usually performed with surgical instruments or appliances. An operation is a surgical procedure even though it may be done without instruments, as, for example, in the closed reduction of a fracture. Surgical procedures are synonymous with surgical operations, whether done with or without instruments. The use of an instrument to penetrate the tissues of the patient, either to introduce or to withdraw a substance, is a minor surgical procedure.

Some of these points are clearly demonstrated in recent cases.

DANGERS OF ORAL CONSENT

One case shows the difficulties inherent in relying upon an oral consent. An adult patient was examined by two physicians who discovered a mass in the lower right abdomen. A cystoscopic examination revealed the bladder was occupied by a stone approximately the size of a baseball.

Throughout the examination the patient was conscious and in full possession of his mental faculties. Advised of his condition and informed that he could not survive if the stones were not removed immediately, he consented to the operation. Surgery revealed an aggravated vesical abscess, from which the patient died shortly thereafter.

A written consent to the operation had been given by the patient's adult sister upon the insistence of one of the nurses. The sister told the nurse that the consent should have been executed by the mother.

CASE DISMISSED

The mother contended that the operation was performed on the son without her consent; that she was the proper person to consent, and that therefore an assault was committed on her son for which she was entitled to compensation. Her claim was dismissed by the court, which found that the deceased did give consent and was conscious and in full possession of his mental faculties at the time.[4]

When written or oral consent is obtained, the surgeon may not ordinarily deviate from the particular operation allowed by the patient. Written permission has the advantage of naming the specific operation and also it may provide for "such other operations as the surgeon deems necessary." The surgeon thus is enabled to exercise his best judgment.

That a clear understanding with the patient in writing is the best means of avoiding litigation is illustrated by another case in which a surgeon depended upon an oral consent for a curettement and then performed a hysterectomy.

After engaging the physician for an operation, the patient entered the hospital and was operated upon the next day. The physician attempted curettement, but the operation developed into a vaginal hysterectomy. During the first nine days following the operation, the patient was in a normal postoperative condition. Following this period she developed a high fever and her abdomen became sore, distended and discolored. She was placed in an oxygen tent for three weeks, given opiates, stimulants, and transfusions of blood. She was fed intravenously, and her stomach was continuously pumped. Two consultants found the patient suffering from peritonitis and paralysis of the large bowel.

After five months of hospitalization, the patient was again operated upon by another surgeon, one of the consultants. He removed her ovaries, having found them cystic, enlarged and diseased.

The first physician was charged with an unauthorized hysterectomy. According to the intern who assisted at the operation, curettage was attempted, but "because of difficulty encountered in trying to dilate the cervix preparatory to a curettage, for some reason the dilation and curettage was not performed and the attending physician did a vaginal hysterectomy." This testimony, stated the court, raised the inference that the hysterectomy was done without consent. The hysterectomy was not discretionary, nor was it an emergency operation necessary for preservation of life or health, nor was it impractical to obtain permission of the patient or one qualified to give consent.[5]

PROTECTION FOR SURGEON

It is difficult for consent to be disproved when it is in writing with a witness to the signature. There is available at least one person who can contradict any claim that the patient did not consent or was not in condition to give valid authorization. Memory as to the circumstances in a particular case may not be the best proof in an action for a wrongful operation.

Another case points up the need for a written permit witnessed by some person other than the surgeon. A pelvic examination disclosed what appeared to be a small fibroid tumor on the anterior surface of the uterus. Subsequent examinations revealed that the mass, at first about half as large as a walnut, had grown to the size of a lemon. Operation was advised by the physician. He told the patient it might be necessary to remove the right ovary or the uterus, but he promised not to remove both ovaries, the only limitation imposed by the patient.

On admission to the hospital, the patient signed a consent to "whatever anesthetic and operation may be decided to be necessary or advisable." Assisted by another physician, the surgeon opened the patient's abdomen. He found the ovaries were not diseased, but the mass which had been felt was a large tumor attached to the uterus adjacent to the right ovary. The uterine wall was filled with multiple fibroid tumors. Both doctors decided a subtotal hysterectomy was necessary and proceeded with that operation. The patient and her husband were informed of what had been done, and neither expressed any dissatisfaction.

Later, the patient asserted she had no recollection of having signed a consent. If she did sign the form, she said, it was after she had been given a sedative. The nurse who witnessed the consent stated the paper was signed before a sedative was administered. Medical testimony produced by the patient indicated that the operation was not necessary to preserve her health, thus contradicting the opinion of the operating surgeon that she would have continued to bleed if the uterus had not been removed and that the tumor might have become malignant.

The signed general consent, declared the court, authorized the surgeon to do what he might find necessary or advisable to effect a cure. When confronted with an emergency it is the surgeon's duty to do what the occasion demands within the usual and customary practice among physicians and surgeons in the same or similar localities, and he is justified in extending the operation and in removing and overcoming the condition without the express permission of the patient.

From the evidence, the court added, the condition of the patient's internal organs was not ascertainable with certainty until an incision had been made. The surgeon would have been subject to grave censure had he closed the incision and awaited the patient's recovery from the effects of the anesthetic in order to have further consultation with her concerning the removal of the alien material.

Existence of the written consent, the testimony of the nurse that the patient was in full possession of her faculties, the surgeon's explanation to her, as well as the unforeseen emergency, justified the jury in finding in favor of the surgeon.[6]

NECESSARY SURGERY ONLY

Consent does not imply that the surgeon may perform unnecessary surgery. No matter how broad or general the authorization may be, the burden is upon the physician to be reasonably certain the operation was pathologically indicated.

A married woman sued a surgeon for assault and battery and negligence. She had consulted him for pains in the region of her stomach on the left side under the ribs. He advised her to go to another doctor for x-ray examination, which she did. After calling the radiologist, her physician advised that an operation was necessary because the spleen, which he indicated and described as "attached to the collarbone," was "hanging by a thread." The operation was required "to build up the ligaments" that held the spleen in place.

Acting upon the doctor's representations and the assurance that the operation was not a serious one, she agreed to have him operate. The doctor, however, removed the spleen.

At the trial, the surgeon testified that he found the spleen "ptotic," that is, fallen, when the patient was in an upright position. He noted some adhesions holding it to the stomach but denied saying the spleen was attached to the collarbone or anything about the strength or weakness of the ligaments.

The pathologist at the hospital stated that, on the day following the operation, the surgeon had told him that in freeing the spleen of adhesions to the stomach the splenic artery at the hilum was torn and large hemorrhage was encountered, which had to be controlled by tying off the vessel. It was then necessary to remove the spleen. Except for a few fibrous adhesions on its inner surface, the pathologist found no evidence of disease in the spleen.

The court held that there was no proof of consent to remove the spleen and that excision of that organ was not pathologically necessary or reasonably incidental to the operation. In such circumstances, the burden is on the surgeon to explain his acts.[7]

EXCEPTIONS

There are situations, of course, in which it is either impractical or unnecessary to obtain consent. An emergency to save life or prevent irreparable injury serves in lieu of authorization, either express or implied.

Another recent case illustrates this rule. A seven-year-old child who sustained a fracture of the forearm was taken by the school principal to a doctor's office. Chloroform was administered; the child died a few minutes later.

The mother claimed the doctor was guilty of malpractice in failing to make a proper examination before placing the child under the anesthetic or in giving or causing to be given an overdose of chloroform, as well as in failing to obtain the mother's consent before undertaking treatment.

The physician testified that he examined the child's heart by determining the size as nearly as possible, the rate and character of the pulse, and by listening to the heart with a stethoscope.

At the trial another physician testified as an expert that the examination given by the doctor was the accepted one and that chloroform was the recognized anesthetic in the surrounding countryside. The nurse anesthetist employed by the doctor had administered the chloroform under the direction of the physician and had been giving anesthetics for him since 1933.

The mother asserted that the child's nose, face and mouth were burned by chloroform given directly from the bottle. Her testimony was refuted on this point by the doctor and the coroner. The undertaker and his assistant who embalmed the child testified there were no burns.

There was evidence, concluded the court, that the child did not die from an overdose of chloroform. It noted that everything was done to revive the child after her breathing stopped and before her heart ceased beating. An emergency existed which fully justified the physician's proceeding in the manner in which he did without the express consent of the child's mother. The doctor followed the usual and customary practice among physicians in the same locality. It appeared further that the child was taken by the school principal to the doctor's office after he attempted to locate the mother and failed. The principal was accompanied to the doctor's office by another teacher, who remained with the little girl in the office during the operation and until she died. Based on these facts, the court dismissed the complaint.[8]

CONCLUSIONS

Generally speaking, unless an immediate operation is urgently and reasonably necessary a surgeon has no right to perform such operation without the patient's consent, express or implied. The extent of the consent ordinarily varies in each case. In consenting to an operation to relieve a given condition, an adult patient of sound mind is entitled to rely on the representations of a surgeon. In accordance with such representations he can limit his consent to an operation reasonably appropriate to relieve him of his condition.

Although a surgeon must be allowed some latitude in performing the operation within the scope of the patient's consent, no rule or principle of law extends to him free license to operate at will. In the absence of exceptional circumstances, an operation without consent or in excess of consent, express or reasonably implied, constitutes a technical assault and battery for which he is liable.[9]

It is usually a simple matter to obtain the patient's written consent to an operation, particularly where there is definite indication that the surgical procedure is contemplated. A careless or indifferent attitude toward operative consents is contrary to the interests of the operating surgeon and the hospital both for legal reasons and those of good public relations. The protection that is afforded by a written understanding is certainly worth the little trouble which may be involved in getting it. One should not wait to recognize the importance of a written authorization until after a lawsuit has commenced.

Prompt adoption of the Association's new handbook set the stage for Accounting uniformity in Massachusetts hospitals

STUART W. KNOX

FOUR MONTHS AFTER its introduction, the campaign to establish uniform accounting practices among Massachusetts hospitals is meeting with considerable success. This program, initiated by the 1949 trustees of the Massachusetts Hospital Association and conducted by its council on administrative practice, was presented to member hospitals at a meeting last January.

Members were told that the American Hospital Association accounting manual would be followed closely and with the full endorsement of the trustees and the council. The entire manual has been recommended for adoption in all Massachusetts hospitals. It is hoped that by January 1, 1951, most of the members will be using the American Hospital Association classification.

For some time the Massachusetts Hospital Association had realized the need for uniform accounting. Member hospitals of metropolitan Boston, numbering approximately 35 of the total membership of 144, had enjoyed standardized reporting for several years. Other members in smaller cities and towns, however, were entirely without guidance at the state level.

Hospitals repeatedly were at a distinct disadvantage in dealing with third parties who were large scale purchasers of hospital care. These hospitals asked for higher reimbursement figures, but were unable to substantiate their claims individually.

MAJOR PROBLEMS

Problems of third party reimbursement had been relatively insignificant in 1937 when the association was founded, but they achieved major proportions only a few years later. Council chairmen found their difficulties pyramiding under wartime pressures and felt the growing need for a central office with a fulltime secretary, but the low association budget had prevented any positive action.

That unified action actually brought results was emphatically demonstrated in 1948-49 when an association-sponsored public relations program brought an eventual reimbursement increase of $4 per diem on state welfare cases.

This victory proved the value of a properly financed association program, and in the fall of the same year the state association institutional membership dues were raised to a figure equal to that of the American Hospital Association. An executive secretary was employed in 1949, and definite plans were laid for an intensive attack on nonstandard accounting procedures in member hospitals.

METHOD OF APPROACH

During the planning stage, the method of approach was considered carefully. The council could begin with a standard classification of accounts and statistics and then follow with a cost analysis system, or it could demand standardized reporting and let the members develop their own means to achieve it successfully. The former was decided upon as the more logical, even though it might take longer to reach the goal, and it tied in with the national program.

It was decided further that emphasis by the accounting specialist first would be placed on the expense account classifications and the corresponding statistics. The balance sheet accounts were to receive attention later in the program.

After testing the attitude of the membership toward the program in general and encouraging its adoption, it was planned to arrange for the collection of uniform reports of expense figures and related statistics. The final phase would develop uniform cost finding procedures among the members who then would be ready for a suitable analysis method.

District conferences and accounting workshop sessions were to be included as needed, but in the early months hospitals were urged to employ their own auditors to work with them on the conversion. It was believed that the auditor who serviced each hospital would be better prepared to integrate the new with the old through his previous experience.

This program has been established as a permanent association project with a fulltime accounting specialist in charge. He reports directly to the council on administrative practice of the state association, and funds for the program are budgeted annually from the association treasury.

It is anticipated that even after satisfactory uniformity is accomplished, constant vigilance at the state level will be necessary to prevent the infiltration of nonstandard practices.

As an additional service, frequent periodic compilations of financial data, coded for confidence, will be made available to member institutions. This should prove to be invaluable help to those administrators seeking reliable comparative figures.

Massachusetts considers accounting standardization an ultimate solution to the major problem of interpreting the cost of hospital care to the public at large. For the present, it enjoys the distinction of being the first statewide program to make exclusive use of the American Hospital Association's manual as a pattern for uniformity.

EDITORIALS

Unionization again

AFTER A PERIOD of quiet, labor unions again are attempting to organize hospital employees in a few communities. The details of one such attempt are reported on page 43, and this report accompanies an up-to-date article on hospitals and collective bargaining.

A careful reading of the article will repay any hospital administrator. It is an unusually well rounded discussion of the specific problems that confront hospitals as employers. For persons unaccustomed to dealing with unions, it includes a number of sound suggestions on how to approach collective bargaining, if bargaining there must be. Most important, it properly emphasizes the wisdom of so working with employees that a unionization crisis does not develop.

The position of hospitals remains exceptional if not unique in several ways. Only a handful of them have been organized. They have a measure of protection in the Taft-Hartley Law. On the record in recent years they appear able to win strikes whenever they are determined to do so.

Unless this position is thoroughly understood, however, most hospitals today are in constant jeopardy. First, the Taft-Hartley Law does not forbid attempts to unionize a hospital, nor does it outlaw strikes. Second, no matter who wins a strike it is a painful ordeal which leaves long lasting scars.

The hospital's really unique position as an employer is that it still has a chance to avoid the whole issue of unionization. It can do so by adopting the established practices of modern personnel management, and the cost need not be exorbitant. Job satisfaction, a measure of security, a chance to air grievances—the techniques have been tried and proved, and they are all in the literature.

What would the employers in industry give for a chance to try again?

A vein of high grade ore

HEREWITH THE SECOND annual Statistics and Directory issue of HOSPITALS, containing more information than the first and more than any volume of the old American Hospital Directory in which such material was presented from 1945 through 1948.

The statistics found herein may be put to innumerable uses, but one of the best possibilities appears not to have been thoroughly exploited. Almost any hospital should be able to convert one or more of the published statistical facts into a bit of good public relations.

The several tables represent many different kinds of par for a hospital's service to its community. A hospital that is above par in quantity or quality of service, or below par in cost of service, has a worthwhile story to tell.

For example, the table of specified facilities and services reports on 2,038 general and special short-term hospitals of fewer than 50 beds. Only 54 of these 2,038 small hospitals have cancer clinics, and so each of the 54 offers exceptional service to its community. Any rational newspaper editor would welcome the chance to publicize such evidence of progress and prestige.

Among the 2,038 smallest hospitals, 284 have blood banks, 177 have departments of dentistry and only 26 have mental hygiene clinics. Each hospital in each of these small minorities has something for the local paper, and there are 22 such facilities and services from which to choose.

Similar opportunities confront short-term hospitals of 50 to 99 beds and 100 to 250 beds; also general long-term, mental and tuberculosis hospitals. One national par for nonprofit hospitals is the $2.08 per patient day difference between patient income and total income, and another is the $1.56 difference between patient income and total expenditures. Certainly it will do a hospital no harm to have the people know how much it is dependent on "other sources" of income.

The possibilities are so many and so diverse that, theoretically, every hospital should be able to turn these statistics to account. In fact, any administrator who can't find something may safely conclude that his hospital does not need public relations so much as it needs a good overhauling.

The answer is Yes

A SPOKESMAN FOR the Federal Security Agency last April 22 painted a rather horrifying picture for a Detroit audience. He said: "Short-term illnesses, incapacitation and partial disability cost this country 27 billion dollars worth of productivity, but only 8½ billion dollars in public and private funds were spent for medical and health services."

On the same day, newspapers in this country printed excerpts from an official report on Great Britain's first year of socialized medicine. During that first year, the government reported, "days lost from work for health reasons" increased 22 per cent.

Assuming that the British people are merely human beings, this is about what should be expected. A doctor's testimony that one is suffering from a severe case of "incapacitation" costs nothing, and even in the welfare state, work is still work.

Unfortunately, this information from Great Britain was not available to the Federal Security Agency speaker who was advocating much the same kind of government health plan for this country. He went on to ask his audience:

"Do we need any more argument to convince us that the nation would be healthier, stronger and more prosperous if we stopped thinking in terms of catching the drip under the leaks and began to act in terms of more effective health protection."

If "more effective health protection" means a 22 per cent rise in the cost of lost productivity—from 27 to almost 33 billion dollars—the answer would appear to be: "Yes, the American people need more and better arguments to convince them."

Investment in the future

THE ASSOCIATION'S two-day institutes for hospital department heads appear to be serving their intended purpose.

Experience to date suggests that there is only one limitation on the good that can be accomplished. This is the extent to which member hospitals make use of the service.

These institutes are scheduled either just before or just after the annual meetings of regional hospital associations, and the advantages thereof are several. Travel and other expenses are reduced to a minimum. Time away from the job is reduced to a minimum. In small hospitals where executive personnel is limited, the administrator and one or more assistants can stagger their absences and all get something from the regional convention. In larger hospitals, where the conservation of supervisory skill is not so pressing, a department head may be permitted to attend both the institute and the convention at minimum cost.

The question is: How many boards of trustees recognize the investment value of such continuing education for hospital department heads? Given a conscientious employee, there could scarcely be a more suitable extra reward than two days at an institute with expenses paid. It is an effective form of recognition and is bound to pay dividends in fresh inspiration and efficiency.

A few years ago one trustee of a California hospital contributed a modest sum of money to be used for this purpose—for rewarding the hospital's employees by buying them some further education. That approach could be improved upon considerably if it were a year-to-year program officially authorized by the entire board.

The two-day institute stands as a challenge to the boards of all member hospitals. On investigation, they will be surprised to learn how much can be done toward improving efficiency and morale by investing a few hundred or a few thousand dollars annually in a continuing education program for department heads.

Service benefits when?

AS A MATTER OF PRINCIPLE, the almost magic character of service benefits is recognized by everyone who has a public interest in promoting health insurance, and this has been true since the earliest days of Blue Cross.

Without a basis of service benefits, the Blue Cross idea would have died in infancy. Had Blue Cross plans not multiplied and expanded, the American people today would have little or no more protection against the financial hazards of sickness than they had 20 years ago. All of this is so evident that presumably no one would dispute it, yet the principle of service benefits still is not a hard and fast rule in practice.

Such a gap between principle and practice could not exist forever. A day of reckoning must come, and the following suggests that it is not far off:

"The UAW-CIO is withholding its endorsement of Blue Shield . . . Many Blue Shield plans specify that the doctor may charge the patient more than the scheduled fee allowed by Blue Shield if the family income is over $2,500. The majority of Blue Shield plans have income ceilings that are lower than the average income of most regularly employed workers today.

"These workers have no assurance when they go to the hospital that the allowances under Blue Shield will cover the cost of their medical care. In fact, studies made by the UAW-CIO indicate that our workers have to pay, on the average, about 40 per cent of the surgical fee in addition to paying their monthly premiums . . .

"We receive a constant stream of protests against Blue Shield plans as a result of this. And since Blue Shield contracts are often sold in conjunction with Blue Cross, the average worker does not distinguish between them. Consequently Blue Cross is blamed for these extra charges, even when the Blue Cross plan provides for full payment of the hospital bill."

The above is from a paper prepared by Harry Becker of the UAW-CIO and presented for him at the Midwest Hospital Association Convention in Kansas City.

This labor union does not accept Blue Cross without criticism. Some of its recommended changes are not wholly logical, but it is on solid ground in demanding more service benefits from all kinds of health insurance. Here it merely calls on the founding fathers and guardians of nonprofit health insurance to put their first principle into practice.

"AS NECESSARY AS EQUIPMENT AND DRUGS"

Administration of research programs in the hospital

MARTIN R. STEINBERG, M.D.

THERE ARE AT LEAST two views about the function of the hospital. One would have it that its sole function is the care of the patient. A growing school of thought is that there is a three-part function—the care of the patient, the education of the physician and staff and the conduct of a research program. Both schools of thought are correct, for the education of the staff and some elements of a research program are a necessary part of the care of the patient—as necessary as the use of equipment and drugs.

Let us consider, for instance, the type of care that is given to the patient by a young intern who has just been appointed or by a young volunteer who has just joined the staff. Compare that with the type of care that is given by the same young man six months or a year or several years later. Everything else being equal, the patient's care in the latter case is considerably better, and it is better because these young men now have received training, at least partly, in the hospital. Can we, therefore, separate the education of the physician and talk about it as a separate function from that of patient care?

In the consideration of the third element, research, the argument is not quite so convincing at first. But here too, on further examination, we can claim for research a place in the program of medical care. In the first place, the care of the patient would be considerably less if we did not constantly elaborate upon new techniques and new methods through research. In perhaps a larger sense, however, if we fully evaluate the research program we shall find that there is nothing that so stimulates a staff to high levels of care as the training that comes with a research program. It is the research program that sharpens the sense of observation and stimulates careful thinking. The staff of a hospital with a well-developed research program is apt to provide a better level of care. If one accepts this premise, a program of research should be conducted within almost every size and type of hospital.

Dr. Steinberg is director of Mount Sinai Hospital, New York City.

RESEARCH IS FOR ALL

If we think of research only in the sense that it will produce new techniques and bring about new discoveries, then, of course, we can consider it only for hospitals that have extensive facilities, ample funds, and a large variety of clinical cases or a concentration of a few types of special cases. If we view the developing scene in the hospital field, it is apparent that more and more hospitals are starting research program.

When we think of research, we think of highly trained and specialized research workers, expensive equipment and a large budget. Actually, these are not necessary if we keep in mind that the research program we are seeking is one that will stimulate scientific thinking and lift the academic and professional morale. One can plan a research program using, in most cases, the laboratory facilities that exist for routine work. The laboratory staff can act as the consultants and specialists who will aid the clinical men who go into research. The equipment that is used for routine can be utilized more fully and can serve for a few small projects as a beginning.

It may be possible to get financial support for one or several or even all of the research projects. There are many sources of funds that can be tapped, and it will pay the director to study the possibilities. Often he will find on investigation that a source of support not readily apparent exists for a special project or for several.

One source might be right within the hospital. It may be possible to get the physicians, for instance, to contribute the money they earn for the treatment of ward patients whose insurance policies cover professional fees, or the physicians might be prevailed upon to contribute the fees they earn by treating compensation cases on the wards. An occasional member of the staff might want to make a private contribution.

A general research fund should be established to receive these contributions if they are not given for a special project. It would be well to encourage contributions to this general research fund rather than for special projects, for by this procedure the research administrative committee would be in a position to support the best projects. Often, however, it is found that money is available for a special project, so special research funds will have to be created.

Another source of funds is philanthropic foundations, such as the Rockefeller Foundation, the Commonwealth Fund and the Millbank Fund. Other types of foundation funds that regularly contribute to research include scientific societies, such as the American Cancer Society and the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, and private family foundations. These latter foundations are growing in number, and in many cases the administrator will find that one or more of them have been established by families who are close to the hospital. In some instances community chests will contribute to research.

In New York City, for instance, the United Hospital Fund occasionally distributes monies that have been granted to it for research. The American Medical Association occasionally will do likewise.

Agencies of the federal government have been entering into the support of research in a constantly increasing number. Some of the more important ones are the several institutes of the U.S. Public Health Service, such as the National Cancer Institute and the National Heart Institute, and also the Atomic Energy Commission and the Office of Naval Research.

SOURCE OF FUNDS

A generous source of funds is provided by the commercial corporations that make products used in hospitals. Prominent among these are the several large pharmaceutical concerns, the manufacturers of x-ray, sterilizing and laboratory equipment and such organizations as the Dry Milk Institute, the Dairy Institute and other associations of food manufacturers. A generous potential donor for research is the Life Insurance Fund, subscribed to by many large insurance companies.

Most of the sources named above, with the exception of the hospital staff, have been giving their support to universities and teaching hospitals. Many of them would be receptive to applications from smaller hospitals, especially if they are in geographic areas that do not now receive the bulk of research grants. All of them would be interested in a research project that has special merit or that points in a direction in which they are especially interested.

The administrator of the nonteaching hospital probably will find that the best source of support for a research program will be the private philanthropic donors who are interested in the treatment of a particular disease, who are willing to sponsor one or another of the members of the staff, or who have an interest in the hospital's welfare and program.

It is remarkable what happens to a staff when it is announced that a research program is contemplated or begun where none has existed before. The staff physicians begin to think of themselves as members of a more scientific body. Their pride is sharpened, and the whole tone of the institution is lifted.

Now where does the director or the administrator fit into a research program? First he must be convinced of the benefits of a research program before he can educate the board of trustees so that they, too, can evaluate it properly. He should survey the laboratory equipment and the personnel to determine whether or not they are being fully utilized and to see what capacity for research exists without additions. In studying this problem he should call in the head of the laboratory division and whatever other experts might be in and around the hospital.

When a research policy is laid down by the board of trustees, the administrator should set up a procedure that will give the trustees and the medical staff an assurance that the chosen projects will pay dividends in the development of techniques and in stimulus to staff education. In order to help assure that the best value is obtained, the following are some steps that an administrator should take:

1. The administrator should recommend the appointment of a director of clinical research and a committee, which might be called the research administrative committee. The research director might be the head or one of the heads of the laboratory divisions, or he might be one of the clinicians.

In the developmental pattern of research the branch of medicine that is becoming more and more important is that of physiology. Although it is necessary in almost every problem of research to ask for the technical advice of the chemist, the bacteriologist or the pathologist, the newer research develops difficult questions that belong in the realm of physiology. Whether it be the heart, the lungs, the kidneys or the liver that are being studied, function or altered function are usually the things being dealt with. It would be well, therefore, to nominate as a director of clinical research a man who, in addition to other qualities, is a good physiologist.

The director of clinical research must be a man who can inspire the researchers and preferably not one who will use all or most of the facilities for his own research. He must have qualities of leadership, and he needs the confidence and respect of the entire staff.

The research administrative committee should consist of the head or heads of the laboratory division or divisions, with representation from the medical, surgical and specialty services. If there are any fulltime men on the staff, it would be well to use them on the committee.

We have found it very useful to make this a joint committee of the medical board and the board of trustees. The recommendations that the committee will be called upon to make will entail the expenditure of funds and other allocations that should be seriously studied by the trustees.

2. The administrator should set up the logistics in the consideration of research applications so that the staff will know just how to go about having applications considered. One suggested path is:

APPLICATION PROCEDURE

The research applicant should discuss the problem with the chiefs of the several departments in which he will work. He obtains from them an opinion as to the importance and validity of the work and whether or not they have the necessary facilities and space for such work. He then discusses his problem with the director of clinical research, having had the prior advice and informal approval of those who are to work with him or to give him space or facilities. He is advised as to the form of the application, which he then submits to the research director for consideration by the research administrative committee.

This committee considers the application in relation to all others and makes its decision. In effect, what it must say finally is that considering space, facilities and funds available and considering also the promise and requirements, the application is or is not worthy. A good project that needs fewer facilities, of course, will be more readily accepted, and a worthy project that can attract outside funds will receive more sympathetic consideration where hospital funds are not large.

3. The recommendation of the research committee then should go to the board of trustees for its approval.

4. If it is approved, it should be implemented by the administrator. The implementation must include notice to the researcher and to all departments concerned. In addition, there must be a clear authorization not only to the researcher but to all departments that must expend money. Thus the authorization must go to the personnel department if technicians are to be hired, to the purchasing department if materials are to be purchased and to the accounting department if money is to be expended.

5. The administrator must keep a tickler file that will insure a regular flow of progress reports to the research committee and a terminal report at the end of the period of authorization.

6. Finally, the administrator must make provisions for the publication of papers and the installation of exhibits and all other means of disseminating the knowledge gained in accordance with the policy of the board of trustees. We have found it useful to elaborate a fixed and clear policy, which details just how much support the hospital will give toward publication, the purchase of reprints and the erection of exhibits.

In order to carry out the planning described above, the administrator will find it necessary to compile a number of research forms as follows:

Research application. This should be so designed that it will answer practically all the questions that the research administrative committee need ask. It should give detailed information as to the nature of the research plan. Its title should be informative. It should contain information as to the source of material, the equipment and facilities necessary, what departments will be used and who the collaborators are. The budget should be detailed as to materials, personnel and special expenses. The source of funds should be clear, that is, the committee should know if the researcher is applying for funds from the hospital or if he has attracted or will attract enough outside.

The research application is a valuable document, for the decision as to whether or not the research will be approved must be based largely on the information this application contains. In most cases only one or two members of the research committee will have first-hand information about the project. We have found it useful to furnish the applicants with a printed instruction sheet, which aids in the execution of the application. The application should be circulated to all members of the committee 10 days in advance of the meeting so that they may come to the meeting with a fair appreciation that needs to be supplemented only by a short discussion.

Report of progress. This should contain the proper identification and should state clearly the authorization and actions of the committee. The report should be comprehensive but as short as possible. If the nature of the project as it develops is far enough away from the original authorization to merit reconsideration, a new application form should accompany the progress report. The same form can be used for the terminal report.

AUTHORIZATION

Authorization form. This should state the exact authorization. The information should give the name of the researcher, what monies are allocated to him, what personnel should be hired, what funds should be charged with the money and for what period the research is approved. As stated above, copies of this authorization should go to all departments involved, and no monies should be expended or facilities used except on the basis of the official authorization form.

It will be valuable for the administrator to be constantly aware of what is going on in all the research laboratories in order that he may inform the board of trustees and see that the public relations value is fully exploited. Also, it is good practice for him to call in the promising researchers periodically. He will find that he can distill their experiences of several months in 10 or 15 minutes. Knowledge so gained is appreciated by the board of trustees and helps the hospital when it can be referred to publicly. The American public is becoming research and science minded, and discussion of a research program is a dramatic highlight of a speech before friends or potential friends of the hospital.

Finally, a research program is always stimulating to the staff, will invariably raise the level of care, and need not be confined to large medical centers and to teaching schools. As a matter of fact, it is an important part of patient care. The administrator, not because of any special research skill but because of his knowledge of the technique of administration, can be a vital part of this important activity.

The patient gets a chance to tell his story too

Much interest has been centered recently on the idea of "telling the hospitals' story" to the public. Here is one hospital that believes and practices the thought that this idea works as well in reverse.

RICHARD T. VIGUERS AND HENRY G. BRICKMAN

IN ORDER TO HELP find out what patients really think of our hospital service, we have established a regular weekly session at the New England Center Hospital in which selected patients are invited to "sound off" to the management about hospital service.

We call these sessions "administrative rounds." They are attended by representative patients, department heads, senior medical and surgical residents, and some of the staff physicians and surgeons.

This opportunity for patients to discuss their views of the hospital with the administrative personnel has been good public relations, because the patients have sincerely appreciated the opportunity to "sound off." It has been extremely helpful to the administration because it has furnished numerous tangible suggestions for improvement.

The role of scheduling rounds and making the necessary preparations each week is assigned to the administrative resident or to some other member of the administrative team. Names of likely candidates are submitted by department heads or, more often, by residents and charge nurses. Of course, it is necessary to clear with the staff physician to find whether or not the patient's condition contraindicates his being used in the administrative rounds. The staff has never objected, and the practice of taking patients to the various auditoriums for medical and surgical rounds has been planned to fit into the established pattern.

The person selected to prepare the patient for the administrative rounds, perhaps the administrative resident, calls at the bedside prior to the day of presentation to obtain the patient's consent and to outline just what is done in the auditorium. Great care is taken not to plant in the mind of the patient any set pattern of the questions to be asked or answered.

In selecting the patients to be presented, those who find everything wrong and those who think everything is perfect have been found to be less helpful than patients with a more moderate point of view. In general, we have tried to find patients who are critical of the hospital. In every hospital the great majority of the patients have nothing but praise and, while we all like to hear this praise, it is not particularly stimulating to have patients at the administrative rounds who can say nothing but "the hospital is wonderful." Social, economic and educational background is not as important as the ability to give constructive criticism. Recent patients who have been helpful included a business executive, a carpenter, a housewife, a dentist, a waiter and a woman who owned and operated a nursing home.

If the administrative group is small, the group can visit the patient's bedside, but if the administrative group is large it is better to bring the patient to an auditorium. The latter policy is the one that we have followed. The patient is accompanied to the auditorium by a member of the nursing staff, and there he meets the hospital administrator, who then conducts the informal interview. About 15 minutes are allowed for each patient selected.

SKILLFUL nursing care, coupled with "friendly" nursing care, probably contributes more than any other single factor to the rapid convalescence of the patient.

Mr. Viguers is administrator and Mr. Brickman is administrative resident, New England Center Hospital, Boston. As of July 1, Mr. Brickman will be executive secretary of the Massachusetts Hospital Association. This article was adapted from a paper presented at the twenty-eighth annual hospital standardization conference, American College of Surgeons, Chicago, October 1949.

Rapport is established by explaining the purpose of the conference and chatting with the patient for a few minutes. Questions are asked about where he lives, what his business is and whether or not he has ever been in a hospital before. When the patient seems at ease, the questions are then shifted to the hospital: "Did you have to wait long at the admitting office? Were you received in a friendly manner? Did you like your room? Was it kept clean? Did the nurses answer your calls promptly? How did you sleep? Was the food served hot? Was there too much noise in the hospital? Did the laboratory technician explain to you what she was doing when she drew blood for laboratory tests?" This sort of questioning generally will open up some special avenue of the patient's interest, which of course, is pursued to get the patient's further reaction.

General questions also are asked, such as, "Do you have any suggestions for improvement of the hospital?" or "If you were the administrator of the hospital, what changes would you make?" The patient's questions or suggestions are promptly answered, and explanations are given as to why certain things are done. If the patient has a good suggestion for improving the service, he is assured that this change will be made if possible. Typical questions asked by a patient are: "Why can't my little girl come to visit me? Why do they awaken me so early in the morning? Why do I get so much static on my radio? Why must they awaken me from a sound sleep to give me those pills at 2 A.M.? Isn't the sleep more important? Why do you have to have a paging system?"

The hospital personnel also are given an opportunity to question the patient. The senior surgical resident, concerned with the effectiveness of his preoperative medication, asks, "Did you sleep well the night before your operation?" The director of the nursing service wonders if the patient ever overheard talk about his case or another patient's diagnosis. The maintenance department head asks questions concerning the temperature of the room. The dietitian asks about the appearance of the trays and if the portions of food were adequate.

ROOMS must be cleaned—but cleaning must be at the convenience of the patient.

PATIENTS' RESPONSE

Patients tell us they are delighted with the opportunity we give them to meet and talk with our management. They appreciate the chance to ask specific questions. They like to receive direct answers and complete explanations. They enjoy being asked to participate. One patient, a war veteran, asked to see the administrative resident on the day after his meeting with our group to thank him for being invited to "sound off and to get straightened out."

Some department heads have been frank to admit that the administrative rounds offer them their first opportunity for personal contact with the patient. Others say it has been a long time since they have heard the patient's point of view. All agree that the problem is much more real and vital when heard directly from the patient. It then becomes more evident that each administrative function contributes its share to the patient's comfort. The correction of a poorly placed light shining in the patient's eyes when he needs rest may be very important to his prognosis. The addition of a step to the bed of a convalescing older patient adds materially to his comfort. A reduction in the number of visitors to the acutely ill patient, who is easily tired, may prove beneficial.

The teaching possibilities for the administrative resident, or for any other staff member planning the rounds, are numerous. In assisting with the original selection of the patient, this individual deals with several department heads and members of the medical staff. He reviews the medical record for a better understanding of the patient. His personal contact with the patient, although brief, is significant for he speaks for the administration. The patient's story during the interview and the questions and answers are a liberal education in themselves. Follow-ups of suggestions made during the rounds make excellent projects.

The administrative rounds are only one aspect of a general program. In addition, we have weekly administrative conferences to discuss these questions, orientation meetings for all new employees and a check-off form of questionnaire on the hospital service, which is given to each patient.

The important thing is to stress to all employees that our job is to take the best possible care of each individual patient and that to do this we must find out from the patient how we are doing this job. Each hospital administrator can work out techniques which best fit his situation. The administrative rounds are merely one approach. However, the widespread newspaper interest in giving patients a chance to "sound off" indicates that there is a general desire on the part of the public to talk directly to hospital management. We are making great strides in telling the hospitals' story to the public, but it is equally important for us to give the public a chance to tell its story to the hospitals.

A student health service aids nursing education

McKinley Hospital has found that such a program improves morale, helps in recruitment and need not be expensive

WILLIAM B. MEYTROTT

THE CURRICULA of schools of nursing, combined with the practical application of knowledge gained on the wards, are far from easy, and only those who have the combined physical and mental capabilities can hope to complete their work with any degree of success. For this reason, it is necessary that adequate provision be made for individual student health. A simple and effective plan for a student nurse health program not only may be inexpensive but can give a most satisfactory result in creating a permanent health consciousness with the student herself.

To bring this about and to devise a practical method of approaching the student health problem, there is needed a coordinating committee, which, in our hospital, has been called the Student Health Council. The purpose of such a student health council is primarily to analyze and interpret from both within and without the various forces for good or bad health as they affect the student nurse.

The student health council membership includes those persons who have a close relationship, administratively or otherwise, with the school. These include the chairman of the school of nursing committee, the health consultant, the administrator, the director of nursing, the principal of the school, the school physician and the student health nurse. Consideration also might be given to the inclusion of a student representative.

The formation of the health council brings about a need for the proper carrying out of policies. Working with and directly under the council at McKinley Hospital is the student health nurse, who is a graduate registered nurse specially trained in matters of school health and student development. The choice of the nurse as student health director was made with extreme care by the council to make certain that cooperation would be given her by the student body and that she would satisfactorily carry out the necessary routine procedures that may be set up.

Her duties are concerned solely with the students and student health problems. She is a part of the school and may have no assignment in the general hospital nursing department. This permits the health program to have the full supervision necessary to carry out its objectives.

So that she might have the opportunity to carry out her continuous work and study with the students, a small combined office and examining room was provided for her. While this may be anywhere in the hospital or nurses' home, its proximity to existing diagnostic rooms many times will save duplication of equipment and provide quick consultation where necessary.

The equipment in the student health office is simple and very inexpensive—a desk, two chairs, an examining table, an examining chair, a sink with hot and cold water, a scale, a small cabinet, a file case and an examining light are all the basic necessities. These, of course, may be elaborated upon if it is felt worth while. Supplies of all types are drawn by requisitions from central supply in the same way that equipment is drawn for floor treatments. Arrangements are made so that all routine physical examinations and individual health counseling conferences by the school physician are conducted in this office.

It must be remembered that the real job of the student health nurse is to gain the confidence of the members of the student body so that the most important of the objectives, the development of student health consciousness by all, may be reached. Such a student health council and student health nurse have proved to be an invaluable aid to our hospital since the program was started more than two years ago. Those of us who are in an administrative capacity feel that the presentation and analysis of the many varied problems of student health have certainly made us conscious of a greater responsibility toward the individual student than ever before.

In our own experience, one of the first problems to come to light was that of the chronic breakfast absentee. A record of breakfast attendance showed that some students repeatedly reported for class or student duty without any sustenance and most certainly were not ready for good physical or mental exertion. Through the student health nurse we sought the reason for such chronic absentees, and through education we successfully changed the nonbreakfast habits, at least to the extent of having the student take some type of nourishment before reporting for class or duty. Where the student misses breakfast, the student health nurse has the responsibility of personally seeing that such nourishment is provided through cooperation with the diet kitchen. Records show a steadily decreasing number of breakfast absentees.

Another seemingly small but important point also came to light in the study of our students' dietary needs. We have always prided ourselves on the abundance of good solid food given the students and employees. To cut waste, we had the dietary department weigh all the plate leavings for each group in the dining room for each meal and found that the students led all the rest in discarded food.

The reason, as analyses showed, was not in poor preparation, type of food or individual preference but in the time provided for the students to eat the meals. They just did not have time to stand in line at the serving table, then sit and eat all they had on their plates, get out for a breath of fresh air and still get to class or floor duty by the hour scheduled.

We also found that on many occasions the dining room employees were urging the students to hurry so they could clear the tables and get off duty sooner. When we extended the time for meal consumption to overcome the first drawback, the dietitians also had a long talk with the waitresses on the importance of adequate eating time for the students. They pointed out that while the students are here we have an obligation to develop within them eating habits that will permit them to get real nourishment and not just a hurried snack. This brought excellent results.

Check weighings on plate scrapings now are taken at regular intervals, and our last report has shown a definite reduction in food waste of nearly nine pounds a day. Administratively, this meant definite progress on our dietary budget, and it has allowed us to increase materially our available milk allowance to the students without increasing our food expense budget.

NIGHT DUTY

Another of the many matters brought out in the health council was that of proper understanding of the hygiene of night duty. It was necessary for many of us in administrative capacities to change our ideas and attitudes toward the student assigned to night duty. To most of us, a job is a job to be done, and if the student had been assigned to night duty that was her job, and that was that. A closer analysis showed very definitely that in going on night duty most students were confronted with an entirely different psychological aspect of life. Their mode of living was completely turned around, and adjustment was not easy. Their eating habits, sleeping habits and recreational habits all had to be changed practically overnight.

To meet this challenging problem we very carefully worked out a plan of indoctrination wherein the student is taught what psychological changes may occur and how she may adjust to them before she enters upon night duty. Special recreation facilities are made available and are a required part of her daily life. These include swimming at the local Y.W.C.A., sun-bathing, and organized times of relaxation and play with others who are on the same schedule of night duty so that the girl does not feel alone.

While we at no time exceed the number of permitted hours of night duty for students, as set up by the state nursing board, we feel that in doing this we are going a step farther in helping these girls become better nurses by recognizing some of their most intimate problems. Most certainly it has broadened our knowledge and our respect for the problems that develop within the individual student.

The entire student health program has not been costly either in time, space or money. The council itself has its deliberations and studies once each month for a full morning, but when problems develop quickly an informal discussion among the members of the council who may be present in the hospital clears up the situation until the regular council meeting time. For the most part, the details of study and the actual carrying out of our analyses are the responsibility of the student health nurse.

The cost also has been very small. The total cost for the first fiscal year of operation approximated $2,575. Of this, $2,400 was the salary of the student health nurse. The rest was the cost of furnishing the office and providing some of the supplies. The budget for our second year of operation was $2,550, of which $2,400 was for the student health nurse and $150 for administrative expense for forms and field trips.

While even as small a budget as this may prove to be a very vital item in many hospitals, this certainly should not work to the detriment of the school that wishes to conduct a good student health program. Like McKinley Hospital, such hospitals request a grant for the operation of their health program from the Helene Fuld Health Foundation, 8 Baldwin Avenue, Jersey City, N. J.

FOUNDATION AID

Under a mutually satisfactory agreement, the salary of the student health nurse is furnished by the foundation, and the foundation's resources are available for certain special studies and field trip experience. This foundation, according to its published principles of operation, has been set up to aid schools of nursing, where such schools can qualify, in the exclusive development of their student health program.

Our experience with this foundation has shown us it is vitally interested in developing better student nurse health in the best way possible. It has always stood ready to cooperate with our school program, repeatedly stimulating us to greater endeavors in our work on the health of our students. Through the foundation we have been visited by representatives of four different schools of nursing throughout the East during the past year, and we stand ready at all times to share with any other approved school our experiences and program in developing better student nurse health.

We are looking confidently toward the future in our nurses' training program with a greatly enlarged school, because it is rather significant that since our program has been in full effect our student recruitment difficulties have been few and far between. The school of nursing committee, the board of governors and the administration now are familiar with problems that arise in furnishing to our students the finest personal health service that we have been able to develop. All of us are able to meet the parents of our students, the principals of the high schools from which the students graduated, the students' friends and the general public with the confidence that comes with the knowledge that our students receive a full measure of health as well as mental development.

Hospital Administrators:

As one of my good friends remarked, "Why be irritated if they try to copy your Baby Incubator . . . no one ever actually tried to imitate a failure."

We must admit that other Incubators may look like an Armstrong X-4, and if others have copied the general appearance of an Armstrong X-4 we can only feel flattered. Examine the details, however, and you can't go wrong, and besides, only one Incubator can carry the name "Armstrong X-4" etched on the name plate. And only The Gordon Armstrong Company can say to you, "Back of every Armstrong X-4 Baby Incubator is over 9,000 Incubators worth of experience." Maybe this is an idea for you to consider when you're buying Incubators.

MEDICAL REVIEW

Providing care for tuberculous patients in general hospitals

BENJAMIN P. POTTER, M.D.

OF THE 3,994 general and special short-term nonfederal hospitals in the United States in 1949, only 160—or 4 per cent—had tuberculosis services or departments. The efforts of the National Tuberculosis Association, the American Medical Association and the American Hospital Association, however, are bringing about an increasing cognizance by medical administrators of the problem, particularly of the ever-existing one of unrecognized tuberculosis. It is timely, therefore, that the question of minimal physical facilities and professional requirements for the care of the tuberculous in general hospitals be aired.

Appreciation of this question is closely interlocked with the recognition of the existence of unrecognized cases of tuberculosis and the fundamental soundness of admitting patients known to have the disease.

Administrators of hospitals who refuse admission of tuberculous patients do so in the belief that they thus safeguard other patients and hospital personnel. A six-year study,[1] comprising 699 student nurses at the Jersey City Medical Center, revealed that the great majority of the students who converted from negative to positive reactors did so during the first and second years and before they had their practical experience on the tuberculosis service. Of the 13 in this group who developed clinically significant lesions during training, only two had been on the tuberculosis service before the disease manifested itself. A progressive and definitive reduction in the infectivity rate of each of the classes in the six-year period was observed as the program for detecting unrecognized cases of tuberculosis was enhanced.

Infectivity rate among student nurses

Student nurse classes	% Positive on admission	Reactors on graduation
1934-1937	72	95
1935-1938	56	89
1936-1939	48	79
1937-1940	64	70

The survey of Plunkett and Mikal,[2] consisting of 4,853 general hospital admissions, yielded 128 cases (or 2.6 per cent) of the reinfection type of tuberculosis. Fifty-one admissions, or 1.1 per cent of the total, represented clinically significant or active lesions. More important is the fact that 27 of the latter group were not suspected to have had tuberculosis. In other words, in 0.6 per cent of the total the tuberculosis probably would have remained unrecognized had it not been for the chest x-ray.

The American Hospital Association publication[3] on "Management of Tuberculosis in General Hospitals" revealed 10 to 20 per cent of inactive lesions and 1.5 to 4.3 per cent active lesions among admissions.

Perhaps it will not be amiss to recount two specific examples of patients who were tuberculous at the time of admission. One spent several weeks on the medical service and the other divided a similar interval of time between the medical and surgical services of a general hospital before the correct diagnosis was made.

CASE HISTORIES

Case 1. M. A., white female, 41 years of age, was admitted on June 5, 1947, and discharged December 5, 1947. Her chief complaint was a productive cough of a few months duration. On May 29 she was admitted to one of the general hospitals in her community with chills, fever and nonproductive cough. A chest x-ray was taken, from which a diagnosis of lung abscess of the left lower lobe was made. She was placed on penicillin, followed by incision and drainage of the abscess. She did not do well following surgery, and the fever continued. Just before her admission to our institution, culture of the drainage material from the abscess, obtained during the operation, was reported positive for tubercle bacilli. The past and family history were nonrevealing.

Examination revealed an acutely ill patient, febrile, a draining pulmonary cutaneous fistula, from which was projecting a drainage tube instilled during the thoracotomy, and evidence of extensive bronchopneumonic infiltration in the left lung. Sputum was positive. The tube was removed, and she was placed on streptomycin therapy, to which she responded very favorably both clinically and roentgenographically. The pulmonary cutaneous fistula closed, sputum became negative, and remarkable resolution of the tuberculous bronchopneumonia took place so that at the time of discharge she had just a residual productive infiltrate of minimal extent in the left upper lobe.

Case 2. S. A., white female, 27 years of age, was admitted April 1, 1946, and expired July 22, 1946. This patient's illness dated back to July 1945, when she was diagnosed as having "walking pneumonia" by her physician. In August of the same year she became pregnant, and from that time on her symptoms seemed to become progressively worse so that by December 1945 she was admitted to a general hospital. She remained there

No Knife-Scraping Needed

. . . BECAUSE THERE ARE NO CREVICES

Seamless, sanitary top eliminates dirt-collecting crevices on all Blickman-Built Food Conveyors

● In ordinary food conveyor construction, wells are separate units, forming crevices where edges are joined to top deck. These crevices form natural traps for food and dirt particles. Usually, adhesions can be loosened only by scraping with a knife or other sharp instrument. Even then, deposits can't be completely removed. It is impossible to achieve real cleanliness. Extra time and labor are required every time the conveyor is cleaned.

Blickman's new seamless top construction, however, permits thorough sanitation. Round and rectangular wells are actually part of the top deck. Where edges of the wells meet the top, they form smooth, continuous, crevice-free surfaces. There are no recesses where dirt can lodge. Cleaning is quick and easy. Just wiping with a damp cloth keeps the highly-polished stainless steel surfaces bright, clean-looking, sanitary!

Blickman-Built food conveyors alone offer the seamless, sanitary top as standard construction. Investigate this—and other essential features, before you buy your next food conveyor.

CASE 1. White female, age 41. The picture at the left shows status on admission to the general hospital. Note the large cavity in the left upper lobe and pericavernous infiltrate extending from the hilum peripherally. The center picture is a lateral view showing the cavity in the left upper lobe. The picture at the right, taken after thoracotomy, shows the reduction in the size of the abscess cavity. Note the drainage tube in the cavity region. This patient responded favorably to treatment and was discharged after exactly six months in the chest hospital.

until March 13, 1946, when she was delivered of a premature infant. Because of the continued cough and development of night sweats during her hospital residence, sputum studies were initiated, which revealed tubercle bacilli.

Promptly after delivery she was transferred to the chest hospital. Except for an appendectomy in 1941, the past history was noncontributory, as was the family background. It is interesting to note that after more careful questioning the patient revealed that she had had a cough and expectoration in 1944, at which time x-rays revealed a pneumonic process of the left lower lobe. This film and those obtained when she was admitted to the general hospital were interpreted as "chronic pneumonitis." In the chest hospital she showed rapid deterioration and expired July 22, 1946.

The number of instances represented by these cases can be multiplied manifold in the experience of anyone who deals with chest conditions. One can readily visualize the tremendousness of the problem when the over-all picture is viewed. In this connection a recent survey by Dr. Nathan Smith and Dr. Eli H. Rubin of the Morrisania City Hospital, New York, revealed that of 1,287 patients admitted within a year and in whom admission x-rays showed gross abnormalities in the chest, 367, or 28.5 per cent, were found to have clinically significant pulmonary tuberculosis. More important, however, is the point that more than half of these patients were not aware that they had the disease.[4] (See HOSPITALS, December 1949, page 45.)

While it is true that some of these can be looked upon as unwarranted errors in diagnosis, the large majority do not lend themselves to an immediate diagnosis of tuberculosis because of the inherent clinical and roentgenographic similarities to other conditions that require time and differential tests to dissociate.

It is obvious, therefore, that even though known cases of tuberculosis are denied admission by the vast majority of the general hospitals, these institutions nevertheless house patients whose tuberculosis does not become manifest for some time after admission. Even if an adequate program of detection were to be universally adopted that would eliminate the obvious cases, there would still remain the group just mentioned.

Under these circumstances, the exclusion of known cases of tuberculosis appears most illogical and unfair since protective measures for both patients and personnel have to be a part of hospital management just as similar and even more rigid means are utilized in the contagious disease wards, which are provided without protest and considered essential.

The general hospital furthermore should recognize its obligation to the community in providing emergency care for those acutely ill with tuberculosis, temporary care for the more chronic cases awaiting admission to specialized institutions, and definitive surgical management for related or nonrelated conditions, and in functioning as a unit in the control of tuberculosis. To the professional personnel it owes the responsibility of providing teaching facilities in

A significant advance has been made in the field of infusion for the management of shock.

It is a solution of special biological grade gelatine which replaces lost circulation blood volume in the same manner as blood plasma and serum albumin. It is called Knox Special Gelatine Solution, Intravenous 6% — formerly known as Knox P-20 Solution.

In addition to the factors of unlimited supply and low cost, the Knox solution is safely nontoxic for injection in large quantities.

Long and extensive clinical experience in collaboration with the Blood Substitutes Subcommittee of the Committee on Medical Research of the National Research Council, has shown that this solution affords an effective nontoxic infusion colloid for use in shock management. It has been accepted by the American Medical Association's Council on Pharmacy and Chemistry.

It is a stable solution that can be stored without refrigeration. It has a carefully controlled osmotic pressure, with a colloidal particle size large enough to be retained in the circulation for effective periods.

tuberculosis that will equip both the physician and the nurse with knowledge and experience to serve humanity more expertly in the future.

The element of hazard undoubtedly will be raised, but it can hardly be offered as a legitimate reason for denying admission of known cases of tuberculosis so long as the existence of unrecognized tuberculosis is admitted. In reference to morbidity, it should be stressed that even those who believe that a risk exists admit that proper protective measures, distribution of professional personnel for service according to age and reaction to tuberculin, and use of BCG minimizes the hazard.

FACILITIES NEEDED

The facilities are twofold — physical and professional. In the former group one should consider, first, x-ray equipment for detecting obvious tuberculosis among hospital admissions. Whether the regular 14 x 17-inch films or the smaller films used in photoroentgenography are made available is really not important so long as a competent observer — and preferably more than one — views the roentgenograms. From an economic point of view, the photoroentgenogram is less costly than the 14 x 17-inch film but requires an initial cost that may be excessive for the smaller hospitals. The latter may find it much more practical to use the existing equipment. Hospitals having a competent chest consultant should utilize his experience as a part of the x-ray team to interpret the films; the smaller hospitals will do well to form a pool with a rotating team.

The problem of housing known tuberculous patients will differ with the size of the hospital and its location. Those having many admissions should form separate wards for open cases admitted either primarily for the tuberculous condition or in whom the tuberculosis is found as an incidental condition on the admission roentgenogram. Cases in which the tuberculosis is obsolete or arrested need not be segregated. Hospitals with small numbers of admissions of tuberculous patients may set aside parts of wards or a small number of rooms adjoining the larger medical wards. Finally, those hospitals that have only an occasional admission may use any available room that, if properly cleaned, may later be used for patients with nontuberculous conditions.

Since it is conceded that tuberculosis may be legitimately mistaken for nontuberculous conditions until complete studies have been made, it is recommended that wherever practicable patients admitted for nontuberculous conditions, acute or chronic, be housed in a separate division of the medical service in which provisions for both private and ward services are arranged.

Sufficient laboratory equipment and personnel should be arranged to carry the load that will be made necessary by the requirement that sputum of all patients admitted with chest conditions not suspected to be tuberculous be examined for tubercle bacilli. Such a requirement would assist materially in sieving out the tuberculous cases earlier.

Protective measures need not be as rigid as for other communicable diseases. A modified technique has been universally accepted and consists in the wearing of gowns and masks when working at the patient's bedside, emphasis on the necessity for frequent washing of hands, and proper collection and disposal of sputum.

COMPETENT STAFFING

Obviously, hospitals having tuberculosis services or departments will be staffed by competent medical chest specialists, thoracic surgeons and bronchologists. It is recommended that hospitals not having special chest services arrange for the services of an internist with special training in diseases of the chest to guide the diagnostic studies of chest conditions admitted on the medical service and for management of the known cases of tuberculosis. In view of the successful strides that have been made in the treatment of tuberculosis in recent years, the general hospital is no longer justified in giving mere domiciliary care of tuberculous patients until such time as they are transferred to specialized hospitals. The use of antibiotics and/or collapse therapy may be sufficiently urgent to require immediate induction to carry the patient over a crucial period.

The tuberculous patients should be utilized for practical demonstration of protective measures for student and graduate nurses and for other personnel in close contact with the patients, for didactic and bedside training of both the medical and nursing staffs in the management of the disease, and as

CACHEXIA in SURGICAL CASES

DESCRIPTION—Either before or after operation, the surgical patient may be pale, weak, underweight, easily fatigued, anemic, with signs of malnutrition such as loose skin, peripheral edema, cheilosis, glossitis, hyperkeratosis, petechial hemorrhages and polyneuritis.

ETIOLOGY—Anorexia; diet fads; inability to ingest or retain food; increased metabolism (as in fever, burns, hyperthyroidism, malignancy or major traumata); loss of food and fluids in vomiting, diarrhea, or inflammatory exudation.

LABORATORY DIAGNOSTIC AIDS—The serum protein may be low, but is usually normal. As a rule, observation of the patient's intake and the dietary history will indicate deficiency of the various nutritional elements.

DURATION—The duration depends on the correction of the underlying cause and the restoration of nutritional balance.

PROGNOSIS—The prognosis of the cachexia, unless directly due to an incurable disease, is good with proper treatment.

THERAPY—A high-calorie, high-protein, high-vitamin diet is of the highest importance. LEDINAC, 1 or 2 tablespoons 3 times daily, is a valuable means of raising the protein intake. The vitamin intake may be increased by PERFOLIN* Brand of Multivitamins Capsules.

Insofar as chest surgery is concerned, it should not be performed except in centers that have organized tuberculosis services, since it requires close cooperation of the internist, surgeon, anesthetist and bronchoscopist to carry out indicated operations without undue risk for the patient. Such a team is hardly to be expected to be provided by the hospital that has few or occasional admissions of tuberculous patients.

Weighing recumbent patients

Long-term bed patients may be weighed regularly on a ward-weighing machine for recumbent patients devised for use in the Royal National Orthopedic Hospital, Stanmore, England. This device, which has been so constructed that the patient can be weighed recumbent and, if necessary, in a plaster bed or on a frame, is reported in the British Medical Journal, December 24, 1949. All frames and plaster beds now are weighed before the patient goes onto them.

The machine weighs up to a maximum of 24 stone (107 kilograms) by two-ounce divisions, and the total capacity is shown on graduated indexes over which pass sliding balances, there being no loose weights whatever. The indexes are placed so that they can be read by a nurse of average height while standing, and they are at the center of the machine. The weighing mechanism is mounted on a trolley fitted with four rubber tired wheels, two of which swivel to enable the machine to be maneuvered in a very small space. The stretcher or platform is so designed that it cannot tip, and when not in use the ends fold over the center of the machine, thus reducing the size and making it more convenient to move about. At one end of the trolley is a folding push-bar, which acts as a convenient means of pushing or pulling.

When the machine is maneuvered into position beside the patient's bed the handle bar is pulled down, thereby raising the two back swivel wheels off the ground and lowering two legs, or supports. The front wheels can be secured by a hand brake and the machine is then completely stable. All knife edges and bearings in the weighing mechanism are of hardened steel, thus insuring the continued sensitivity and accuracy of the machine. This device is fully mobile.

A quaternary ammonium germicide, diaparene, developed for the prevention of diaper rash in infants has been shown to be effective in preventing and curing bed sores of incontinent adults. Treating incontinent patients at the Metropolitan Hospital, Dr. George Nagamatsu and colleagues of the New York Medical College found that deep seated ulcerations as well as lesser irritations responded favorably to application of dressings which had been soaked in this drug. The experiments were reported in the September-October issue of Geriatrics.

Applications of a water soluble ointment of the germicide to ulcerated areas were found to be particularly beneficial. The ointment effectively inhibits action of ammonia-producing organisms found in urine-contaminated dressings and garments. Skin excoriations are attributed to the action of free ammonia released by urea-splitting organisms on urine.

Dressings, diapers or towels impregnated with diaparene are particularly recommended in the treatment of postoperative patients who have been subjected to geni-to-urinary surgery and individuals suffering from disorders of the central nervous system, as well as the vast number of senile incontinents.

Sympathectomy study

Study of 100 patients who underwent sympathectomy for high blood pressure in Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, reveals that five years after the operation, results were favorable in only about 20 per cent. In this type of surgery, nerves of the sympathetic system are severed. These nerves control the organs that function unconsciously and may produce involuntary constriction of blood vessels and other effects.

Five years after operation, blood pressure was reduced to normal in 8 per cent of the patients, and significant reductions, although not to normal, were noted in an additional 13 per cent.

Results in the remaining 79 per cent were unfavorable. In 52 per cent of the group, blood pressures were not significantly lower than the preoperative levels, and 27 per cent of the patients were dead. Comparison of these results with those at the end of a two-year follow-up shows that the results of sympathectomy tend to become less favorable as the length of the follow-up period increases.

In final analysis of this group of patients, Dr. Kenneth A. Evelyn, Dr. Stewart R. Cooper and Dr. Fred Alexander concluded in the June 18 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association that the results of sympathectomy in the most favorable cases are valuable enough to justify continued interest in methods that will improve the selection of cases and in the development of techniques that will increase the effectiveness of this type of operation.

Maternal mortality

Provisional figures compiled by the American Medical Association for the 1948 maternal mortality rate show that the downward trend of 1947 is continuing. Indications now are that the rate of 1948 probably will not be more than 1.2 per thousand live births—a drop of 0.1 from the 1947 figures. Twenty-seven states have rates as low as one maternal death per thousand live births and Oregon has reported a low of 0.4.

In direct contrast to these figures, the highest rate in 1948 was 2.7 in Mississippi. Several of the southern states do have rates approximating the Mississippi figure but show promising rate drops.

Since 1933, the maternal mortality rate has declined from 6.2 to 1.2. The spread between the highest and lowest states has decreased from 7.2 in 1933 to 2.3 in 1948. A comparison of the figures for the United States as a whole show that the highest state rate in 1948 was 2.7 which was less than two-thirds of the 4.3 rating for the state which had the lowest rating in 1933.

Air conditioning, heating and ventilating in the hospital

SAMUEL R. LEWIS

THE AVERAGE LAYMAN'S conception of air conditioning is that it is merely artificial cooling of the air in warm weather. The approved engineering definition is that it is year round control of temperature, relative humidity, dust content, odor, and motion of the air.

When all the elements of the latter definition are considered, in relation to hospitals, it is readily apparent that it is in this field that air conditioning can be of the greatest possible service.

Unfortunately, however, many of our present day hospitals were constructed long before air conditioning had developed into anything like the science that it is today. Many of them are just now beginning to realize that a proper circulation of fresh, pure, comfortable air can be obtained without expensive outlays of new equipment.

A listing of the common faults that I have observed and a few suggested remedies may prove helpful to hospital administrators and engineers who are concerned about proper air conditioning in their hospitals.

HEATING OF PRIVATE ROOMS

In many general hospitals, the haphazard delivery of air to private rooms from outdoors by means of fans and ducts has not met with too much appreciation by physicians—especially when all of the private rooms have windows and when many of the corridor doors from these rooms are left open during much of the day.

It is possible for private rooms with steam radiators and easily opened windows to be quite satisfactory—as long as someone almost continually opens or closes the window or the radiator valve. Also, the radiator in each room must be large enough to heat the room when it is on the coldest side of the building on the coldest winter day. This means that the radiator is much too large for the room on ordinary days. The only recourse, then, is to open the window to allow the surplus heat to escape.

In one large hospital there is a pneumatic thermostat for every private room, which is supposed to open or close the radiator valve to maintain a desired temperature. It does not take long, however, for the thermostat covers to be loosened and for someone to throw the control valve in the thermostat to the extreme position—wide open if the room is cool, and entirely closed if the room is warm. Thus the thermostat degenerates into a tool for opening or closing the radiator valve more quickly than can be done by turning a valve handle.

One solution for problems of this sort is to employ water rather than steam for heating the radiators. The water temperature may be varied easily at the boiler room in relation to the weather. This eliminates the problem created by the 212° F. minimum temperature of steam. Our experience with water shows that it allows a decided reduction in fuel cost, due to elimination of the open-window method of temperature control.

Food preparation departments, toilet rooms, and operating rooms are provided almost universally with mechanical ventilation. If these rooms are not air conditioned, by the engineering definition, it is certain that someone will hear about it.

One common problem is created by windows. Toilet rooms and bathrooms may have windows, but in such areas they are of doubtful desirability because of the effect they have on the flow of air. If the doors to the corridors from toilet rooms are open, it is much nicer if air flows from the corridors through such doors; it is not so nice if the odors from the toilet rooms are forced into the corridors by wind blowing through the open windows.

Any hospital can afford to maintain a constant exhaust from odorous departments by means of fans. If there are no windows to short circuit the desired air flow, such exhausts will be effective.

KITCHEN VENTILATION

Open windows also may create problems in hospital kitchens. A bad relationship between the windows and other air intakes may be very objectionable. A cook who is overheated should not be expected to endure cool air currents from windows flowing around his back. Intelligent design in this case would exhaust plenty of air above ranges and ovens and would provide distributing ducts, filters and heaters to make the entering air comfortable. Air currents should face the cooks or possibly should rise around their bodies from openings in the floor.

One usually acceptable method for ventilating kitchens delivers a copious stream of new air into a dining room and then allows the air to flow from the dining room into the kitchen through grilles in the partition, through doorways, or through planned air ducts. If the dining room has air pressure above atmospheric, and if the kitchen has air pressure below atmospheric, it is unlikely that onions or turnips cooking in the kitchen will do any advertising in the dining room.

Air conditioning also can be of prime importance on obstetrics wards. We like to make the labor and delivery rooms as comfortable as possible, since the expectant mothers may be very busy and should not be handicapped. The desirable arrangement here is to do away with radiators and to install an all-indirect system. The air comes from outdoors. It is filtered for dust, freed of odor, and is warmed enough to do all the heating in winter or cooled enough to absorb all heat in excess of about 75° F. in summer. In addition, it receives moisture or is dehumidified to about 50 per cent relative humidity in any season.

For such provisions, it is imperative that there be a thermostat and an air-mixing damper in the air supply duct for each room. There also should be an outdoor thermostat that will maintain heat on about one-third of the air-tempering coils whenever the outdoor temperature is colder than 32° F., plus a watchdog thermostat near the supply fan that will not allow passage of air so cool as to cause drafts. This has the desirable effect of reducing the thermostat in each room to the role of a pilot. Its only authority is to ask for an air supply a little warmer or a little cooler than that in the room.

OPERATING ROOMS

Hospital operating rooms are the most closely observed and most severely criticized of all the departments. One important reason is the lurking possibility of explosions of anesthetic gases. To discourage sparking, the relative humidity in an operating room during surgery should be maintained as high as it can be without hindering efficient performance by the staff. It should not be appreciably less than 50 per cent at 80° F., even though the surgeon might perspire less in drier air. High relative humidity, of course, does not completely void the possibility of static electricity sparks. It is merely one of several deterring factors.

Current operating room designs for hospitals include refrigerated air conditioning for preparation rooms and recovery rooms. As to the latter, there is some evidence of more favorable reaction if, following an operation, a patient is not suddenly moved from a relatively cool operating room to some private room or ward when hot summer weather is prevailing.

The Engineering and Maintenance department is edited by Roy Hudenburg, secretary of the Council on Hospital Planning and Plant Operation.

Another area where air conditioning plays a vital role is in the contagious disease hospital or ward. The most enlightened practice in such units is to provide mechanical ventilation, using 100 per cent outside air that is refrigerated in summer and dampened in winter to control relative humidity. The contagious disease wing of one hospital employs radiant pipes imbedded in the plaster of the ceiling in each room, thus eliminating the hazard of dusty radiators or open windows. The trunk-line air supply ducts are above the corridor ceiling in each story and are large enough so that they can be cleaned easily. All branch air supply ducts in individual rooms can be cleaned by swinging downward a hinged diffusing grille over each bed. The entering air is filtered through viscous-coated nonorganic fibers to catch the large dust particles, and the remaining dust is magnetized so that it is picked up by high voltage electric grids. Each of these filters acts to reinforce the other.

So successful is the hot water radiant heating system in the contagious wing of this hospital that a movement is under way to convert the conventional steam radiator heating of the older departments to the same type.

GROWING PAINS

Numerous problems in air conditioning and ventilation have been created because too many hospitals have grown in relatively small increments. Usually this has made it necessary to stretch constantly the capacity of the original mechanical equipment. Frequent results have been poorly located air intakes and cramped machinery spaces. Air ducts often are so small that cleaning and maintenance are difficult. There are examples of incinerator chimneys so near to the outside air intakes that they cause fouling of the entering air. Also lacking in many hospitals are instruments for indicating and recording temperatures and pressures at central control points. Air ducts large enough to permit a man to enter for inspection and cleaning are decidely rare, and ducts with numerous easily-reached dust-tight cleanout doors are almost nonexistent.

Such influence as I can bring to bear will be in the form of a campaign for adequate machinery space and the installation of devices to ease the job of the maintenance engineer. A few suggestions along this line are as follows:

Air supply equipment should be job-assembled. If in an upper story it should be reached by an elevator —or at least a stairway and a door—rather than by a ladder and a hatch.

There should be doors and lights so that both sides of filters, cooling coils and heating coils can be seen. There should be gauges and thermometers. If equipment is started or stopped from some remote place, there should be telltales in the remote place to show that the orders have been carried out. If the equipment fails to respond, news of this fact should be transmitted to the control point.

Automatic temperature control should be supplied by a judicious blending of electric energy with compressed air and piped liquid. Electricity is a wonderful help, but automatic temperature control is more dependable when air at appropriate pressure, working against springs, is used to adjust valves and dampers.

When the electric motor that drives any fan ceases to operate, a damper in the ducts serving that fan should close tightly, and the damper should open when the fan motor starts. This may be arranged by a simple combination of electric and pneumatic service. Heat should be turned on to protect against freezing if the electric energy supply fails. This may be arranged most easily when pneumatic control is used.

Since hospitals maintain steam every day and night of the year, and since steam is efficient for the absorption refrigeration cycle, there is no reason why it should not be used for large air conditioning refrigeration. In some cases this scheme will cost less for investment and operation than will a central electric-driven centrifugal compression refrigerating plant.

Savings in maintenance and more satisfactory service will result if refrigerating apparatus is of the central type, than if it consists of many scattered local compressors. Most legal requirements limit the cooling coils for hospital air conditioning to water or brine or at least prohibit direct expansion cooling coils, no matter what refrigerant is used.

It has been found desirable to place the adjustable elements of operating room thermostats outside the rooms. In case of failure of any of the equipment, or a call to readjust temperature or relative humidity, the maintenance man then can serve without entering a sterile zone.

Since most hospitals have boiler plants with chimneys, it is a good idea to use the otherwise useless space below the level of the breeching for a built-in incinerator. The chimney top will be high above the most likely air intake and the draft will be strong enough to dilute the odors from burning matter.

In the interests of fire safety, there should be fusible link shut-off dampers in all ducts at firewalls and at each story. Smoke-detecting devices, such as photoelectric switches at supply fans or to leeward of air filters, are recommended. These devices would not only cause opening of the fan motor circuit but would alarm the engineer's office and open water sprays on the air filters. They are often used to forestall crowd panics in department stores.

A recent experience indicates that where air ducts must convey air at high relative humidity, the metal of the ducts must be chosen with great care. On opening ducts which had served operating rooms in which 60 per cent relative humidity was required, only galvanized sheet steel showed no serious deterioration. A black steel damper and heavy aluminum showed unsupportable oxidation. Replacement was required after only six months operation.

ENGINEERING and MAINTENANCE COMMENT

The recent institute

EIGHTY-FOUR HOSPITAL engineers and plant maintenance superintendents were registered in the Association's institute for hospital engineers recently concluded in St. Louis.

An administrator, at the conclusion of the course, remarked that in her opinion it was unfortunate that many of the engineers were not accompanied by the administrators of their hospitals. She feels that if the ideas of the various speakers on work organization in the maintenance departments and the benefits that can be derived from organization of preventive maintenance could be developed for the administrator, maintenance problems would be much more easily ironed out.

In order to permit some of the excellent material presented at the institute to become available to hospital administrators, the entire set of lectures presented has been permanently recorded. All of the material is to be gathered into a transcript of the institute, which will be distributed to those who attended and also will be placed on sale for the benefit of others who could not attend.

Some selected articles are to be abstracted or rewritten by the lecturers for use in this department.

This was the third five-day institute sponsored by the Association this year. The other two were on nonengineering subjects. In addition, there have been four two-day "refresher courses."

Grease fire hazards

One fire hazard that never has to be called to the attention of the dietitian or hospital administrator is the grease accumulation that, if neglected, can result in a nasty fire in the vent over the kitchen range. This hazard is particularly insidious because the vent is so hard to reach and usually is out of sight.

The grease vent fire is a particularly bad one because it is so inaccessible and in addition is extremely hot and smoky. Even if the grease vent is properly installed so that there is no immediate hazard to the building, the disruption of kitchen routine and possible panic among patients are the lightest penalties that can be paid. In the event of improper installation, much more serious consequences can be in store.

Installation of an automatic carbon dioxide fire extinguishing system, of course, is a minimum precaution, together with the installation of vent grease filters that can be removed weekly and washed in the dishwashing machine. In addition, however, vigilance on the part of kitchen employees is necessary. One means of calling this hazard to the attention of kitchen help is through the new poster illustrated in this column. Copies of this poster may be obtained from the National Fire Protection Association, 60 Batterymarch Street, Boston 10.—R.H.

This air conditioning story is written for you

"Merely a Matter of Air" is a non-technical discussion of the various ways to air condition office buildings, hotels, hospitals, and similar structures which contain many small individual rooms.

Although written for the layman who is interested in the air conditioning of a multi-room building, it contains a great deal of material for the architect and consulting engineer, too. It covers the development of air conditioning from the first central systems, through early unit arrangements, up to and including UniTrane, the last word in ductless air conditioning.

The importance of the two-circuit UniTrane room units with their independent control of room temperature, room humidity and ventilation air is shown by direct comparison with earlier attempts to achieve this ideal arrangement.

Publication of this type of material is consistent with Trane's long-time policy of doing everything possible to remove the mystery from air conditioning. A reading of this bulletin by interested laymen places them in a much better position to understand the multi-room air conditioning recommendations of their architect and consulting engineer. We're glad to provide copies of "Merely a Matter of Air" for any such people.

Information sources for study of the laundry department

JOHN GORRELL, M.D.

THE INSTITUTIONAL laundry has long been neglected by writers on management subjects. While much has been prepared on laundry department operation, the subject is rarely presented as it would be viewed through the eyes of top management.

It is said that education is largely a matter of knowing where to go for facts and how to apply them when obtained. This truism is especially applicable in an administrative study of the hospital laundry.

As a preliminary background for study of the laundry department, however, a current and basic knowledge must be had of the functions management expects from it. As a service unit, this department has no control over the work which comes to it, either as to quality, quantity, or time allowed for processing. These "load" factors, though not too often recognized as such, are of executive responsibility.

It is important to remember that the work done by the department is processing—not manufacturing. Therefore, if the executive is to plan intelligently, he must have an accurate insight into the services demanded, past, present and future.

Basically, the load on the laundry is the amount of linens to be washed and finished. The degree of soil is usually less important than the dry weight of the total load per day or week. In the average hospital, one-fifth (20 per cent) of the total weight leaves as tumble dried. This is the lowest cost method and probably has further unexplored possibilities. Nearly three-quarters (70 per cent) of the linens leave as ironed on a flatwork ironer. This is the lowest cost for finishing and may be done for a few cents per pound. Hospitals are fortunate that so much of their work can be thus handled. Such items are sheets, other bed linen, and much linen from the professional medical practices sections of the hospital and clinic.

Dr. Gorrell is an associate professor of hospital administration, Columbia University School of Public Health, New York City.

COSTLY 10 PER CENT

The final 10 per cent, the most costly of the total load, is hand finished, or pressed. It consists of such items as clothing and uniforms and requires almost as many employees to finish as does the other 90 per cent. Thus, volume-wise, it is of not too great importance in the washing and extracting phases, but in terms of finishing costs it is very substantial. Mere identification is costly on this finished work, whereas little or no piece identification is needed with the other work.

Good control and sound operation of the hospital laundry calls for a breakdown of the amounts of fabrics subjected to: (a) The total washing and extracting operations, and (b) the totals in each category of finishing. With this simple but essential data, the administrator should then study each item as to its need, use, design, purchase price, quality of fabric, and cost of laundering.

In planning the laundry, such load data is essential if the task is to be done correctly. Anything less constitutes poor management. A great problem is what to allow for expansion, both in terms of total load and shifting of load because of changes in patient care. The addition or closing of an outpatient department could throw off all previous calculations. Expansion requires consideration of both physical space and equipment.

If the administrator is to be fully acquainted with the laundry load and the major processes and equipment, some searching probably will be needed.

SOURCES OF INFORMATION

There is definite but limited published material dealing with various aspects of the laundry. The planning material is especially meager. Some of the other phases are quite well covered, especially from an operating point of view—that of the laundry manager. The productivity of top management time spent in reading the latter material may be questionable, however, unless a certain phase is of special interest.

Recently published for the laundry manager is an excellent manual by the American Hospital Association. A committee of competent persons has done outstanding work. Information about this manual may be obtained from the American Hospital Association in Chicago.

There are a number of conventional textbooks on fabrics, home economics, chemistry, and some phases of laundry plant operation. Many of these are rather old, and laundry experts feel that there is an astounding paucity of material in book form—virtually nothing from the executive's point of view.

Lists of technical books for laundry managers may be had from the Library of the American Hospital Association. The most extensive library (except for the Library of Congress) is found in Joliet, Ill., at the American Institute of Laundering. In this library are copies of virtually all texts on the subject, as well as complete files of periodicals, not only on laundry operation but also on all of the allied lines—from steam production to merchandising of commercial laundry services.

larger manufacturers of laundry machinery. Suppliers of chemicals and special equipment also have generally reliable data. With almost no exception, this material is presented from the sales standpoint and has been made to appeal especially to the laundry manager. This material should be obtained and studied, but little probably should be expected in terms of top management thinking on laundry planning and layout.

The laundry industry is fortunate in having an excellent trade organization, the American Institute of Laundering. The A.I.L. performs excellent work for its membership, which includes institutions as well as commercial laundries. Of course the bulk of the work is especially for the latter group, which carries the cost of the program. The A.I.L. unquestionably has the finest collection of published material on every phase of the laundry and its associated activities. Its special bulletins, on every phase of the laundry industry, make a stack two feet high.

While much of the A.I.L. material is not directly applicable to institutions (subjects such as sales, insurance, adjustments, and advertising), there is much of direct application that far more than justifies the relatively small fee charged to nonprofit institutions, $25 per year. (Some commercial laundries pay 10 or more times this fee, and yet have a smaller laundry.)

Trade journals are up-to-date and very useful. Few articles appear, however, that are of immediate top management importance. Their articles are usually for the operating man dealing with technical subjects, or for the laundry plant owner whose problems are those of taxes, sales, delivery, and many phases almost nonexistent in institutional laundries.

GOVERNMENT HANDBOOK

The U.S. Government Printing Office has one handbook of general interest. It was prepared especially for the veteran who is interested in getting into the laundry business.

Despite a widely recognized and bewailed shortage of written material, however, the laundry industry has not been as poorly informed as it may seem. Since the inception of the industry, laundries have relied heavily on personal contact. There are a number of such sources for data. The persons consulted should be selected for the type of problem to be solved, since all do not give an equally good answer to every type of question.

As in other fields, there are a few independent (of sales) experts in the laundry field. Some of them are widely known managers of outstanding laundries. Such men are intelligent and quite capable of understanding management's problems. There are a few individuals or firms whose sole business is consultation in laundry problems, whether operating or constructional.

If the administrator is especially fortunate and has an outstanding laundry manager in his institution, this is the first person to call upon. In fact, even if the laundry manager is not an expert, he should be consulted. A laundry manager can always offer helpful suggestions for the particular plant he operates.

There are a few schools where laundry managers are trained. In some, special efforts are made to accept only men who own or operate laundries in the business world. Many of these students are graduates of chemistry and engineering from the best universities, and are the kind of men who in the future will be heads of combined laundry and housekeeping departments in institutions. They are the men who will be qualified to sit in with management in over-all administrative problems.

The most outstanding school, with a good record of intelligent planning and exceptional people, is the school of the American Institute of Laundering. Each year a small class of selected young men is given excellent preparation. The program covers a number of months of fulltime work. Special bulletins and publications (some of which are available to A.I.L. members) provide the important and current information.

In Cincinnati, the Ohio Mechanics Institute also offers a program of training in this field.

A recent development in evening classes is the program at New York University, in New York City, where there are full evening courses on laundry management. These courses are well attended and have excellent representation from hospitals and institutions. In spite of the heavy schedule and the rather substantial fee, there were twice as many applicants as could be accepted in the academic year of 1949-50. The courses will be repeated in 1950-51. There is, unfortunately, almost no printed material from these courses. In the next year, however, some may be prepared.

Some colleges offer special services in the laundry field. Pennsylvania State College has an excellent division in its department of home economics, where research work is done on laundry problems (especially from a laundry manager's viewpoint). This service is available at a token charge to laundries in the state. Little written information is as yet published by this group. Their assistance is almost exclusively by their traveling representative.

MACHINERY FACTS

Information from laundry machinery manufacturers naturally relates almost exclusively to machinery. Special studies are prepared willingly for any projected new laundry or for the revamping of those already in existence. This work is carefully done and is handled by men with long experience in the field. The more time an administrator spends in outlining his problems to such representatives, and the greater care with which he evaluates the various suggestions, the better will be his final judgment.

Some suppliers (so called "allied trade" manufacturing and sales organizations) have excellent laboratories and some worthwhile public literature. Almost all of this relates to the use of supplies and minor equipment. The larger soap companies have excellent material, as do a few of the major distributors. Unfortunately, most of this, again, is in the realm of the washroom operation and not of immediate value to the administrator.

Experts, as previously mentioned, are available in several firms of private consultants. Other experts may be had from the American Institute of Laundering. Still others may be available through the laundry machine sales organizations. Men in the last group, of course, cannot be considered as being completely objective where their own products are concerned. They should not be placed in such an embarrassing position.

Some administrators have the habit of getting independent figures and recommendations from several leading firms, and then evaluating the data in terms of their own needs. At times, considerable differences may appear. Often these reflect the administrator's failure to outline the problem in the same specifications to the various parties. Written specifications of the problem are most helpful for everyone at any stage of the program.

USING THE SOURCES

The administrator who wants to do a good job with his laundry department will draw heavily upon the various sources mentioned above. He may want to send his assistant or his laundry manager to available places for training. For a very intelligent assistant, application might be made to the American Institute of Laundering for the one-week course offered there each year. Even though subjects such as transportation and sales enter the discussion, the alert administrative assistant can easily translate these into hospital problems. Also, the American Hospital Association has annual Laundry Institutes of five days duration. Usually these are for laundry managers and stress experience reports from the registrants as well as from the speakers. Top management problems, as such, are not the primary purpose of the institutes.

In New York City, the College of the City of New York operates a program for laundry managers. The administrator's problems are not included in the schedule because the classes are on a fairly informal basis and include laundry managers from hotels, hospitals and commercial laundries. The full year course at the American Institute of Laundering, likewise, is suitable for a top quality laundry manager, but not for top hospital management.

A final source of information, which the administrator should not overlook, would be that arising from visits to other hospitals for inspection tours and interchange of ideas. There are many hospital administrators who are qualified to give expert advice on laundry management problems—especially in hospitals where a new building has recently been constructed or an old plant remodeled.

LAUNDRY MANAGEMENT COMMENT

Contaminated linen

FROM TRENDS REPORTED in recent statistics, it is quite apparent that laundry managers of general hospitals are going to have to think more and more about the handling of contaminated linen.

Information collected for the 1950 Statistics and Directory Section of HOSPITALS (Part II of this issue) indicates that about 4 per cent of all general and special short-term nonfederal hospitals now are providing facilities for tuberculosis patients along with their regular services. While still a small percentage, this is a significant increase over past years.

Also suggestive of this trend were the numerous questions pertaining to proper handling of contaminated linens that were received in the Association's recent laundry management questionnaire returns.

Basically, contaminated linens call for a system where no one need touch the linen after it has left the isolation ward. The procedure recommended in the Association's laundry manual is built around this premise, as follows:

Sorting: All sorting should be done by the nurses on the isolation wards. Nurses should place the sorted articles in mesh bag containers, and the linen should remain in these bags until it is ready for ironing.

Loading: Nurses should place the mesh bags in specially prepared laundry baskets. These baskets should have removable canvas linings, with canvas covers, and should be plainly marked, "contaminated." Isolation techniques should be followed by the nurses in loading these baskets so that the baskets and outside areas of the canvas containers are not contaminated.

Transport to the laundry: Because the baskets themselves are free of contamination, the truckmen can transport them to the laundry without danger.

Transfer to the washer: At the laundry the specially marked baskets should be segregated and handled in one operation. The man responsible for loading the washers should be instructed to carry out the following procedure: (1) Open the canvas cover on the basket, and, with a pair of tongs, pick up each mesh bag and deposit it in the washer. (2) When the washer is loaded, treat its contents as any other load of washing. (3) Deposit the empty canvas bags in a washer designed for colored garments and treat as any other similar load. (4) Sterlize the tongs for future use.

For the employee who does this work, it is advisable that he be immunized against the common diseases and that periodic spot checks be made on him to be sure that he is observing all precautions.

Through this or a similar system, it is quite practical to salvage and launder even the most badly soiled gauze dressings.

Laundry institute

All arrangements have been completed for the American Hospital Association's laundry institute, which will be held June 26-30 at the University of California in Berkeley (across the bay from San Francisco).

Registrations will be accepted up to the very last day preceding the opening date, and accommoda-

BUYING HOSPITAL LINENS FOR MAXIMUM SERVICE

American Hospital Association's Hospital Laundry Manual is a practical guide to efficiency

EFFICIENT MANAGEMENT of your hospital linen room and laundry can save your hospital actual dollars every year. Hospitals all over the country have welcomed the American Hospital Association's Hospital Laundry Manual, published in 1949, which provides ready reference to standards of good laundry practice.

But the best methods of laundry management can be handicapped by linens of poor quality, or by linens inefficiently allocated and used. Hospital housekeepers should know the difference between various types of cotton fabrics. They should choose linens on the basis of their use and the care they will receive, as well as on the basis of original cost.

MUSLIN FOR LONGEST WEAR

Most hospitals have discovered that their best buy for standard ward use is high-count muslin (Type 140). This is stronger, heavier, more durable than Type 128 muslin, and it gives extra long service. Although its original cost is a few cents more per unit, it will wear longer and hence be more economical in the long run.

Both grades of Pacific Mills muslin sheets exceed standard specifications: Pacific Truth muslin has 130 threads to the square inch, providing economy in first cost and excellent wearing qualities. Pacific Extra-Strength muslin has 142 threads to the square inch, and is constructed to give the highest quality and longest wear attainable in a muslin sheet.

PERCALE FOR SOFTNESS, LUXURY

Percale has its place, too, in the hospital linen stock. It is special rather than standard equipment only because its original cost is somewhat higher than muslin. Percale is finer than muslin, however—softer, smoother, and of lighter weight.

For private patients or special cases where luxury is a consideration, percale comes first among the cottons. Pacific Combed Percale is the aristocrat of Pacific sheets—soft, smooth, white, yet amazingly long-wearing. The price is very little more than the prices of percale sheets made of carded yarns.

WHAT MAKES A GOOD SHEET?

There are many opportunities in the making of a sheet for quality variations to arise. Much depends upon the grade of raw cotton. The thoroughness of the carding, combing, and spinning operations determines the fineness and uniformity of the yarn . . . the smoothness and strength of the sheet. The excellence of Pacific sheets lies in the perfect balance which Pacific achieves between comfort qualities and strength. Pacific sheets give you the utmost softness, whiteness and smoothness compatible with strength, and the greatest durability compatible with comfort.

tions will be available on June 25.

During their five-day stay, registrants will be housed in regular campus dormitories, at the modest charge of $6 a day for double-room accommodations and $7 for single rooms. This will cover the cost of both room and board.

The tentative program drawn up includes topics that will be of interest to every laundry manager, regardless of his experience. Subjects have been chosen so that all phases of hospital laundry operation will receive an appropriate amount of discussion. Among those now on the agenda are: Personnel Handling and Training, Linen Control, Basic and Synthetic Fabrics, Classifying and Eliminating Textile Damage, Basic and Special Laundry Machinery and Equipment, Fundamentals of Washroom Practice, Planning the Laundry, Time and Motion Studies for the Laundry, Cost Accounting, Health and Safety in the Laundry, and Interdepartmental Relationships. For each topic there will be suitable discussion periods.

Printed below is a form that may be clipped out and used for registering in this valuable training program. (In filling out the form, it is recommended that a typewriter or a soft lead pencil be used instead of ink.)

Press covers and nets

Information contained in the latest report of the Veterans Administration Laundry and Textile Laboratory (Bedford, Mass.) may prove useful to hospital laundry managers.

In the April 12 bulletin, Technologist Hubert C. Normile reports: "Tests have been conducted with resin-impregnated nylon press covers in the laundry. These press covers have been compared with the regular cotton cover and an untreated nylon cover. The resin-impregnated nylon cover . . . has been found to be the most satisfactory. The cost of the cover is approximately twice that of the cotton cover and has been found to last three weeks, as compared to one week for the cotton cover. The use of the resin-impregnated nylon means not only a saving of material but also less changing of the press covers. The nylon press covers are considered to be somewhat easier to work with on the press than the cotton covers.

"Tests also were conducted on the durability of various types of laundry nets, including an all-nylon net, a cotton-nylon net . . . a net made from ramie, and a standard cotton net. The 24 x 36-inch nets were washed with a three pound load in each net. The all-nylon net was found to give the best performance. The mixed nylon-cotton net had lower resistance to wear and tended to snag more easily. The ramie net showed better durability than the cotton net, but its actual life could not be determined because of a manufacturing weave defect in the particular sample being tested.

"It was interesting to note that a cotton net which was not allowed to dry between washings was able to stand about five times the number of washings given to a net which was allowed to dry between washings. For example, the cotton net under test stood up quite well under 700 washings, whereas the usual life of a cotton net in laundry service is about 150 washings. This would seem to indicate that the drying and wetting cycle has quite a detrimental effect on the strength of the cotton fibers, if we leave out the possible effect of mildew and bacteria during the drying period. It is not believed, however, that mildew and bacteria account entirely for this detrimental effect. It would seem that a study should be conducted to determine the reason for this effect and whether the resistance of the fiber could be improved by suitable treatment."

High Ceilings?

In a laundry management question-and-answer session at the recent Tri-State Hospital Assembly in Chicago, the question came up as to how high a ceiling must be to permit the use of self-unloading washers and overhead-type monorail extractors.

Contrary to the belief of many laundry managers, ceilings do not have to be above normal height to permit use of such equipment. According to the representative of a laundry machinery company, rails can be installed in laundry plants which have ceilings of only 11 feet and, in cases where foundations permit slight sinking of machinery, as low as 10 feet.

A good supply record system can improve the buying operation

ROBERT H. NIEMAN

A GOOD SYSTEM of requisitioning, ordering, inventory control and invoice approval is a prerequisite to the efficient operation of the purchasing department. The New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center has a comprehensive, carefully-planned system. Although such a system could not be adopted by a small, or even medium, sized institution, some of its more important aspects can be incorporated, as has been done at St. Luke's Hospital in New Bedford, Mass.

In considering the merits of purchasing department forms and systems, careful study should be given as to what are the proper and essential functions of the purchasing agent and department. What kind of a picture do we want the records to show? What are the basic checks and balances between the director, the buyer and the controller in the matter of the approval of invoices? How and when should a requisition flow to the buyer? Through whom? What portion of the statistical analysis should be his responsibility and what portion that of the accounting department? What is the most efficient way of handling the requisitioning of supplies by the various ordering departments? Is the printed requisition of enough value to warrant the cost of printing? When should a supply catalog be issued, what should it contain, and to whom should it be made available? In short, what are the real criteria of any good purchasing system?

Unless these preliminary questions are given real thought, an imperfect system may be started. Once set up, this may be difficult, embarrassing or physically impossible to change at a later date.

The establishment of a proposed standard of purchasing and supply procedure, (including storekeeping, inventory control, invoice checking and receiving) that would come to be acceptable to all institutions of comparable bed capacity would be a good idea. Although it is difficult to devise any such system of universal application when considering the very great diversity of routines now being followed by different hospitals, it is striking that there are so many different methods in practice today for accomplishing the same job. Some institutions employ two people to perform an operation that one person handles easily in another.

HABIT PATTERNS

There are many reasons for these differences, owing in part to local "habit patterns" peculiar to each institution. The major contributing cause of these differences, however, is the improper concept of the essential functions of the buyer's task.

For example, in one institution it is unnecessary for the purchasing agent to be at all concerned with the approval and checking of invoices. The accounting department, which has been provided with a copy of the purchase order, merely matches its copy of the purchase order with the bill and a copy of the receiving report. If the items received have been recorded as received by either the storekeeper or receiving department, as evidenced by a properly filled-in receiving report, and if the price on the bill agrees with that on the purchase order, the buyer does not even have to see this bill. It is automatically checked by a person in the business office or accounting department and passed for formal approval to the controller or comparable executive. The only time it is necessary for the buyer to check the invoice is when a purchase order has been unpriced or if the price on the bill does not agree with that on the purchase order.

In another institution the buyer is required to check every bill and also to verify the extensions.

Of course, with the current financial problems facing hospitals, manpower is an important factor, and a tolerable degree of flexibility should be sought in all of the duties of the service departments and office personnel. At the same time, however, it would be a significant contribution to the field in general if a job analysis of the supply and purchasing picture were made and pointed toward future standardization of procedures. Before this could be done, ideas, present systems and experiences would have to be exchanged fully, and decisions and recommendations of such a committee would be made at a later date.

It follows also that as the purchasing and supply picture is so closely related to the other fiscal matters of the hospital, it is a problem that vitally concerns the administrator and assistant administrator, as well as the purchasing agent. For example, if a purchasing system were suddenly modified at any given step, it would probably mean either lightening or adding to the work load in another direction. This makes it a personnel matter as well as one merely affecting the buying operation itself. In the final analysis, a code of primary and secondary objectives and responsibilities for a purchasing agent might well be made.

The purchasing and supply system in practice at the New York Hospital is based, for the most part, on accepted methods and practices followed in the industrial and commercial fields. With certain modifications, we have tried to install such a system at St. Luke's Hospital within the already existing framework. An outline of the basic criteria for the proper execution of the purchasing procedure and the present system currently in effect at the St. Luke's Hospital follows.

BASIC OBJECTIVES

Some of the basic objectives a buyer must expect from any system are these:

A—Inventory items

1. To know when to buy.
2. To know how much to buy.
3. To know from whom to buy.
4. To have the best possible purchase history record and perpetual inventory record of all items.
5. To know at once when an item has been received as specified.
6. To simplify the approval and checking of accounts payable.
7. To set up a fair and adequate internal flow of supplies to the various ordering departments.

B—Noninventory items. To record transactions so that they may have full information readily referrable at any future time.

A—1, 2, 3, 4. The perpetual inventory card is much the same in most organizations. It serves to record the receipts and issuances of any item on such a list and should show at a glance if the stock on hand has reached an order point. For most practical purposes we use an order point of two months, although the location of a hospital, market conditions and availability of item all are modifying factors in such a consideration.

It is possible to use a combination card that will show both vendor's record of purchase detail and the perpetual inventory picture instead of a separate card for each purpose. The choice of one card is indicated if the entire record is kept in one department, such as the purchasing office, the storeroom or the business office. Where, as in larger hospitals, the purchase record detail is kept in the purchasing office and the inventory in the storeroom, two cards are necessary.

We maintain two cards at St. Luke's in one department, purchasing, and they are filed with the purchase card on top, as the card file flap is opened, and the inventory card on the bottom. Thus the complete pedigree and history of the item is instantly seen. When we flip back the card we see: (1) The unit price, (2) stock on hand, (3) the order point, (4) all past vendors, (5) the amount ordered in the past and (6) the complete specification of the item.

The Purchasing department is edited by Leonard P. Goudy, purchasing specialist.

The buyer goes through the perpetual inventory cards by material groups, completing a cycle of all cards within a three-week period, and orders all items that have reached an order point. (It is particularly important that the buyer or whoever does this job keeps himself up to date on all the uses to which each article is put. The Scylla of overstocking and the Charybdis of being short are two real hazards of this task.)

The buyer then issues a requisition, which is typed on an order form and duly mailed out. This requisition, if it be for inventory items, the initiation of which is in the purchasing office, is then filed by product group classification. The groups are: (1) Medical and surgical, (2) housekeeping, (3) stationery, (4) foods, (5) linen and clothing, (6) forms and (7) drugs.

The purchase order form is in quadruplicate: No. 1 — vendor's copy; No. 2—purchasing copy; No. 3—accounting copy, and No. 4—receiver's copy. The No. 2 open order copies are filed alphabetically over-all and are numerically subfiled. When complete they are filed in closed order file the same way, together with the No. 4 copy. The open No. 3 copy of the purchase order is also filed numerically within alphabetical order and, when complete, is attached to the invoice and copy of the receiving report. After payment of the bill, it is filed in the voucher file alphabetically by months.

The No. 4 copy is returned, when completed by the receiving department, to the purchasing office where it is attached to the No. 2 copy and filed as described above.

The internal requisitions are made out by each ordering department head at specified intervals as follows: General ward supplies, every other Tuesday; breakage, daily; sugar, salt, coffee, tea (to wards), every Monday; housekeeper, Friday; dietary—foods, daily; and dietary—miscellaneous, Saturday.

These then are routed to the assistant director for editing and approval and are next sent to the storekeeper for filling. After filling they go to the purchasing office for entry on the inventory cards and filing according to department.

In some hospitals, where the perpetual inventory is kept in the storeroom, these requisitions are naturally retained there for posting. It is not of great importance, however, which department maintains this record. In either case a clerk usually does the work, and whether her salary is charged to stores or to purchasing does not matter to the administration since both departments are nearly always grouped together organizationally. The question of "whose job is it?" is purely academic as it is a job to be done and whatever "habit pattern" has been established should serve adequately.

A—4, 6. All goods are received by the general stores-receiving department. The storekeeper examines the articles, checks quantities against packing lists and fills out a receiving report. He retains one of these copies in his own department and sends the other two to the purchasing office. The purchasing office attaches one of these copies of the receiving report to the invoice and one to the accounting department copy of the purchase order, thus providing a complete audit history of the transaction. This particular phase of the system is the one preferred by most of the country's leading firms of hospital auditors and accountants. The other copy of the receiving report is used to post the receiving data to the perpetual inventory card and is then thrown away.

B—1. For noninventory purchases, such as equipment and special items from every department, the same requisition form is used. It is initiated in duplicate by a deand more to come!

As this magazine goes to press, officials of the Miami Valley Hospital at Dayton, Ohio, are announcing that their campaign to obtain additional building funds has exceeded its goal by almost $400,000.

This victory is a tribute to the Board and Staff of Miami Valley Hospital, and to the citizens of the Dayton area who over-subscribed a $2,225,000 campaign for the same institution in 1942.

We are proud to have directed both of these outstanding successes.

partment head or supervisor, with the duplicate being retained by the initiating department. Then it is approved for purchase by the director or assistant director and sent to the purchasing agent for purchase. After the order has been placed, the original of this form that is sent to the purchasing agent is filed in the purchasing office according to the initiating department.

With these requisitions filed in such a manner, ready reference is had to all previous purchases on information relating to price, specifications, spare parts and where purchased.

The "invitation to bid" form is used in the main for the purchase of foods, linens, forms and stationery supplies. We consider purchasing on bid a good practice (1) when the list of items is sufficiently large to effect a substantial saving in price differentials for articles of equal quality specification; (2) for equipment items of large expenditure, and (3) as a periodical test for all classes of items to keep suppliers' "pencils sharp."

The bid form is less useful when (1) a small number of items is involved and (2) prices are normally stable or known.

There is a limit to the number of vendors who should receive the bid invitation form. While it is certainly poor purchasing policy to rely on only one source continually, it is also unwise to spread out one's business too widely. This must be based intelligently on the average volume done in any one particular product group, as it is much more desirable to have three or four good sources who are interested in obtaining the business and will give good service than to have too many sources who, because of the necessarily small amount of business they will receive, eventually will not put forth the effort to give as good service, or possibly as good a price, as to a more valued account.

The above system as outlined is similar to all others in one respect —it is not perfect. The problem of all such systems is to provide the maximum of information and tools to do the complete buying job with a minimum amount of labor and expense.

PURCHASING COMMENT

Diathermy equipment

SOME TIME AGO, it was mentioned that the Federal Communications Commission would be publishing a bulletin on medical diathermy equipment. This bulletin is now available, and copies may be obtained by writing to the Washington Service Bureau of the American Hospital Association, 1756 K Street, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.

It will be noted in the bulletin that references are made to the shielding of rooms as an alternative to the purchase of new equipment. This is referred to, however, as an expensive and not altogether satisfactory alternative.

These same restrictions were placed on the use of diathermy equipment in Canada several years ago. According to the best information we can obtain, all hospitals decided against the shielding of rooms, since it was bound to be not only cheaper but more satisfactory to replace equipment.

Further information about products referred to in these columns may be had by writing to: HOSPITALS, Editorial Department, 18 E. Division Street, Chicago 10.

New recommendations

The National Bureau of Standards is about to print two new simplified practice recommendations—one for surgical sutures, the other for clinical utensils. Hospitals desiring to obtain a copy of these publications should write to the bureau immediately and have their names placed on the mailing list. The address: National Bureau of Standards, U. S. Department of Commerce, Washington 25, D. C.

Convention exhibits

Those who are chiefly interested in the exhibits at the annual meeting of the American Hospital Association will no doubt be pleased to learn that more exhibitors than ever before have booked space for the 1950 convention. It is likely, too, that much new equipment will be on display.—L. P. G.

Current price trends

MORE AND MORE economists are beginning to show comfortable optimism in their periodic reports on the nation's economy. Production is high in automobiles, in steel and in the building industry. Unemployment is beginning to taper off. Spending by consumers, producers and government is likely to continue at the high level already established this year.

Prices probably will continue to be stable. Figures reported by the Bureau of Labor Statistics in Washington have stayed almost monotonously close to the level established early in the year.

At the beginning of May, the wholesale price index for all commodities was 153.7 per cent of the 1926 "normal." This was 2.1 per cent above the index at the beginning of 1950 and 1.2 per cent below last year's comparable month.

The slight rise in prices shown during the last weeks in April was attributed to seasonal increases in demand and to resumption of normal activity in the wake of the coal strike.

One of the few major upturns in prices appeared in markets for grain products. Price increases ranging up to three cents a bushel were noted for the period in corn, barley and wheat. The Department of Agriculture lopped 121 million bushels off its 764 million bushel estimate for the 1950 winter wheat crop. This comes as a result of bad weather and insect pests that have plagued farmers in the grain belt. No heavy price increases are predicted, however, in view of the gigantic 1949 grain surpluses.

Prices for hogs and steers dropped to a new low during the month of April—$15.87 and $27.50 per hundredweight, respectively. The decline for steers was more than 13 per cent of the $31.75 high established in December of 1949. By the beginning of May, however, prices for hogs and steers had returned to $17.25 and $28.75, respectively.

In markets for food purchasers, prices were slightly higher, but there were some reductions. On April 10, prices of some of the leading brands of coffee were lowered by two cents a pound. One week later, the Agriculture Department announced that it would no longer maintain a floor under prices of chickens and turkeys. Price increases were noted for several other important commodities. Manufacturers of a leading brand of shortening raised their prices by 1.5 cents a pound; the price of canned fruit cocktail was advanced 20 cents a case on April 20, and the support price for ungraded eggs—25 cents a dozen—was extended through this month.

A contradiction appeared in textile market prices. While prices for finished fabrics declined—print cloth reached a new low of 14 cents a yard—prices for raw wool and raw cotton showed increases. The Department of Agriculture announced a new support-price for 1950-crop wool of 45.2 cents a pound, an increase over 1949 of 2.9 cents a pound. This paradox may resolve itself into higher textile prices later this year.

The continuing boom in the construction industry has been accentuated by the advent of spring, and indications are that there will be no slacking off in the next few months. Prices are expected to rise somewhat, but not drastically, due to the high inventories reached in late 1948 and early 1949.

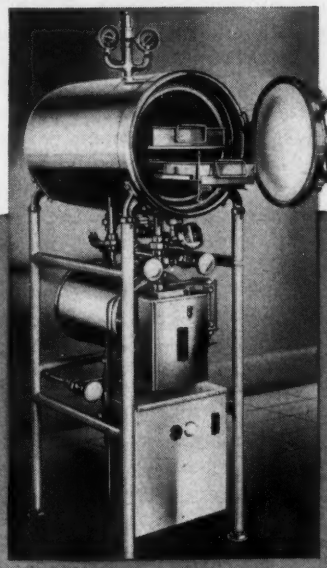
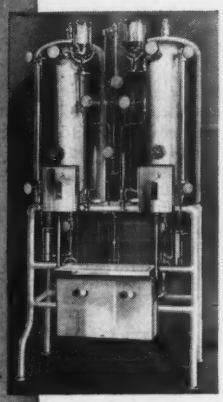
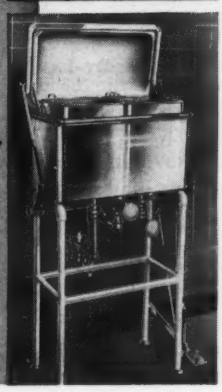
Do you know this important fact about Scanlan-Morris sterilizers?



MONEL PROTECTION. Important features of this Scanlan-Morris cylindrical pressure sterilizer are its inner shell and steam jacket, its sturdy trays and racks. Made of Monel, they resist fatigue and corrosion.



LONG-LASTING SOURCE for sterile hot and cold water. These sterilizers have seamless tanks of Monel. Corrosion-resistant all the way through, Monel never needs painting, coating or costly periodic maintenance.



ADAPTABLE. Made with body, cover and trays of rugged, corrosion-resistant Monel, models of Scanlan-Morris instrument sterilizers are available for heating by direct steam, gas, electricity — and even kerosene. This one is heated by steam.

All these sterilizers are "immunized" against metallic ills.

They are designed to withstand heat, pressure, fatigue, water, steam, and hospital solutions.

They are built to give you dependable, 24-hour-a-day service year in, year out.

They are made of MONEL®.

What this means

In Monel, you have a solid, corrosion-resisting Nickel Alloy. Being solid, it protects your sterilizers for life against chipping, crazing or peeling.

The protection you get from Monel never ends because a surface becomes marred or wears away; the "surface" of Monel actually extends through the full thickness of the metal.

What's more, Monel is stronger and tougher than structural steel. It is hard and smooth. It resists gouging. Even your heaviest loads of bulky, keen-edged surgical instruments won't damage Monel's attractive satiny finish.

Maintaining sanitation

Monel is easy to keep bright and shining. Most of the time, plain soap and warm water will do the job. Occasionally, you may want to use a mildly abrasive cleanser or detergent. Go right ahead—it's safe. Remember, there's no scrubbing away Monel's good looks—they're permanent.

Monel construction is now available in Scanlan-Morris cylindrical pressure-type surgical supply sterilizers, instrument sterilizers, solution sterilizers, and water sterilizers. It is standard construction materia in Scanlan-Morris non-pressure boiling-type instrument and utensil sterilizers.

...ALWAYS A WISE CHOICE FOR HOSPITAL EQUIPMENT

THE LITERATURE

Some older publications still contain helpful information

SOURCES OF HELPFUL information on the varied aspects of hospital operation are the manuals and bulletins of the American Hospital Association. A complete collection of these publications has been sent to many hospital meetings during the past year for examination by those attending the sessions. A frequent comment has been, "I do not believe our hospital has this particular publication —was it sent to members?"

Almost all of the Association's publications are distributed immediately to institutional members. Additional copies may be purchased by institutional members and by personal members of the Association.

On page 286 of the Statistics and Directory section of HOSPITALS for June—Part II of this issue—is a complete list of all the publications now in print. It is suggested that these pages be marked for future reference, for checking titles of Association publications.

In this section, attention is called particularly to the following manuals and bulletins, which were published not too long ago. The information is still accurate to help solve some of the perennial problems of hospital administration.

CARE OF PSYCHIATRIC PATIENTS IN GENERAL HOSPITALS. 79 pp. 1940. A statement, prepared by the Council on Professional Practice, of the program and procedures that the general hospital must develop in caring for psychiatric patients.

FUEL CONSERVATION IN HOSPITALS. 62 pp. 1945. A manual that outlines economy in the hospital powerhouse. It is written for the administrator as well as the engineer.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE INSTITUTE ON HOSPITAL PLANNING. 247 pp. 1948. A transcript of the papers and discussions at the Institute on Hospital Planning held in Chicago in December 1947. The material is pertinent to the problems of construction and remodeling.

HOSPITAL SCHEDULE OF INFORMATION. 40 pp. 1945. A detailed questionnaire developed by the Commission on Hospital Care, used by nearly all state agencies as a schedule of hospital information and a valuable tool in analyzing the individual hospital.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON INCLUSIVE RATES. 29 pp. 1945. A study of the place of inclusive rates as a method of charging hospital patients, with suggested methods for establishing such a system.

THE GOVERNING BOARD OF THE HOSPITAL, and THE ORGANIZATION OF THE MEDICAL STAFF. These two chapters from "The Individual Hospital," 1945, have been reprinted and have had wide distribution. The first outlines the functions of the board of trustees and its relationship to the administrator and the medical staff. The second discusses the organization of the medical staff, with special emphasis on the smaller hospital.

MEDICAL RECORD ADMINISTRATION. 267 pp. 1948. An introduction to and orientation of medical records for the administrator and the medical record librarian, compiled from the writings of leaders in the field.

MODEL CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS FOR A VOLUNTARY HOSPITAL. 35 pp. 1947. A model constitution with suggested wording and descriptive material to assist the hospital in fitting the model to local circumstances.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON NECROPSIES. 154 pp. 1938. A manual that gives full information as to necropsy procedure, how to secure permission, how to obtain proper relationships to stimulate this important scientific function.

Inquiries about books reviewed in the Literature department should be addressed to the American Hospital Association Library — Asa S. Bacon Memorial, 18 E. Division Street, Chicago 10. The department is edited by Helen V. Pruitt, librarian.

Nursing manual

MANUAL ON HOSPITAL NURSING SERVICE. 99 pp. 1950. $1.50. Available from the National League of Nursing Education, 1790 Broadway, New York 19.

A complete revision of an earlier manual has been prepared by a joint committee of the American Hospital Association and the National League of Nursing Education. Copies have been sent to all institutional members of the Association. The manual presents basic principles relating to organization, administration, personnel, facilities and support of the nursing service department. An early issue of HOSPITALS will carry an article based on the information included in this publication.—H. V. P.

Manual for meetings

THE ANNUAL MEETING, COUNCIL OF JEWISH FEDERATIONS AND WELFARE FUNDS. 25 pp. Published by the Council, 165 W. 46th Street, New York City 19. 75 cents.

This manual was prepared by the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds to help its members in organizing and conducting their annual meetings. Although it was not written for use by the hospital field, the adaptation and application of its principles can be easily made to fit meetings of hospitals, auxiliaries and trustees.

For the inexperienced staff worker into whose lap is dropped the complete responsibility of annual meeting preparations, this book is invaluable, for it presents in outline form every procedure necessary. It also includes an appendix with illustrations of sample invitations, awards, reservation cards, reports and publicity materials. Even the veteran conventioneer may gain a few new ideas, such as the master timetable for scheduling preparations and the annual award presentation.

The importance of deliberate and careful planning to insure a successful meeting is repeatedly emphasized. The book would be of great practical value to groups that have annual meetings on their agenda.—H.T.Y.

UROKON® SODIUM 30%

– a new Contrast medium for Urography

FEW SIDE REACTIONS

The growing preference for Urokon as a urographic contrast medium is largely due to its low toxicity. Urologists and radiologists now using Urokon routinely are confirming clinical findings that side reactions with Urokon are extremely low (see point 1).

6 IMPORTANT FACTS ABOUT UROKON®

1. FEW SIDE REACTIONS. Clinicians at the University of Michigan report: "Urokon produces reactions in only 19% of the patients, a percentage far less than that of either Medium B (36%) or Medium A (62%)."

2. HIGH QUALITY PYELOGRAMS. In the studies at Michigan, Urokon produced 64% "good to excellent" pyelograms, while comparable figures for other media were 53% and 47%.

3. QUICK PICTURES. Washington University School of Medicine Clinicians report: "Urokon appears earlier after injection and disappears more rapidly than Medium B. . . . even when the rate of injection is 4 minutes." The investigators report that ". . . the pyelographic study may be completed in a shorter period of time with Urokon . . ."

4. LOW TOXICITY. Animal tests on Urokon at the University of Michigan showed that, "four to eight times the amount per kilogram of body weight, necessary to visualize the kidneys in man, produced no toxic symptoms."

5. ECONOMICAL. Urokon is available at prices comparable to other media. The profession can take advantage of Urokon's safety and high quality performance without paying a premium price.

6. AVAILABLE. Urokon is immediately available in convenient packages of one, five and twenty ampuls of 25 cc each.

Applying airline food service ideas to hospital dietetics

FRANK R. BRADLEY, M.D., F.A.C.H.A.

THE APPLICATION OF "airline type" food service to patients' food service in the hospital was inaugurated by the department of dietetics of Barnes Hospital as a research experiment last September. The possibility of reducing the serving time on our busy nursing units, combined with the opportunity to serve attractive and tasty menus, seemed obvious.

The airlines pioneered in this type of food service when they began serving meals aloft in 1929. To meet the requirements for lightweight equipment and limited space, they developed special equipment capable of holding food at correct temperatures for unpredictable lengths of time and for variable conditions. Naturally this service appeared to the administration of the hospital and to the dietary department to be an economical and functional method that could be adapted for use in the hospital.

Following a lead received through an article published in the Saturday Evening Post, September 27, 1947, we visited the Hull-Dobbs Airline Catering Service in Memphis. We were impressed with the applicability and immediately tackled the problem.

After this investigation and study of the airlines' service, our first difficulty was in assembling the equipment necessary to begin the experiment, and it was only after much correspondence that we obtained the list of equipment, which is a composite list used by most airlines and is not at all standardized. No single company yet is featuring all of these items.

The list of equipment includes: Snack carrier, tray carriers, electric hot food ovens, beverage jugs, silverware, plastic compartment trays (white), plastic plates and hot tops (white), plastic salad bowls (coffee color), plastic 4-ounce cups (coffee color), plastic 8-ounce cups (coffee color), stainless steel removable handles for 8-ounce cups, plastic 2-ounce creamers (red), plastic dessert plates (coffee color), cellophane packets to hold silver, individual paper packets of salt, pepper and sugar, white doeskin dinner napkins and paper place mats for trays (aqua color).*

After we had assembled the equipment, through the courtesy and help of the Trans World Air Lines Catering Service at Lambert Field in St. Louis, we began the experiment on one private-patient division on September 19, 1949. The experiment on this 15-patient division was immediately successful as far as public relations with the patients, medical staff and nursing staff were concerned. It was felt that if this method and these menus were satisfactory to the private, deluxe patient, they could be utilized throughout the hospital for all economic groups of patients. The dietary department was enthusiastic about the experiment and could not work rapidly enough to keep up with their new ideas and changes.

The airline type of food service is a centralized food service. Specially adapted food carts are used instead of conveyor systems as in some centralized services, but the airline type affords the same direct control of quality and quantity as the completely centralized service. We feel certain that this type of food service will enable further centralization of food service in many hospitals, as it did in ours, for the reason that the trays are set up in large part in the main kitchen instead of in the serving pantries on the patient floors.

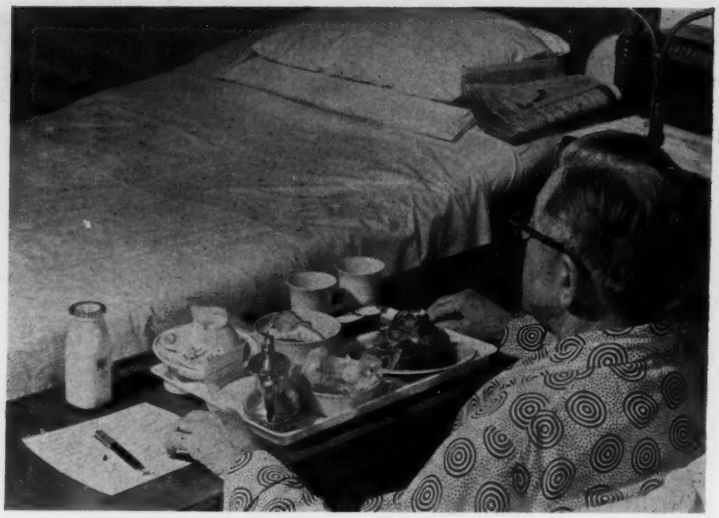
The application of the airline type of food service and menus to hospital food service for patients involved the use of new equipment design and materials by the dietary department. It is not standardized among the airlines and will not be standardized in hospitals for some time to come. That is one of the advantages, for it is so flexible that it can be adapted in detail to many individual diets.

We feel that it will always be important, especially at first, that the experiment be under the direct supervision of a dietitian who is personally interested and has the ability to give special training to the diet maids or other subsidiary workers involved in the service. Also, she should be willing to develop the important "fast-time" sense that is so necessary to volume if serving time can be reduced and the patient served a meal either hot or cold as desired.



THE PATIENT receives his meal on the same type of tray used by airlines. Use of special equipment means that his cold food is cold and his hot food is hot.

Hot or cold food may be served. The patient has a selective menu. The tray is assembled in the main kitchen with cold foods and is placed in a tray carrier that has been pre-cooled by means of a dry ice compartment. The patient's choice of hot food is placed in serving plates and stored in electrically heated insulated ovens. If hot food is to be added to the tray, this is done on the nursing division. Beverages are placed in special beverage containers or jugs, hot or cold, specially insulated. All of this equipment is placed on a specially designed food cart, which is a modification of the present food cart, with electrical connections for heat. This cart carries the food from the kitchen to the nursing division, where supervised pantry maids completely assemble the trays and serve the patients.

The "snack carrier," as it is called by the airlines, is a cabinet with five drawers, which can be cooled by a dry ice compartment. At present, the airlines carry their between-meal snacks in the drawers, whereas we have found the carrier to be a convenient means of transporting our hot plate covers, additional pieces of equipment, and mid-meal nourishments to the serving area. The carrier is loaded on the specially designed tray cart.

One of the surprising and pleasing outgrowths of our research is that we have a function that tends to eliminate the serving pantries on the nursing division. This is a tremendous gain in space that can be converted to either patient rooms or other service facilities. We discovered this through the fact that we are able to serve three meals entirely without a pantry.

The needs of the nursing department, however, require drinking water, iced in most parts of the temperate zone, cracked ice for Guest Home, Odd Fellows Home Association of the State of Indiana, Greensburg.

OPERATING ECONOMY was only one of the advantages cited by Superintendent E. C. Welker after six months' experience with GAS. In his comment Mr. Welker also stressed the cleanliness of the kitchen, the improved working conditions, and the increased efficiency of the food service operation.

These are just some of the advantages of GAS and modern Gas Equipment for volume food preparation. Others will be evident when maintenance costs for Gas Cooking Tools are compared with similar expenses for other cooking equipment—as food service requirements grow and equipment must be used for longer periods each day.

In any and every situation the food service staff of Indiana's Odd Fellows Home can depend on flexible Gas Cooking Tools—that's the established record of GAS and modern Gas Equipment in thousands of installations.

Facts on the operating economy of modern Gas Equipment, and on the other advantages of GAS for volume food preparation are readily available to you—just call your Gas Company Representative today.

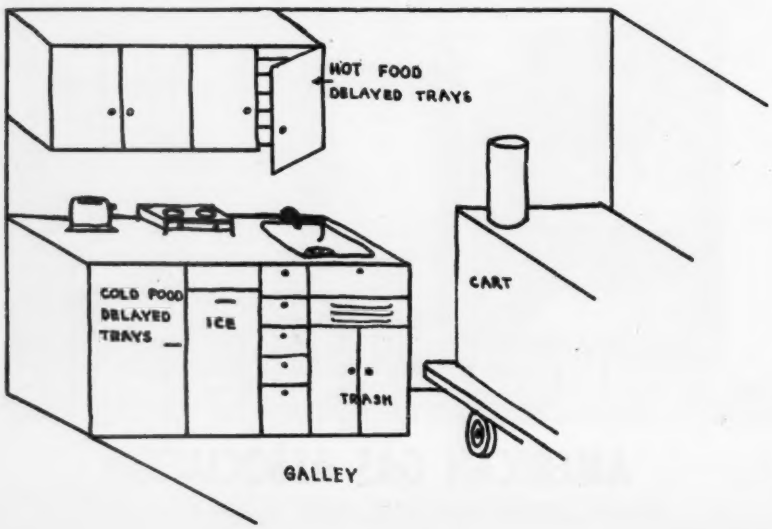
ice collars and water bags, some mid-meal nourishments and a few delayed trays. For an idea of how to provide facilities for these nursing services, we have investigated the idea of the galley, which is similar to one on an airliner; and, by arrangement of an ice box for cracked ice, a stainless steel sink and a small compartment for three or four delayed trays, we were able to satisfy the service needs. We put this galley in the corridor of the nursing division and not in an inside room such as the pantry occupied. This saves steps.

After using airline food service for a trial period, we found it to be satisfactory from the standpoint of operation and improvement of the patients' food service. The patient likes it, and the nursing department feels that it is an improvement. Present plans are to extend this service to other divisions of the hospital.

Naturally this experiment brings new concepts of type of equipment and service and is influencing the function and organization of the nursing department and the quality and quantity of food served to patients. We find that we can do something that the airlines cannot do. We can serve three types of menus. The patients can order at one meal what they want for the next. They have a choice. We have a possibility here of making all special diets more attractive, and theoretically every diet could be a special or individual diet.



DIETETICS ADMINISTRATION COMMENT

Institutional recipe project

RECENTLY THE BUREAU of Human Nutrition and Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture, organized a project for the development of quantity recipes intended for several types of food service, such as restaurants, cafeterias and institutions, especially the smaller institutions without dietitians. All of the recipes are developed in the bureau's food laboratories, approved by a panel of judges made up of bureau food specialists, and then tested in actual food service by a number of operators who are cooperating with the bureau.

Recipes feature some of the more plentiful foods. Each recipe is developed in quantities of 25, 50 and 100 portions, with the serving portion given on each recipe as an aid in serving standard portions. Ingredients are listed by weight and measure to make the recipes convenient to use according to the custom of the institution. When eggs are included, the frozen equivalent is given. The procedure is written in a brief concise form with each step in the preparation numbered.

The first release includes 12 recipes—main dishes using turkey and pork; a vegetable dish using potatoes and cheese; dessert recipes with canned peaches and apples, and a spice cake using mashed potatoes. All of the recipes in the first issue, "Recipes for Quantity Service," are included in the Master Menus for July, published in this issue of HOSPITALS.

The Bureau of Human Nutrition is cooperating with the American Hospital Association and will send the first release of recipes to all member hospitals soon. Included in this mailing are "Improved Bread Formulas," which have been prepared recently by the bureau. Member hospitals wishing to receive future issues of "Recipes for Quantity Service" may indicate this on the card enclosed with the first mailing of recipes. The bureau states that all of the recipes should be suitable for general diets in hospitals.

Administrators in hospitals without dietitians should find these recipes helpful to food service supervisors and cooks for adding variety to the hospital menus. As more recipes are supplied, standard formulas should be on hand for preparing foods in 25, 50 and 100 portions covering the type of foods suitable for institutional use.

Nonfat dry milk

Hospitals now obtaining dry milk from surplus food supplies will find the publication of the United States Department of Agriculture, "School Lunch Recipes Using Nonfat Dry Milk," PA-44, of assistance in preparing foods with this product. Nonfat dry milk contains about the same nutrients as does fluid skim milk, the high quality proteins and the rich supply of calcium and riboflavin.

Nonfat dry milk may be reconstituted with water for use as a beverage or for soups, gravies, sauces and custards. One cup (4 ounces) of nonfat dry milk plus one quart of water equals about a quart of fluid skim milk. To reconstitute nonfat dry milk, sprinkle it on top of warm water and beat well with a rotary beater or a power mixer. In recipes containing a large proportion of dry ingredients, the dry milk may be mixed with other dry ingredients.

The publication contains recipes for soups and chowders, main dishes, vegetable dishes, desserts, sauces and dry mixes such as biscuits, muffins, puddings, gingerbread and cookies. The recipes are given in 100 portions, but it is stated that when more than 100 portions are required they may be successfully doubled. Some of the recipes include the use of dried whole egg, another surplus food commodity available to some institutions.

Another publication of the Department of Agriculture, PA-68, "School Lunch Recipes for 25 and 50," contains 40 recipes, including many with dry milk and dried whole egg.

Powdered whole milk

One of the most satisfactory ways to economize on food without lowering the standard of the products or nutrition is in the use of powdered whole milk in recipes. One pound of powdered whole milk mixed with 7.5 pints of water makes one gallon of milk. In large institutions 10 pounds may be used to make a 40-quart can of milk. A homogenizer or power mixer may be used for reconstituting the product.

A new powdered whole milk is being marketed by a company that states that this new milk has a fresh-tasting flavor and is easy to dissolve satisfactorily in cold water. The prevailing standards prescribed by governmental agencies and the American Dry Milk Institute allow 6,000 bacteria count per c.c. of reliquefied milk. This new product, it is claimed, averages only 100 to 400 count on the same basis. When powdered whole milk is liquefied according to specifications, the standard allows one part of solid in 100 parts of liquid to remain undissolved. The amount undissolved in this new whole milk powder is less than one-third of that—0.3 of one part in 100 parts of liquid milk.

The powdered milk is packaged in five-pound cans, which are presterilized with flame, vacuum sealed and tested to be sure that they are air tight. The product requires no refrigeration and has a guaranteed shelf life of one year from the date it was manufactured.

On today's market, the cost for a case of six five-pound cans is $14.00. This represents a cost of 46.6 cents a gallon, or 11.7 cents a quart, for the fluid milk. This is an approximate saving of 10 cents a quart in comparison with the price of fresh fluid milk.

The company has prepared a useful brochure giving directions for using powdered whole milk and suggested recipes. Information on how to obtain these pamphlets will be sent on request by the editorial department of HOSPITALS.

The Dietetics Administration department is edited by Margaret Gillam, dietetics specialist.

Low-fat canned tuna

Canned tuna is now available without added oil or salt. The composition of the drained tuna is protein, 28.3 per cent and fat, 0.75 per cent. It contains 122 calories per 100 grams and is particularly low in sodium and fat. The product has received the acceptance of the Council on Foods and Nutrition of the American Medical Association.

Master Menus for July

THE JULY SERIES of the American Hospital Association's Master Menu is printed on this and the following pages.

These menus reduce to a minimum the number of diets, simplify planning, decrease costs and conserve food preparation time. The general diet forms the basis of the seven most commonly used special hospital diets. All except the liquid diets have been planned to include the nine food essentials and servings required for nutritional adequacy.

Consideration is also given flavor, variety, attractiveness and general acceptance by patients. Color is a factor, and color combinations must harmonize. Foods in each meal are planned in a variety of forms, not all flat, high or round but a pleasing combination of shapes. Consistency, too, is important, and here the accent is on variety. If some foods are served in a soft form, a crisp food is included in the meal. Flavor gives zest to a meal, and this aspect receives consideration.

To use these menus, (1) read the selections for the general (boldface type) and seven special diets, (2) type the day-by-day menu suggestions on transfer slips, spaced and numbered to correspond with the Master Menu wall charts, and (3) attach the completed slips on the spaces and corresponding numbers on the breakfast, dinner and supper wall charts.

Additional blocks of perforated transfer slips and Master Menu kits may be purchased from the Association, 18 E. Division Street, Chicago 10.

Build tomorrow's hospital on paper

Here are two facts of tremendous importance to architects, hospital superintendents and building committees:

1 — In one year, 500 hospitals changed to complete or partial paper meal service.

2 — One hospital alone saved $300,000 in 7 years through the use of paper service.

Consider then the possibilities for economy when new hospitals are designed for paper service! There would be less space needed for kitchens, pantries; no need for elaborate dishwashing equipment, double sinks, soiled dish counters, endless supplies of soaps, powders, scourers. Far fewer employees would be needed.

Through the use of Lily* Matched Design Hospital Service, many of these economies are in actual practice today. Reports of savings made by various hospitals are available for your inspection.

Write to Lily today for the full story of paper service.

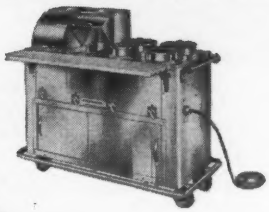
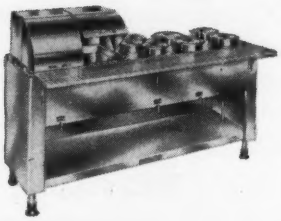
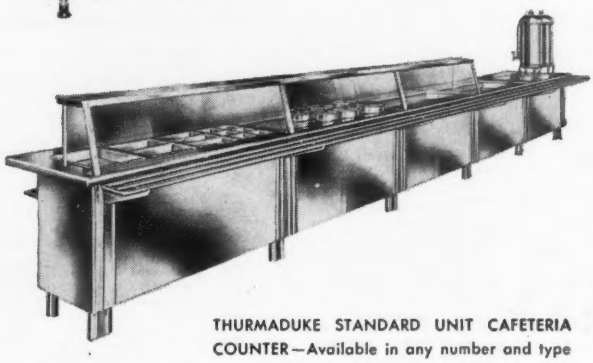
—as the AIR-CONDITIONER said to the CASH REGISTER...



THURMADUKE PORTABLE goes anywhere on easy rolling rubber tires.



THURMADUKE STANDARD — Many other sizes available.



THURMADUKE STANDARD UNIT CAFETERIA COUNTER—Available in any number and type of units desired to fit your particular requirements.

Boy, that new THURMADUKE sure solved all our problems and the boss' too! You're taking in more money than ever before and I'm only working half as hard. That new THURMADUKE is so much better insulated than the other food warmer we had, I don't have to fight so much hot air all day long.

Yep, the boss is a smart man, all right . . . checked every single food warmer on the market before he bought. Checked construction, insulation, methods of heating, controls—even looks. Found that THURMADUKE had 'em all beat a country mile—and cheaper to operate, too. And THURMADUKE comes in all types and sizes, from small buffet warmers up to complete, unit-built cafeteria counters with all the trimmings.

No wonder the boss says: For my money, THURMADUKE is the only buy.

Citrus fruits are among the richest known sources of vitamin C. They also contain vitamins A, B_1, and P, and readily assimilable natural fruit sugars, together with other factors such as iron, calcium, citrates and citric acid.*

The eye- and appetite-appeal of colorful citrus fruit cups and salads can go far to stimulate the often indifferent interest of the convalescent in his diet. Lavishly endowed by nature with a wide variety of nutrients*—including an exceptionally high vitamin C content and easily assimilated fruit sugars[2] for quick energy release—citrus fruits and juices can help significantly in improving appetite,[3] promoting mild laxation[1] and systemic alkalinization,[3] and in bettering calcium utilization.[3] They are particularly beneficial in the management of chronic infectious conditions.[1] Florida citrus fruits and juices are convenient to use, low in cost, relished by patients of all ages—whether fresh, canned, concentrated or frozen.

Glove Powder Adhesions Eliminated With New Bio-Sorb Starch Powder

Postoperative adhesions caused by glove powder have long been a serious concern of surgeons and operating room assistants. All published studies agree that talc as a glove lubricant is unsafe.

As a replacement for talc, a wholly safe and efficient dusting powder is now available. This new powder, called Bio-Sorb, is a mixture of amylose and amylopectin, derived from corn starch, which has been treated by special physical and chemical means to prevent gelatinization when the product is autoclaved. It is treated physically and chemically to assure good lubrication after sterilization.

Talc consists chiefly of magnesium silicate. It causes granulomatous reactions in tissue, resulting in intra-abdominal adhesions, persistent sinus formation, or nodules in the wound.

Implantation of glove powder may occur from unwashed gloves, perforations in gloves, spill on to sponges, instruments and suture material, and by the air-borne route. Bio-Sorb is compatible with body tissues and is rapidly absorbed. It does not injure rubber gloves. It fits regular O.R. technics.

Supplied in 5-lb. canisters and in individual-service packets ready to autoclave.

Bio-Sorb, developed in cooperation with National Starch Products, Inc., has been used over three years in several hundred hospitals. Complete literature mailed on request.

Unprecedented Attention to Hospitals

When the second session of the present Congress comes to a close —probably some time in July—the nation's hospitals can rightfully claim that its lawmakers gave them an unprecedented amount of attention. This would be true even should nothing further on this subject be accomplished in the session's remaining weeks, however unlikely that seems. In the last month or so alone:

(1) The House passed a bill (H.R. 5965) ordering construction of 16,000 additional veterans hospital beds which, for economy purposes, were ordered frozen a year and a half ago;

(2) the same branch of Congress overwhelmingly overrode recommendations of its appropriations committee that federal funds for the Hill-Burton hospital construction program be reduced 50 per cent to $75,000,000 in the 1950-51 fiscal year, which begins July 1;

(3) Senate hearings were begun on the Humphrey bill (S. 1805), which authorizes federal loans and grants to health cooperatives—including hospitals which qualify—and other nonprofit groups operating prepayment insurance plans;

(4) Congressional action was completed and President Truman signed the National Science Foundation bill, the implementation of which is expected to involve the country's teaching and research hospitals to an appreciable degree.

Although there has been virtually no progress toward enactment of H.R. 5940, the bill providing for government support of schools of medicine, dentistry and nursing, and passage of no major health legislation is expected before adjournment, all signs point definitely to generous airing of the questions involved in the form of electioneering ammunition this fall.

Caution: House and Senate candidates for reelection are proceeding cautiously, in their speeches and statements, as far as compulsory health insurance is concerned. It is true that this was a clear cut issue in the Florida primary, in which Sen. Claude E. Pepper was defeated for renomination by Rep. George Smathers, but no one will argue that it was the main issue or that the outcome must be considered a fatal blow to the administration's Thomas-Murray-Dingell bill.

On May 13, Sen. Herbert H. Lehman (Dem., N.Y.) delivered a major address before an anniversary meeting of the Greater New York Hospital Association. Although he remained noncommittal on compulsory health insurance, the senator registered what might be interpreted as an oblique dissent when he said:

"I do not now, and never have, and never will favor any solution which involves socialization of our hospitals. I am opposed and always have been opposed to any proposal that would place doctors, nurses or hospital employes under the control of the federal government or make them employes of the federal government. I am opposed to the regimentation of medical personnel. I hope that this statement is flat enough and simple enough for even the extremists to understand."

Sen. Lehman, whose membership on the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee makes him an important figure in the handling of health and hospital legislation, emphasized that he favors the following: Federal aid to medical and nursing education and scientific research, to construction and establishment of health centers and clinics, for "reconstruction and replacement of obsolete hospital buildings in urban areas," for control of mental disease and tuberculosis, rehabilitation of the physically handicapped, maternal and child health programs and support of state and local public health departments.

Strong support: With the Cooperative Health Federation of America providing the main impetus, strong support of the Humphrey bill was presented at public hearings at the Capitol May 9 and 10. When testimony was concluded, at least for the time being, Sen. Humphrey stated he was so impressed by what he had heard that he intends to conduct a radio crusade to familiarize the public with a plan which he characterized as a most satisfactory alternative to compulsory health insurance.

Briefly, the Humphrey bill would make grants and loans to "cooperatives and nonprofit associations to initiate and carry out voluntary prepaid medical care plans for their members." Funds could be used for site acquisition, construction and equipping of facilities but not for maintenance or operation. Annual appropriations of $25 million are authorized. Of the two House companion bills, one calls for $5 million a year and the other for $50 million.

Testifying in support of the program were Dr. Dean A. Clark, president; Jerry Voorhis, executive secretary, and Horace Hansen, general counsel, all representing the Cooperative Health Federation of America; Dr. S. L. Hadden, chief of staff of the Waushara County Cooperative Health Association Hospital, Wild Rose, Wis.; Gerald Heaney, Arrowhead Health Center, Duluth, Minn.; Harry Peterson, Minnesota Association of Cooperatives; Dr. John O. McNeel, chief of staff of the Group Health Cooperative of Puget Sound, Seattle; and Dr. Fred V. Shadid, medical director of the Community Hospital-Clinic, Elk City, Okla. Dr. Hadden's testimony was presented by J. J. Leipsig, manager of the Waushara hospital.

Opposition: Heard in opposition to the Humphrey bill were Dr. Walter B. Martin, of Norfolk, Va., a trustee of American Medical Association; Dr. Reuben F. Erickson, representing the Minnesota State Medical Association, and George H. Frates, Washington representative of the National Association of Retail Druggists.

The hearings, which may be resumed later, were conducted by the Senate subcommittee on health legislation, of which Sen. James E.

Murray (Dem., Mont.) is chairman. In his absence, however, the presiding officer has been Senator Humphrey. The only other participating Senator was Forrest Donnell (Rep., Mo.), who expressed frank skepticism of S.1805.

Testimony that stood out was:

1. Dr. Clark's statement that group practice raises, rather than lowers, professional standards and lay participation in administration of prepayment plans has a similar effect. Now director of Massachusetts General Hospital (Boston), Dr. Clark formerly was director of Health Insurance Plan of Greater New York, whose growth he cited in developing his argument.

2. Dr. Erickson's plea that those who elect to buy Blue Cross or Blue Shield coverage should not be taxed for the benefit of those who do not pay their own way.

3. Emphasis placed by Dr. McNeel on the point that physicians on the staff of his Puget Sound group are not admitted to staffs of any of the Seattle hospitals, an exclusion which he attributed to intercession by the King County Medical Society. "That is incredible," commented Senator Humphrey, "worse than anything I ever heard of."

4. The prediction by Dr. Shadid that "passage of S.1805 will remedy this condition (doctor-shortage areas), as money will be available to groups working on a cooperative-community basis to obtain money to build their health plant which in turn will enable them to obtain doctors in their communities." Hospitals and health plans should be run by laymen, not by doctors, he emphasized.

Social Security

In the latter part of May or early in June, the Senate Finance Committee was scheduled to give final approval and forward to the floor for action its revised social security amendment bill. Earlier, the committee had announced reversal of a previous decision regarding extension of coverage to hospital employes. Its latest stand is that employees of denominational hospitals are to be excluded but such institutions may, if they choose, obtain coverage for workers on a voluntary basis. As passed by the House several months ago, the bill provides that all nonprofit employment must be covered as to employees, whether a religious or secular employer is involved, but the employer would have an option to participate or not.

World Health

During May, the third World Health Assembly was held in Geneva, Switzerland, with delegates coming from more than 41 member nations. With the admission of Cuba last month, there are now 70 member nations in the World Health Organization, 11 more than in the United Nations. Dr. Richard L. Meiling, director of medical services, Office of the Secretary of Defense, served as official adviser to the United States delegation. India's minister of health, Rajkumari Armit Kaur was elected unanimously to chairmanship of the assembly.

The yearly report of the World Health Organization showed a definite increase in services, including assistance to 79 countries and territories. Campaigns against communicable diseases, especially malaria, tuberculosis and venereal diseases, were intensified. Other major programs last year centered around research and technical services and the development of regional health programs. Regional offices for Southeast Asia, the Eastern Mediteranean and the Americas were added to the organization.

Just before the assembly convened, discussions were concluded by the executive committee of the Pan American Sanitary Bureau, W.H.O. regional office in Washington, D. C., on its budget and health program for 1951. With a provisional budget of close to $2,000,000 the program calls for more work on communicable disease, development of the fellowship program for Latin American workers in the public health and science fields, and coordination of activities of inter-American health organizations.

Cancer Research

Atomic Energy Commission has announced approval of a new cancer research project which will be a joint effort of the University of Texas' M. D. Anderson Hospital at Houston and the Institute of Nuclear Studies at Oak Ridge, Tenn. The contract calls for construction, testing and ultimate use of a radiocobalt irradiator at Oak Ridge. If tests prove successful, this ultimately will be transferred to the Anderson hospital for a long-range study in cancer therapy.

Hearings which had been scheduled by the Senate subcommittee on health legislation relative to proposed establishment of a United Medical Administration, a central agency for control and management of all federal hospitals, have been postponed in the wake of strong criticism of the plan by veterans organizations which oppose transfer of any Veterans Administration functions.

House passage of H.R. 5965 on April 24 also was viewed as a victory for the veterans' groups, although chances were not regarded bright for similar action on the part of the Senate. Since it is believed that President Truman will veto the measure if it does clear Congress, the probability is that the 16,000 hospital beds involved will remain unbuilt and the Veterans Administration's present 131,000-bed ceiling will be maintained at least until next year.

As of March 31, there were 110,022 veterans under hospitalization, of whom 98,961 were in administration hospitals. Of the total, 72,016 were nonservice cases. On the same date, 56 new veterans hospitals were in various stages of construction.

Indian Bureau Commissioner

Dillon S. Myer of Hebron, Ohio, last month became commissioner of the Bureau of Indian Affairs of the Department of the Interior, succeeding John R. Nichols. Mr. Myer has had wide experience in the federal service. The Indian bureau is one of the six federal agencies operating hospitals.

Retirement

The Naval Medical School, National Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md., announced the retirement of its commanding officer, Capt. Melville J. Aston, MC, USN, effective May 1. A graduate of the George Washington University medical school, Capt. Aston spent more than 33 years on active duty with the Navy. He received the Legion of Merit, with combat distinguishing device, for his services during World War II in the care of a large number of casualties, resulting in a low mortality rate, while operating in waters frequented by Japanese forces.

Capt. Aston will practice medicine in Philadelphia.

Mental Health Clinics

General and mental hospitals operated or sponsored 43 per cent of all mental health clinics in the country in 1947, and an additional 9 per cent of the 485 total were under Veterans Administration control, most of these also being in hospitals. Public health departments operated another 11 per cent. These figures were determined on the basis of a questionnaire survey, a summary of which has recently been released by the National Institute of Mental Health of the Public Health Service.

General hospitals operated 118 of the 485 clinics tabulated in the study, mental hospitals 95, the Veterans Administration, 41. In addition to these figures, there were 20 clinics operated by medical schools and not in conjunction with a general hospital.

Approximately one third, 150, of the 485 mental health clinics were in the Middle Atlantic states, reflecting the concentration in larger metropolitan centers. In five states, Idaho, Wyoming, Nevada, Utah and South Dakota, there were no psychiatric clinics operating, and six other states had only one each.

Mental Health Report

"Patients in Mental Institutions: 1947," a 113-page statistical report prepared by Charles C. Limburg of the National Institute of Mental Health, has been published by the Public Health Service as a state-by-state guide on matters pertaining to hospitalization for mental disease or deficiency, and epilepsy.

Veterans Health Survey

The Veterans Administration is making follow-up studies of 22 major illnesses and disabilities suffered by members of the armed forces in World War II to determine how care can be improved in future wars and in veterans hospitals today. In addition, the survey may disclose new criteria for deciding what type of man or woman should not be accepted into the armed forces. Patient load in veterans hospitals of the future may be more predictable when the present series of studies has been completed.

Now nearing completion, the studies are being conducted in 23 leading medical schools and four hospitals on a contract basis, and by employees of Veterans Administration hospitals and clinics throughout the country.

New York Veterans Agreement

An arrangement for temporary use by the Veterans Administration of beds in a state-owned hospital has been worked out in New York. Until December 31, 1952, the state-owned Halloran Hospital on Staten Island has allotted 740 beds to paraplegic and general medical patients plus one pavilion for tuberculosis patients now under Veterans Administration care at Halloran. Remaining patients will be transferred to federal hospitals in the area.

The agreement was negotiated by the department of mental hygiene for the state of New York. This agency is planning to use Halloran Hospital for the care of delinquent children.

Management Course

Many prominent speakers participated in the Army-sponsored Inter-Agency Institute for Hospital Managers which ended its three-week course in Washington, D. C., on May 5. Students at the seminar were 32 executives of hospitals run by six federal agencies—the Army, Navy, Air Force, Veterans Administration, Public Health Service and Bureau of Indian Affairs. After the course, each participant spent a week surveying two hospitals operated by an agency other than his own and prepared a detailed report on some phase of the hospitals' administration.

Institute programs were planned to center around general management problems, with little or no discussion of routine administrative jobs. Speaking on the subject "Future Horizons in Hospital Administration," Dr. Malcolm T. MacEachern, director emeritus of the American College of Surgeons and director of the Northwestern University program in hospital administration, pointed out that the administrator of today must be concerned with the aims and objectives of the entire voluntary hospital system.

Among other speakers was Lucy Germaine, director of the school of nurses and nursing service, Harper Hospital, Detroit, who discussed the place of the nurse as a member of the medical team and the problem of efficient assignment of nurses. The Army's management research program was explained by Maj. Gen. George E. Armstrong, deputy Army surgeon general.

Blood Supply Program

The armed services have adopted a new program for securing and controlling supplies of whole blood and blood derivatives. To be effective in both peace and war, the federal program will integrate military plans with those of civilian agencies and groups. Dr. Richard L. Meiling, director of medical services, Department of Defense, will superintend the program.

Under the plan, the armed services will determine military requirements for blood and blood derivatives, establish a war reserve for plasma and plasma substitutes, and set aside transfusion supplies

Donations of blood will be accepted on a voluntary basis from employees of the defense department. Blood will be purchased only in emergencies in areas where volunteer donor sources are not available.

Chaplaincy Service

Chaplain Donald Crawford Beatty has been appointed assistant director of the Veterans Administration Chaplaincy Service. A Methodist minister ordained in the New England Conference in 1927, Chaplain Beatty has served for the past year as assistant to the director for program. He was chaplain of the Pittsburgh city home and hospitals and also at the Elgin (Ill.) State Hospital before entering federal service in 1942.

Distinguished Service

Dr. Joseph D. Aronson, associate professor of bacteriology at Henry Phipps Institute of the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, and formerly on the staff of the Bureau of Indian Affairs of the Department of Interior, was honored by the bureau last month. He received the gold distinguished service award for his studies on the control of tuberculosis among Indians of the United States and Alaska by means of bacillus calmette-guerin vaccine.

Medical Librarians

Twelve Veterans Administration medical librarians attended an intensive three-week graduate course at the University of Illinois Medical School in Chicago during May. Librarians who successfully completed the course received three college credits.

This course, like four others which have been sponsored by the Veterans Administration for medical librarians, consisted of instruction and laboratory work in medical library literature in addition to lectures by members of the medical school faculty.

Navy Medical Officers

Within the next year, the Navy Air Force will double the number of doctors in its service, making a total of 200. Volunteers for temporary assignments of one or two years will be solicited from the ranks of inactive reserve medical officers who are less than 40 years old. This action is designed to fill present and anticipated vacancies in the United States and overseas.

Heads Yale Program

On July 1, George S. Buis, assistant executive secretary of the American College of Hospital Administrators, Chicago, will become director of the program in hospital administration at Yale University, New Haven, Conn. Mr. Buis will succeed Dr. Clement C. Clay, organizer of the course in 1947 and director for the last three years, who is planning to return to active hospital administration.

In addition to his work with the college, Mr. Buis has had administrative experience in Texas and in the Army medical administrative corps, in which he held the rank of captain.

Atomic Medicine

New York Medical College—Flower and Fifth Avenue Hospitals, last month began to stockpile medical supplies and apparatus necessary to treat radiation burns and other effects of atomic explosions. First in the New York City area to undertake a program of this sort, the hospital will be able to treat more than 500 patients during a 24-hour emergency period.

A research program in the treatment of atomic bomb injuries, under the authorization of the Atomic Energy Commission, has been going on at Flower and Fifth Avenue Hospitals during recent years. As a result of this program, a class in atomic medicine will be offered by the New York Medical College this summer.

Study material of atomic radiation effects also has been compiled by the Navy and is now available to civilian physicians and health officers. Supplementing the research data are pathological slide study sets and appropriate literature prepared by the Naval Medical Research Institute, Bethesda, Md.

Originally the Navy's research and study program was planned for medical officers only, but because such material is not generally available in hospital laboratories the Navy now is including all civilian and government medical people. Details and materials for the study program are available to those who are interested through local naval hospitals.

Kellogg Conference

Ways and means of interesting more medical students to enter the field of hospital administration were discussed at the three-day conference on university programs in hospital administration, held in Battle Creek, Mich., in May. The conference was sponsored by the W. K. Kellogg Foundation and gathered together professional representatives from the United States, Canada and Great Britain.

Several conference members said that a better job of publicity might result in more young doctors entering administration work. The general opinion was that present students in administration courses, though frequently not from the medical field, represent a select and carefully screened group.

Work With Handicapped

A four-week course, designed to help meet the employment problems of cerebral palsied and other severely handicapped workers, is being conducted by the Institute of Rehabilitation and Physical Medicine of the New York University-Bellevue Medical Center under the auspices of the New York University School of Education. Lasting from May 22 to June 16, the counselor training course is part of a national cerebral palsy program started four years ago by the National Society for Crippled Children and Adults, the Easter Seal Agency. This group and Alpha Gamma Delta, international women's fraternity, have jointly sponsored the present course and two preceding ones. Eighteen persons working in the field of rehabilitation and employment counseling for the handicapped were awarded fellowships to attend the training course.

St. Louis and Alton Plans Merge

The May 1 merger of the Alton, Ill., Blue Cross plan with the Blue Cross plan at St. Louis was announced last month by Mrs. Edward J. Walsh, president of Group Hospital Service, Inc., of St. Louis.

Mrs. Walsh said the St. Louis plan, in absorbing the assets and liabilities of the Alton plan, had taken over the $56,573 deficit of the latter, known officially as Group Hospital Service of Illinois. The Illinois insurance department, she said, had been advised of the transfer and had voiced no objection.

"Some time ago," said Mrs. Walsh, "our trustees gave consideration to a request of the board of trustees of the Alton plan to take over their plan. The geographical unity of the territory served by the two plans, the substantial usage of hospital facilities of St. Louis by Alton plan subscribers, and the pressing need of the Alton plan for financial stability . . . were some of the reasons that led to a favorable consideration by our board of Alton's request."

Elmer F. Nester, executive director of the St. Louis plan, said 17 hospitals were under contract with the Alton plan. Three others had working agreements but no contracts. Of the 17 hospitals under contract, he said, 10 have consented to the merger, in writing. Three others have given their verbal approval, and the remaining hospitals opposed the action, he said.

About 35 per cent of the members of the Alton plan have been using St. Louis hospitals, Mr. Nester said. Alton is about 21 miles from St. Louis. Many physicians in the Alton area are on medical staffs of St. Louis hospitals. It is anticipated, he said, that the St. Louis contract will be put into effect in the Alton area.

Mrs. Walsh said the corporate membership of the St. Louis plan was to meet late in May to ratify and approve the action of its board of trustees in making this transfer. It is understood that the corporate members of the Alton plan already have ratified and approved the action of their board.

Opposition: This merger was carried out despite the protests of the Illinois Hospital Association. On May 2, the Illinois association wrote the Alton plan urging that it not merge with Group Hospital Service, Inc., of St. Louis. Because the merger was not publicized, the Illinois association was unaware that it already had been accomplished the previous day.

First Quarter Enrollment

With enrollment of 1,525,568 persons during the first three months of the year, 24 per cent of the United States population and 21 per cent of all Canadians are members of Blue Cross plans. This brings the March 31 membership in the 90 Blue Cross plans to 37,444,273. This year's first quarter gain is the second largest quarterly increase in the history of Blue Cross. Enrollment in the second quarter of 1946 added 1,773,000 persons.

Two thirds of the new members are employees of U. S. Steel and Bethlehem Steel corporations, enrolled on a national basis in March. Enrollment of steel workers' dependents will more than double the present enrollment resulting from the steel agreement.

Leading in membership gains for the first quarter was Hospital Service Association of Pittsburgh, with 221,185 new members. Second and third were Associated Hospital Service of New York City with 124,064 members and Chicago's Blue Cross Plan for Hospital Care with 101,272.

The largest percentage increase was made by Hospital Service Corporation of Alabama, Birmingham, with a 22.16 per cent gain. The Indianapolis Blue Cross Hospital Service plan was second with 20.28 per cent gain.

Fifteenth Anniversary

Fifteen years after its establishment the Associated Hospital Service of New York is the largest of the 90 Blue Cross plans and has a membership of more than 4,300,000. In recognition of service given to the community in providing economic security and better health standards, Mayor O'Dwyer designated the week of May 7 as Blue Cross week in the New York City area.

The special feature of the fifteenth anniversary celebration was a letter-writing contest sponsored by Associated Hospital Service on the subject, "What Blue Cross Means to Our Patients and Our Hospital." Participating in the contest were the employees, staff members and volunteer workers associated with the 260 hospitals in the plan. Prizes were contributed by organizations enrolled in Associated Hospital Service.

Other events in the week of celebration included addresses by New York's Senator Herbert H. Lehman and Harold E. Stassen, president of the University of Pennsylvania. A citation was awarded by the Greater New York Hospital Association to the plan president, Louis H. Pink, on behalf of Associated Hospital Service.

HAROLD E. Stassen meets 14-year-old Audrey Diane Laibson, first Associated Hospital Service baby, during fifteenth anniversary observance of the A.H.S. President Louis H. Pink (center) performs the introduction.

Blue Shield Growth

Sixty-one of the 68 Blue Shield plans had a membership totaling 13,830,279 at the end of 1949. Adding in the figures for 10 of the 11 plans not in Blue Shield there is a known total of 16,627,881 members in medical care programs. These statistics were included in annual reports released by Associated Medical Care Plans.

Topping the list in total memberships were the following 10 Blue Shield plans, listed by city in which the headquarters is located.

New York City	1,547,672
Detroit	1,502,958
San Francisco	884,848
Boston	851,333
Columbus, Ohio	658,079
Harrisburg, Pa.	556,693
Indianapolis	364,550

Newark	353,827
Dallas	285,317
Denver	267,723

Blue Shield plans in two cities reported membership figures including Blue Cross. Chapel Hill, N. C., had a combined membership of 754,917, and Birmingham, Ala., 558,851.

St. Paul, the only plan more than doubling in size during the year, had a growth of 158.78 per cent. Seven plans added 150,000 or more members during 1949. These were:

New York City	418,705
Harrisburg, Pa.	203,050
*New Haven, Conn.	200,098
Columbus, Ohio	192,812
Detroit	191,147
San Francisco	184,850
St. Paul	159,835

*Non-member. Started enrollment in March 1949.

Thirty-one of the 61 Blue Shield plans reporting had 100,000 members or more. Approximately three-fourths of the total Blue Shield membership was in the 18 plans with memberships of 200,000 or more.

Liggett & Myers Contract

Four thousand employees of the Liggett & Myers Tobacco Company now are covered by Blue Cross and Blue Shield plans as a result of a contract recently signed by the company and Hospital Care Association, Inc., with headquarters in Durham, N.C. Membership dues are being paid by the company for fulltime employees who live in Durham.

Coverage for Liggett & Myers employees began on April 1. Members of families, expected to total another 4,000 persons, can be enrolled at the expense of the employee.

Philadelphia Deductions

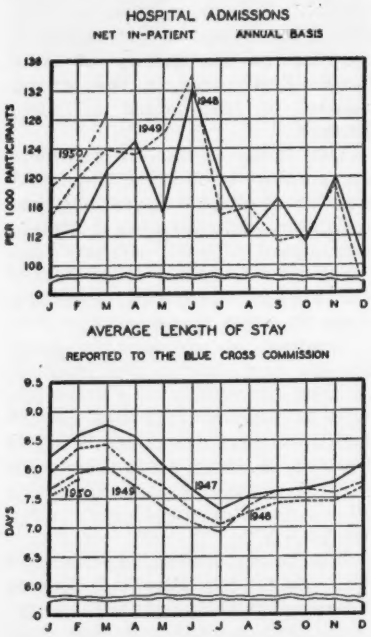
Employees on Philadelphia city and county payrolls who are members of Blue Cross and Blue Shield will have their subscription charges deducted from the payroll according to a city ordinance passed April 20. About 5,300 workers will be covered by the new ruling.

Associated Hospital Service of Philadelphia, the local Blue Cross-Blue Shield plan, has endorsed such an arrangement for several years but until the present was unable to secure sufficient public support.

More Blue Cross Patients in 1949

In 1949, Blue Cross plans paid for 12.09 per cent more patients and a total of 10.58 per cent more days than in the preceding year. These figures showing increased utilization of Blue Cross coverage by the members were part of semi-annual studies released recently by the Blue Cross Commission.

Inpatient cases paid during 1949 amounted to 3,924,821, an increase of 423,465 cases over 1948. The total number of Blue Cross patient bed days was 29,613,573.6 in 1949, an increase of 2,833,085.65 days over 1948. Although patient days and cases paid had increased through the year, the average length of stay decreased from 7.65 in 1948 to 7.55 days in 1949.



ADMISSION-STAY

The average inpatient rate for Blue Cross plan patients in March was 129 per thousand, an increase of 5.7 per cent over the February figure of 122 per thousand. The March 1950 figure was higher than the figure for the same month in 1949 when 124 per thousand members were hospitalized. Figures for the first three months this year have all been higher than those for the same months last year.

The average length of stay for February was 7.81 days, an increase of .25 days over the January figure of 7.56 days. This is .55 days less than the average length of stay for February 1949 which was 8.36.

Admissions. Last year, 4,047,677 Blue Cross members were admitted to hospitals for bed care under the various plans. The average daily number of Blue Cross members hospitalized was 9,867 in 1948, and in 1949 it increased to 11,090 per day or a rise of 12.39 per cent. As in 1948, admissions were highest in June 1949, when 377,801 or 12,593 members per day were hospitalized.

Annual average inpatient admissions increased from 117 per thousand members for 1948 to 118 for 1949. December 1949 was the low month with 105 per thousand; June was high with 134 per thousand. The range for 1948 was not as wide with a low of 109 in December and a high of 132 per thousand members in June.

Emergency care. Emergency-accident room cases of Blue Cross plan members reported in 1949 numbered 509,768, an increase of 32.66 per cent over the 1948 figure of 343,301 visits.

Blue Cross plans paid for 464,652 emergency room patients during 1949, or 48.21 per cent more visits than for 1948. The average daily number of visits in 1949 to hospital emergency rooms was 1,204, an increase of 347 per day or 40.49 per cent. Peak month for emergency visits in 1949 was August with 48,344 visits, a daily average of 1,559. In 1948 the top month was September with a monthly total of 32,072 or 1,070 visits per day.

Sickness Disability

More state legislatures will enact forms of compulsory sickness and disability insurances for employees in private industry. This was the prediction of leaders in the one-day conference on sickness disability insurance held during May by four units of Columbia University in New York City. Organized by the schools of business, engineering, law and public health, the conference was the second of a series planned especially for industrial, business and professional groups.

Dr. Leonard J. Goldwater, professor of industrial hygiene in Columbia's School of Public Health, was in charge of arrangements.

Tri-State Assembly Plans Economy

Adopting the slogan "Be Thrifty in '50," more than 6,500 participants in the Tri-State Hospital Assembly's twentieth annual conference, met in Chicago May 1-3, and examined current hospital developments and problems that directly affect institutional economy. In the course of the three-day meeting, those who attended the three general sessions and 33 sectional meetings, learned what hospitals all over the country are doing about rising costs and what trends may be expected to develop in the health field in the immediate future.

In general, hospital facilities are on the increase resulting from developments under the Hill-Burton program. Dr. John W. Cronin, chief of the Division of Hospital Facilities, U. S. Public Health Service, reported that to date 50,000 beds and 141 public health centers have been added under Public Law 725. Hospitals completed and in operation number 163, of which 95 are new.

Voluntary insurance plans in several parts of the country have been cautiously experimenting with programs for complete coverage of medical care or partial emergency care. Dr. Paul R. Hawley, director of the American College of Surgeons, predicted that the future development of voluntary insurance will be in the direction of more inclusive care.

Economy: For effective operation, Ralph M. Hueston, superintendent of Wesley Memorial Hospital, Chicago, urged the application of business principles to hospital administration. Mr. Hueston's four principles lead off with providing the patient and his doctor with good hospital service. He suggested charges to the patient that would cover the cost of good service, reinvesting surplus funds in the hospital and offering free service only as funds are made available for that purpose.

Labor: In discussing the trends in hospital costs, Mr. Hueston pointed out that labor accounts for 70 per cent of the total operating expense of the hospital. Considering how much of the budget is consumed by this item alone, James A. Hamilton, director of the University of Minnesota course in hospital administration, said administrators increasingly must consider the substitution of labor-saving devices for routine jobs. He suggested a close examination of the more than 125 exhibitions of hospital equipment and supplies that were on display at the conference.

Mr. Hamilton forecast even higher labor costs in the future with a 40-hour work week, increased wages and the establishment of pensions as the national trend in hospitals. Unionization he believes will not increase, except in a few localities, within the next 10 years, but collective bargaining principles are being used more and will continue to be employed. These principles will be used particularly by skilled workers, because of the shortage of trained people.

Personnel practices: Compared with industry, the quality of hospital supervision is inferior said Mr. Hamilton. He and other speakers in the general session on problems of personnel practices agreed that personnel departments cannot conduct training programs for employees, but should assist and offer expert advice to supervisors of such programs. Jane C. Rohrbach, personnel director at St. Luke's Hospital in Cleveland, pointed out that job standardization and specifications are among the most urgently needed tools in hospital personnel departments.

Nursing: Dr. Frank R. Bradley, director of Barnes Hospital, St. Louis, peered into the future and proposed residencies and internships for nurses to develop a more specialized type of nurse who might be expected to assume some of the technical duties of the medical staff. She in turn would relinquish routine hospital functions to less skilled workers.

Summarizing the experience of Passavant Memorial Hospital, Chicago, in recruiting students for the first class in its new school of nursing, Director Richard D. Vanderwarker compared nurse recruitment to the business operation known as "closing the sale." Hospital nursing schools have the specific problem of putting applications into the hands of high school students. Direct contact is the only way schools can capitalize on general promotional work carried on by national groups such as the Committee on Careers in Nursing.

Better patient service: Implementation of the assembly's slogan, "Be Thrifty in '50," would result in better patient care in addition to more efficient hospital operation. Local hospital councils offer a unique means for small hospitals to improve care and services according to S. A. Ruskjer, administrator of Waverly Hills Tuberculosis Sanatorium, Louisville. He cited examples of the sharing of specialized workers by small hospitals cooperating in a local council. Councils also facilitate payments from public agencies for indigent care.

Home care was discussed by Dr. Martin Cherkasky, executive director of the home care program at Montefiore Hospital, New York City. He stressed the opportunity such plans offer for better patient care more widely distributed.

Discussions: As frequently happens, discussion periods following general sessions and most of the sectional meetings became clearing houses for ideas and new techniques. Delegates found particularly interesting: The insurance manual compiled and used by Memorial Hospital, South Bend, Ind., which lists the subscriber and dependent benefits under all insurance plans used by local industries; preadmission slips given to staff doctors of Pawating Hospital, Niles, Mich., in handy-size tablet form to be distributed by them to patients before admission; common dining rooms for doctors, nurses and other workers, which resulted in improved personnel relations at St. Luke's Hospital, Cleveland, and the Parkland Hospital, Dallas.

Awards: At the annual banquet, presentation of a $1,000 bond was made to Dr. Malcolm T. MacEachern, Tri-State Hospital Assembly chairman, in appreciation of his work with Tri-State.

Keys of merit were awarded to nominees from each state for outstanding work in the hospital field. Awards went to Nellie G. Brown, R.N., administrator of Ball Memorial Hospital, Muncie, Ind.; Ernest I. Erickson, administrator of Augustana Hospital, Chicago; Oscar E. Olson, chief engineer, State of Wisconsin General Hospital, Madison, and Dr. Harley A. Haynes, former administrator of the University of Michigan Hospital, Ann Arbor.

Massachusetts

Henry G. Brickman, administrative resident at New England Center Hospital, Boston, will become executive secretary of the Massachusetts Hospital Association on July 1. He will succeed Theodore Fabisak who resigned early this year.

The new executive secretary has had considerable hospital experience in Massachusetts, including a year with the McLean Hospital, Waverly, and seven years with the Massachusetts Hospital Service. Mr. Brickman will receive a master's degree in public health at Yale University this month.

Greater New York

Presiding over the Greater New York Hospital Association for the coming year will be James Russell Clark, executive director of Brooklyn Hospital. Elections were held at the April 28 annual meeting of the Association, which represents 97 voluntary nonprofit hospitals and 22 municipal hospitals in the Greater New York area. Other officers are:

MR. CLARK

President-elect, Fred Heffinger, superintendent, Manhattan Eye, Ear & Throat Hospital; vice president, Dr. Maxwell S. Frank, executive director, Beth Israel Hospital; secretary, E. Reid Caddy, director, St. John's Episcopal Hospital, and treasurer, Louis Miller, superintendent, Jewish Memorial Hospital. Retiring as president is the Very Rev. Msgr. John J. Curry, director, Division of Health and Hospitals, Catholic Charities of New York.

Mr. Clark has served many posts in the American Hospital Association in addition to his wide activities in the field of hospital administration. From 1943 to 1946 he was director of the Association's Washington office and secretary of the Council on Government Relations. At present he is a member of the Council on International Relations and is also a director of the New York State Hospital Association.

Trudeau Society

The 1950 award of the Trudeau medal, made by the National Tuberculosis Association, this year went to Dr. John B. Barnwell, chief of the tuberculosis division of the Veterans Administration Department of Medicine and Surgery. Under Dr. Barnwell's direction, studies and research on the treatment of tuberculosis have been carried on in 45 veterans hospitals, with semi-annual progress reports made.

Presentation of the medal was in connection with the annual meeting in April of the American Trudeau Society, the medical section of the National Tuberculosis Association. Installed as president of that group for the coming year was Dr. Grover C. Bellinger, superintendent of the Oregon State Tuberculosis Hospital, Salem. The president-elect is Dr. John H. Skavlem, chief medical director at Dunham Hospital, Cincinnati.

Potomac Area

Women's hospital auxiliaries was the single topic at the spring conference of the Maryland-District of Columbia - Delaware Hospital Association held May 10 in Annapolis. Auxiliary members active in the area participated in the program and on a panel discussion of projects sponsored by various auxiliaries. At the association's business meeting, institutional membership for auxiliaries was established and a committee formed on women's hospital auxiliaries.

The principal speaker of the day was Harry Greenstein, executive director, Associated Jewish Charities of Baltimore. Mr. Greenstein stressed the fact that even more important than fund raising, auxiliaries have "the larger job of trying to interpret to the contributing public the need of the hospital in the community and the reasons why it deserves and should receive all-out support."

Cornerstone for Annex

A cornerstone laying ceremony was held for the new $300,000 annex of the Hospital for Joint Diseases, New York City, in April. President of the hospital, Mr. Oscar M. Lazrus, was one of the main speakers for the event. He pointed out that the hospital's cancer treatment, prevention and research program, its training courses for pracical nurses, and its refresher program will benefit greatly from the new facilities.

Western

Two thousand delegates attended the twentieth annual meeting of the Association of Western Hospitals, held in Seattle April 24-27. A program of general and sectional meetings, in addition to exhibitions of 200 suppliers of hospital equipment, was planned for delegates coming from seven western states and Hawaii.

Walter A. Heath, administrator, Tacoma (Wash.) General Hospital was installed as president succeeding George U. Woods, superintendent of Peralta Hospital, Oakland. The president-elect is William P. Butler, manager, San Jose (Calif.) Hospital.

Other officers for the coming year, all of whom were re-elected, are: First vice president, Frank C. Gabriel, superintendent, Southwestern Presbyterian Sanatorium, Albuquerque, N.M.; second vice president, Ralph Hromadka, superintendent, Santa Monica (Calif.) Hospital; third vice president, Clarence E. Wonnacott, administrator, Dr. W. H. Groves Latter-Day Saints Hospital, Salt Lake City, and treasurer, Walter M. Oliver, administrator, Children's Hospital, San Francisco.

Part of the business of the meeting was consideration and passing of a resolution disapproving any form of compulsory health insurance and another one advocating that veterans requiring hospitalization be cared for in community hospitals rather than building additional hospitals. Next year's meeting of the association will be in Los Angeles on April 30 through May 3.

South Carolina

Officers of the South Carolina Hospital Association, elected in January, were installed during the Carolinas-Virginias conference in Charleston on May 11. James L. Rogers, administrator, Spartanburg General Hospital is president.

Other officers are: President-elect, T. B. Stevenson, superintendent and treasurer, Colleton County Hospital, Walterboro; secretary-treasurer, J. B. Wachtman, administrator, Conway Hospital; first vice president, R. C. O'Brien, administrator, Anderson County Memorial Hospital; second vice president, Mrs. Eula B. Lamarr, superintendent, Aiken County Hospital; and third vice president, George R. Darden, administrator, Camden Hospital.

Iowa

Delegates to the Iowa Hospital Association, meeting in Des Moines on April 21, participated in discussions on personnel practices and policies, the problem of financing indigent care and purchasing simplification and standardization. Women's auxiliary members, meeting separately with President-elect Louis B. Blair, superintendent of St. Luke's Hospital, Cedar Rapids, voted to request the Iowa Hospital Association to form a council on women's hospital auxiliaries and appoint a chairman and nine district representatives.

Officers for 1950 are: President, Sister Mary Eileen, superintendent of Mercy Hospital, Cedar Rapids; first vice president, Vernon T. Spry, administrator, Ottumwa Hospital; second vice president, Esther Squire, superintendent, Washington County Hospital, Washington, and treasurer, Fridolf A. Hanson, superintendent, Lutheran Hospital, Des Moines, who was reelected to that position. Delegate to the American Hospital Association is Nelle M. Lundy, Cedar Valley Hospital, Charles City.

Washington

Resignation of Washington State Hospital Association President Walter A. Heath, administrator of Tacoma General Hospital, was announced during May. The resignation followed a postponement of the state convention from May to September 1950. Mr. Heath now is president of the Association of Western Hospitals.

The president-elect of the association, Horace Turner, administrator of Deaconess Hospital, Spokane, has taken over leadership of the state group. Mr. Turner was elected by a special meeting of the board of trustees of the state association to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Dr. K. H. Van Norman last fall. A past president of the Washington association, Mr. Turner was president of the regional association in 1948.

North Dakota

Officers for the coming year were elected at the North Dakota Hospital Association's annual meeting in Fargo April 18-19. President for the coming year is Harry D. Keller, administrator of the Grand Forks Deaconess Hospital. Sister Andriette, St. Alexius Hospital, Bismarck, is president-elect.

Other officers are: Vice president, N. W. Hodgson, administrator, Bismarck Hospital; secretary, Sister Rita Clare, superintendent, St. Michael's Hospital, Grand Forks, and treasurer, Sister Jane, business administrator, St. Alexius Hospital, Bismarck, who was reelected to that position. Delegates to the American Hospital Association are the president, Mr. Keller, and Rev. A. J. Galowitsch, St. Alexius Hospital, Bismarck.

One of the speakers at the conference was Harold K. Wright, general superintendent of Methodist Hospital, Sioux City, Iowa, who discussed hospital accounting.

Virginia

The Virginia Hospital Association installed its officers for the coming year during the Carolinas-Virginias conference in May. President is William J. Lees, superintendent, Jefferson Hospital, Roanoke. Other officers are treasurer, Homer E. Alberti, administrator and treasurer, Winchester Memorial Hospital, and secretary, Evelyn Heath, administrator, Northampton-Accomac Memorial Hospital, Nassawadox.

Missouri

The Missouri Hospital Association, meeting in St. Louis on April 11, installed C. E. Copeland, superintendent of the Missouri Baptist Hospital, St. Louis, as president for the next year. In addition to holding elections, the association outlined a three-point program: Reclassification of hospitals aimed toward a reduction of fire insurance rates, more equitable payments to hospitals for the care of workmen's compensation cases, and a state program for hospital care of indigents.

Officers for the coming year, in addition to Mr. Copeland, include: President-elect, C. Steacy Pickell, business manager, Kansas City General Hospital; first vice president, Herbert S. Wright, superintendent, Southeast Missouri Hospital, Cape Girardeau, and second vice president, Dr. David Littauer, director, Menorah Hospital, Kansas City. Rev. E. C. Hoflus, superintendent, Lutheran Hospital, St. Louis, was reelected treasurer.

Trustees elected for three-year terms are Mrs. Cornelia S. Knowles, superintendent, McMillan Hospital, St. Louis, and Edward A. Thomson, business manager, St. Joseph's Hospital, St. Joseph.

Tumor Research Hospital

Last month ground-breaking ceremonies were held at the site of the Veterans Administration tumor research hospital which will become a part of the Northwestern University medical center in Chicago. With costs totaling $14,000,000, the hospital will be constructed in about 20 months.

Equipment alone will cost approximately $2,000,000 and will include portable television cameras for three operating rooms with outlets to classrooms, lecture rooms and the assembly room. X-ray equipment will occupy the entire second floor. An atom-smashing betatron is to be installed for use in research work and direct treatment of malignant diseases.

The building, designed by the architectural firm of Schmidt Garden & Erikson, Chicago, will be 17 stories high with a capacity of 529 beds and facilities to care for 30,000 outpatients annually.

Operation of the hospital will be under the joint direction of the Veterans Administration and Northwestern University Medical School. A committee consisting of Dr. Richard H. Young, dean of the medical school, and several department heads has been assisting in the medical supervision and staffing of the hospital.

$8,500,000 Program

New York University-Bellevue Medical Center in New York City is initiating a building program which calls for the completion within 18 months of three of the five principle units of the center. Estimates of the cost of the three buildings are about $8,500,000. Two thirds of this amount have already been subscribed to the building campaign.

The units to be constructed are the main building for the medical schools, comprising classrooms, library and laboratories, the Alumni Hall Auditorium, and a residence.

Already in construction is the Institute of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation for which cornerstone laying ceremonies were held on May 24. Principal speakers at the ceremony were Mayor William O'Dwyer and Bernard M. Baruch. Occupancy is scheduled for late this year.

Last of the five buildings to be built for the center will be new facilities for the University Hospital. Location of the building program is an 11-acre site just north of Bellevue Hospital.

Hill-Burton Construction

In the four months between December 1, 1949 and April 1, 243 Hill-Burton project applications were approved, bringing the total number of approved projects under the law to 1,224. When completed, the projects will add 57,852 hospital beds and 214 health centers to present facilities. Total cost of the building is over $822,000,000 of which the federal share amounts to $282,000,000.

There are now 163 Hill-Burton projects completed and in operation. These represent 3,758 beds and 45 health centers. Under construction are 598 projects, and 463 have been initially approved.

All states and territories with the exception of the Virgin Islands have determined the share or basis on which hospitals will receive federal allotments. Five states have adopted the variable percentage system. The flat percentage chosen by other states ranges from one third to two thirds of total cost. The law specifies that each state agency must determine the federal share for projects.

The following table shows the states and territories, the 1950 allotment each receives from the total annual appropriation of $150,000,000, and the percentage each state has selected for determining the amount of federal money to be allocated to each project in the state.

Veterans Building Program

By the end of 1950 the greatest building program in the history of the Veterans Administration will be drawing to a close. The field of hospital construction first was entered by the Veterans Administration in 1923, and up to 1946 was a function of the technical service branch of the agency.

Initiated in 1947 and 1948, the current building program consists of 82 projects, 67 of which are the construction of new hospitals and the remainder calling for additions or conversions in old buildings. All but three of the new hospitals will be completed or in construction by the end of the present year. Twenty-six of the hospitals will be receiving patients.

Plans and specifications for the building program have been turned out by the Veterans Administration technical service at the rate of one hospital a month. For the present building program, and contrary to practice followed before, the services of outside architects have been employed under the direction of the Army Corps of Engineers. Return to the original pattern of the technical service handling all planning and construction phases of building is indicated when the present program has been completed.

Convention to Exhibit New Products

New products are being developed for initial display at the Fifty-second annual convention of the American Hospital Association in Atlantic City, September 18-21. Most of the equipment which will be introduced to the public for the first time in September features innovations in hospital furniture and supplies, with emphasis on space- and labor-saving factors.

Atlantic City's Convention Hall, where exhibits will be on display during the entire period, has 575 booth spaces. Here delegates may view the 325 exhibits of hospital manufacturers and suppliers. More exhibits have been scheduled for 1950 than at any other convention of the Association. For the convenience of visitors and delegates, the stage at the rear end of the Convention Hall will be used as a restaurant.

The most notable departure from exhibits of past years will be the large number of displays sponsored by manufacturers of hospital construction materials. Hospital people who are making plans for a building program may find new ideas in construction materials.

The Association's exhibit, in the center of the hall, will be doubled in size this year. Convention participants will find the lounge area, incorporated into the exhibit, a convenient place to rest and meet friends. Membership services offered by the Association will be the general theme of the exhibit.

Among the 35 educational exhibits will be a special research project in psychiatric services in general hospitals. Expected to be of more than passing interest to administrators, the exhibit will be an analysis of the extent of psychiatric services now offered by general hospitals throughout the country.

Federal hospitals, as always, will sponsor a large, informative exhibit depicting health services offered by the government.

Labor Developments

Threatened strikes by unionized building service workers and engineers in Oakland, Calif., materialized in walkouts on May 9 and 10 at Children's and Merritt hospitals. About 25 laundrymen, kitchen help and housekeepers, members of the A.F. of L.'s Building Service Employees' Union, struck Children's Hospital in demands for a union contract and wage increases. At Merritt Hospital the demands of six striking A.F. of L. stationary engineers were the same. Management in both cases contended that hospitals are exempt from negotiating with unions under the Taft-Hartley Act. A settlement, but no formal labor agreement, was reached by Merritt Hospital and its employees to end that strike on May 17.

Background information on the hospital-labor situation in California is the subject of an article on page 43 of this issue.

One hundred pharmacists in New York City municipal hospitals asked for a $1,000 a year increase. Represented by the Pharmacists Guild, A.F. of L., the employees now earn $2,460 a year.

A proposed minimum wage order for food handlers in Connecticut, issued on March 8 and to be effective on May 15, provoked vigorous protests by hospital administrators and demands for a temporary injunction. The order proposes a minimum wage of $28 for a 40- to 48-hour week for food handlers, plus two free meals, or 65 cents each, for employees working more than five hours in any day. Increases for food handlers would necessitate other raises in order to maintain the wage scale.

Minnesota's first State Hospital Day was held on May 12 in St. Peter under the sponsorship of two locals of the hospital employees union and with the cooperation of other city groups. Representatives from every state hospital in Minnesota were expected to attend.

Nurses in the medical ward of Bellevue Hospital, New York City, threatened to resign en masse as a protest over patient conditions. Specifically the nurses charged the hospital with excessive overcrowding and moving tuberculosis patients into medical wards. The New York State Nurses Association said the protest was not a strike and that it would support and aid the 45 nurses in every way possible.

A 40-hour week for nurses in all its hospitals was announced by the University of Chicago Clinics on May 13. Excluding federal institutions, it is the first hospital group in the Chicago area to adopt a 40-hour schedule for nurses. Only graduates are employed in the clinics. Other employment inducements are three weeks' vacation, two weeks' sick leave, six paid holidays, hospitalization and medical care at a cost of 50 cents a month, and a premium of $10 a month for night duty. Salaries begin at $220 a month with $5 annual increases for the first two years.

Negotiations by the Jersey City (N.J.) Medical Center Employees Union, A.F. of L., last month also centered on a 40-hour work week. Working conditions and jurisdictional disputes were other factors in the union-management talks.

More Registered Hospitals

Each year the American Medical Association's Council on Medical Education and Hospitals makes a hospital service report to members of the association, and this report is incorporated into a recent issue of the Journal. Statistics for the 29th annual listing indicate a peacetime high in the number of registered hospitals and quantity of hospital service during 1949.

At the end of that year there were 6,572 hospitals in the United States registered by the medical association. This is more than the total for 1948. An increase of 237,199 to total 16,659,973 patients were admitted during the year, and of these, 15,450,311 entered general hospitals. Patient days during 1949 totaled 447,107,115. In general hospitals alone patient days were 156,746,695 and the average length of stay 10.1 days, or a decrease of .4 over 1948.

Bed capacity for the year totaled 1,439,030 with record capacities of 656,611 in state hospitals and 600,- 165 in all other hospitals, excluding 182,254 beds in federal hospitals. Over-all hospital occupancy dropped slightly from 85.5 per cent in 1948 to 85.1 per cent in 1949.

Nursing service in hospitals was provided by 199,295 graduate nurses and 99,066 student nurses in 1,151 schools. An additional 33,330 graduate nurses were employed on private duty assignments. As compared with figures for a year ago, an increase was reported in the professional nurse figures. A slight decrease in the number of students, 1,108 less than for 1948, results in part from the closing of 12 schools of nursing.

Mistaken Identity

A case of mistaken identity in a Pacific coast municipal hospital has caused hospital authorities to institute new procedures for positive identification of the dead in order to prevent duplication of the episode.

Two women, both with the same name, were under care in the same ward. After the death of one woman, the wrong husband was notified. He declined to see the body. The error was discovered three weeks later with the appearance of the real husband of the dead woman, but in the meantime the husband of the living and recovering woman had died in the same hospital.

As a result of this situation, hospital officers will demand in the future that relatives or friends properly identify the dead. A contributing factor to the confusion was the temporary transfer of both patients to other county hospitals. Closer identification of such transfers also will reduce the possibility of a similar situation arising again.

Potential Fire Hazard

One-fifth of all hospital beds in New York City are unsuitable because of their location in buildings that are not fire resistant according to a study made by the Hospital Council of Greater New York. The largest number of unsuitable beds was in the borough of Manhattan.

In the New York area there are 158 general care hospitals and related institutions with a total of 42,355 beds. Beds in buildings that are not fire resistant total 8,883. More than half these beds are under municipal operation.

Dr. John B. Pastore, executive director of the council, explained that these beds do not constitute an immediate hazard but that fire prevention devices could be installed to make the buildings safer.

Children's Services

New services for children are being instituted by two New York City Hospitals. The House of St. Giles the Cripple, Brooklyn, announced the opening of a cerebral palsy therapy unit at its Garden City, Long Island, institution, the Convalescent Home and School. The only inpatient public cerebral palsy unit in the Greater New York area, the new program will include physical, speech and occupational therapies as well as complete medical and dental services. Children between the ages of two and 12 will be admitted after referral by approved cerebral palsy clinics and on the recommendation of the hospital's medical staff.

An orthodontic outpatient service for the correction of extreme teeth and jaw deformities in children has been established at Morrisania City Hospital, the Bronx. Functional improvements to facilitate proper chewing and correction of facial disfigurement and speech defects also will be attempted.

Report Drug Poisoning

Warning has come from the federal Food and Drug Administration that a drug is on the market which may cause poisoning. It is Oxylin Tablets, uncoated, distributed by Drexel Laboratories and Louis E. Evon of Drexel Hill and Upper Darby, Pa. On the market for years, the product recently was changed by the addition of enough boric acid to result in serious poisoning in sensitive individuals, the Food and Drug Administration reported.

After a factory inspection by the administration in May, the distributor started recalling shipments. About 18,000 of the tablets have not been located.

Hospitals, physicians, pharmacists and consumers have been warned not to use the drug and to return the tablets to the manufacturer.

Research Analyst

Appointment of Walter E. Boek as chief research analyst was announced last month by the Health Information Foundation. A graduate of Cornell University and of Michigan State College, where he received a master's degree, Mr. Boek formerly directed research for the Michigan Agricultural Extension Service in the college's department of sociology and anthropology.

Research by Mr. Boek has been in such fields as population distribution and change, vital statistics, rural medical services and physician-population ratios.

Heads Medical Examiners

Elected to the presidency of the National Board of Medical Examiners at its annual meeting held recently was Dr. Howard Thomas Karsner, medical research adviser to the surgeon general of the Navy. Dr. Karsner's term of office begins immediately and will last for three years. He was professor of pathology at Western Reserve University, Cleveland, for 35 years, retiring in 1949 when he entered federal service.

Art Loan to Hospital

A new idea in cooperation between neighboring, but unrelated, institutions has been developed in Montclair, N. J. The art museum there has loaned to Mountainside Hospital a number of original oil paintings for the lobby, waiting rooms, offices and wards. Some of the pictures were bought by friends or trustees for permanent display in the hospital. All pictures were initially approved in advance by the art committee of the board of trustees.

This arrangement not only brought the museum's art works before a wider audience, but it also made for good public relations in the community.

Nurses Table Action on Compulsion

Three of the largest national associations of nurses, meeting last month in San Francisco, refused to follow the American Medical Association's telegraphed request to condemn compulsory health insurance. Instead, the 8,000 delegates tabled a resolution declaring that compulsory health insurance, wherever adopted, "caused a decline in national health and deterioration of medical standards and facilities," until they had examined thoroughly both the view of the medical association and the government plan advocated by Oscar R. Ewing, Federal Security Administrator.

On other matters a definite stand was taken by the sixteenth biennial convention of the American Nurses Association, National League of Nursing Education and National Organization for Public Health Nursing. Resolutions passed favored government-subsidized research to improve nursing education, extension of federal social security benefits to all nurses and closer fraternity with Negro nurses groups.

Full participation was voted for Negro nurse organizations in all activities of the nurses association. All but four state nursing associations now include Negro nurses, and since 1946 eight southern states have voted to include Negroes in their membership.

Officers of the three groups for the coming year are: American Nurses Association president, Mrs. Elizabeth K. Porter, professor of nursing at Western Reserve University, Cleveland; re-elected president of the National League of Nursing Education, Agnes Gelinas, director of nursing education at Skidmore College, New York City, and president of the National Organization for Public Health Nursing, Emile Sargent, Detroit Visiting Nurses.

Housing Nurses

Graduate nurses decidedly prefer living outside the hospital, according to a study of the need for housing of graduate nurses made by the Hospital Survey and Planning Division of the New Jersey Hospital Association. Conclusions are based on the replies of 51 of the 79 voluntary hospitals polled and cover a total of 2,846 employed graduate nurses.

Although 77 per cent were not living in the hospital or nurses homes, 85 per cent of nurses seeking employment do not desire to live in. None of the hospitals said they refuse to let their nurses live out; however six per cent did not answer this question. Compensation to nurses is made entirely in cash by a quarter of the hospitals, 71 per cent offer part cash plus maintenance, and the remaining four per cent did not answer this question.

In planning future construction, 53 per cent of the hospitals would not build a nurses home; 43 per cent would provide one, and of the hospitals with homes, 48 per cent would not build one today.

Requiring student nurses to live in was advocated by 55 per cent. The remaining hospitals were evenly split in believing students may live out, housing should be optional for students, and only out-of-town students should be required to live in. Fifteen per cent of the hospitals did not reply to the question.

Revision at Baylor

Transfer of the school of nursing and enlargement of the program were announced recently by the board of trustees of Baylor University, Dallas. Beginning in September, the school of nursing will be on the Waco campus of the university.

Under the new nursing school program, students will receive a diploma in nursing after completion of 12 months of class work in the Baylor college of arts and sciences and two years of hospital training. Following an additional year of advanced courses, students will receive the degree of bachelor of science in nursing and will be qualified for a basic public health job. Zora N. Fielder, dean of the school of nursing, is in charge of the reorganization.

Baylor's 12-month course in practical nursing will still be conducted in the Dallas hospital of the university.

Nurse Recruitment for Polio

Procedures for the recruitment of nurses for poliomyelitis have been drawn up by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis and the American Red Cross. A similar program for physical therapists will be administered jointly by the foundation and the American Physical Therapy Association. Both procedures are designed to facilitate the recruitment of trained workers in emergency periods.

Local polio nursing committees will be developed from the nursing section of the Red Cross chapter disaster committee to evaluate the need for nurses and arrange for recruitment and training. Nurses so recruited by the Red Cross will become employees of the hospital to which they are assigned. Because interstate recruitment is necessary in an emergency, salary scales and range of working hours have been set up by the national organizations.

"Made real purty, but whut's it fer?"

That looks like a Rongeur you're holding, Sacramento Sam. It probably was made by Fred Haslam & Co., who started to make surgical instruments in 1848 (the same year your grandpappy dug for gold at Sutter's Mill). And the time your grandpappy stopped that claim-jumper's bullet, it's quite possible that an old model Haslam instrument helped clean up his clavicle where the .44 slug had smashed it to splinters. For even in the first year of their production, Haslam Instruments were accepted as ideally suited to the needs of the medical profession.

Now, after 102 years of technical advancement, Haslam Surgical Instruments are internationally recognized for their dependability.

Our present day double action Stille-Luer Rongeurs are masterpieces of precision. A century of experience enables us to produce some of the world's finest surgical instruments — strong and sensitive as the hands that use them.

Clean Needles

Casady HYPODERMIC NEEDLE CLEANER

The new Casady Hypodermic Needle Cleaner can reduce personnel time in the cleaning procedure by as much as 80%. If a hospital or clinic cleans 500 needles, the time of four hours' cleaning by hand methods can be reduced to less than one hour when the Casady automatic cleaner is used.

In addition, the Casady Hypodermic Needle Cleaner does the job thoroughly, cleaning out the heads of the needles with an electrically driven swab at five revolutions per second. Both needle heads and shafts are then "tri-cleaned" with three separate fluids passed successively through each needle under 20 pounds pressure, after which compressed air is forced through the needles, leaving them dry and clean.

• Quickly and efficiently cleans all standard brands and sizes of hypodermic needles from tiny No. 27 to large No. 15 and long spinal puncture needle.

The Campbell Bed Lamp clamps to the angle iron of the head section on any hospital bed; therefore permitting a perfect reading position at all times regardless of degree of elevation.

The Campbell Bed Lamp is fully adjustable through flexible joints and since it is easily detachable from its base, the lamp can be used for examinations. When turned upward, The Campbell Lamp provides an excellent night light.

PATIENT IDENTIFICATION SYSTEM

(Measures ⅜" wide)

A SOFT PLIABLE Bracelet Contains Patient's Name

(Permanently attached to patient's wrist)

Meets all Recommendations of American Hospital Association Committee.

FOR BOTH INFANTS AND ADULTS...

You Can Take the Word of This Nurse, WILMA NICKERSON, R. N., Delivery Room Supervisor, Saint Luke's Hospital, Kansas City, Mo.

"We have found the new Presco Identification Bracelet to be of real time saving value to the nurses and the Bracelets have keepsake value.

We look for accuracy concerning the name and sex first. No pinching, scratching or irritation of the skin, the materials must not be altered by sterilization methods, and the bracelet must be easily assembled and attached.

The plastic bracelet meets all these requirements. We type the baby's name and sex on one side of the name tab, and the mother's on the other. Since the plastic holder for the tab is waterproof, the tab cannot become altered in the bath or other nursery procedure.

We attach the baby's identification bracelet in the Delivery Room quickly and easily and leave it on throughout the hospital stay, sending it home on the baby's wrist. A small charge is made to the patient, but it is more inexpensive than any other bracelet we have used."

HOW IT WORKS
Kit contains materials to make 144 bracelets. Adjustable strips fit any size wrist. Name cards slip into transparent plastic bracelet. Includes patient's address (if desired), etc. Cannot come off unless cut off.

EASY Positive IDENTIFICATION
ADULT use in Multiple-Bed Rooms, Surgical Cases, Pediatrics, Blood, the Morgue, and many other applications.

The Jarvis & Jarvis MAGIC-SWIVELOCK† Caster

NOW . . . you'll save on labor costs because now your wheeled equipment can be handled quickly, safely, easily by just one operator . . . in a straight line along narrow corridors . . . around sharp corners . . . alongside bed or operating table . . . without zig-zagging, without bumping walls or doorways. The New J&J MAGIC-SWIVELOCK Caster makes this possible with a completely effortless, automatic operation!

Here's how MAGIC-SWIVELOCK works. As you start off, the leading MAGIC-SWIVELOCK caster locks automatically—there's nothing to set with hand or foot. While the other three casters are free to swivel, the MAGIC-SWIVELOCK caster keeps equipment rolling on a perfectly straight line. You can turn up side aisles or cross corridors accurately, the equipment always under perfect control as it pivots on the leading MAGIC-SWIVELOCK. When you want to go sideways—against an operating table, up to a dumb waiter or into a wall-recess storage space—merely push against the side of the equipment. MAGIC-SWIVELOCK releases instantly, and the equipment moves on four free-turning casters! And MAGIC-SWIVELOCK will operate perfectly no matter which end of the equipment is pushed!

MAGIC-SWIVELOCK is simple—but it's revolutionary! There's no other caster device like it anywhere! Wheeled equipment becomes so easy to handle, so effortless to push, so safe for everybody concerned! Just one person with no special training is all that's needed to guide equipment with MAGIC-SWIVELOCK Casters; front, sideways, any way at all!

MAGIC-SWIVELOCK Casters, like all J&J casters, are built for long, trouble-free service. They'll fit any of your existing equipment, and can be attached as quickly as you can say "MAGIC-SWIVELOCK Casters are the greatest thing yet for hospital rolling stock."

Davis & Geck, Inc... and only Davis & Geck Inc. makes Atraumatic® Needles

The term Atraumatic is a trade mark of Davis & Geck, Inc. It applies only to needles offered to the profession by D&G.

The construction of the D&G Atraumatic Needle provides special advantages that are not duplicated by any other brand of needle, even though that needle may be erroneously referred to as "Atraumatic."

D&G advanced the development of the Atraumatic needle principle and now produces a complete range of sizes and styles to meet virtually every situation where minimum trauma is essential.

Remember, if you want Atraumatic efficiency and quality, make sure that you are using D&G Atraumatic Needles. A few of the outstanding Atraumatic features are listed at the right.

1. Needle of practically the same diameter as the suture, forming a smooth, continuous unit.
2. Positive anchorage of suture in needle.
3. Swaged-on portion provides a sleeve of exceptional strength with no projecting edges.
4. Flattened area on all needles to prevent turning in the needle holder.
5. Each suture needle combination developed in collaboration with recognized authorities—represents the consensus of professional opinion in its particular field.
6. A comprehensive variety to meet virtually every surgical need.

165 in all other hospitals, excluding 182,254 beds in federal hospitals. Over-all hospital occupancy dropped slightly from 85.5 per cent in 1948 to 85.1 per cent in 1949.

Nursing service in hospitals was provided by 199,295 graduate nurses and 99,066 student nurses in 1,151 schools. An additional 33,330 graduate nurses were employed on private duty assignments. As compared with figures for a year ago, an increase was reported in the professional nurse figures. A slight decrease in the number of students, 1,108 less than for 1948, results in part from the closing of 12 schools of nursing.

Mistaken Identity

A case of mistaken identity in a Pacific coast municipal hospital has caused hospital authorities to institute new procedures for positive identification of the dead in order to prevent duplication of the episode.

Two women, both with the same name, were under care in the same ward. After the death of one woman, the wrong husband was notified. He declined to see the body. The error was discovered three weeks later with the appearance of the real husband of the dead woman, but in the meantime the husband of the living and recovering woman had died in the same hospital.

As a result of this situation, hospital officers will demand in the future that relatives or friends properly identify the dead. A contributing factor to the confusion was the temporary transfer of both patients to other county hospitals. Closer identification of such transfers also will reduce the possibility of a similar situation arising again.

Potential Fire Hazard

One-fifth of all hospital beds in New York City are unsuitable because of their location in buildings that are not fire resistant according to a study made by the Hospital Council of Greater New York. The largest number of unsuitable beds was in the borough of Manhattan.

In the New York area there are 158 general care hospitals and related institutions with a total of 42,355 beds. Beds in buildings that are not fire resistant total 8,883. More than half these beds are under municipal operation.

Dr. John B. Pastore, executive director of the council, explained that these beds do not constitute an immediate hazard but that fire prevention devices could be installed to make the buildings safer.

Children's Services

New services for children are being instituted by two New York City Hospitals. The House of St. Giles the Cripple, Brooklyn, announced the opening of a cerebral palsy therapy unit at its Garden City, Long Island, institution, the Convalescent Home and School. The only inpatient public cerebral palsy unit in the Greater New York area, the new program will include

Report Drug Poisoning

Warning has come from the federal Food and Drug Administration that a drug is on the market which may cause poisoning. It is Oxylin Tablets, uncoated, distributed by Drexel Laboratories and Louis E. Evon of Drexel Hill and Upper Darby, Pa. On the market for years, the product recently was changed by the addition of enough boric acid to result in serious poisoning in sensitive individuals, the Food and Drug Administration reported.

After a factory inspection by the administration in May, the distributor started recalling shipments. About 18,000 of the tablets have not been located.

Hospitals, physicians, pharmacists and consumers have been warned not to use the drug and to return the tablets to the manufacturer.

Research Analyst

Appointment of Walter E. Boek as chief research analyst was announced last month by the Health Information Foundation. A graduate of Cornell University and of Michigan State College, where he received a master's degree, Mr. Boek formerly directed research for the Michigan Agricultural Extension Service in the college's department of sociology and anthropology.

Research by Mr. Boek has been in such fields as population distribution and change, vital statistics, rural medical services and physician-population ratios.

Heads Medical Examiners

Elected to the presidency of the National Board of Medical Examiners at its annual meeting held recently was Dr. Howard Thomas Karsner, medical research adviser to the surgeon general of the Navy. Dr. Karsner's term of office begins immediately and will last for three years. He was professor of pathology at Western Reserve University, Cleveland, for 35 years, retiring in 1949 when he entered federal service.

Art Loan to Hospital

A new idea in cooperation between neighboring, but unrelated, institutions has been developed in Montclair, N. J. The art museum there has loaned to Mountainside Hospital a number of original oil paintings for the lobby, waiting rooms, offices and wards. Some of the pictures were bought by friends or trustees for permanent display in the hospital. All pictures were initially approved in advance by the art committee of the board of trustees.

This arrangement not only brought the museum's art works before a wider audience, but it also made for good public relations in the community.

Nurses Table Action on Compulsion

Three of the largest national associations of nurses, meeting last month in San Francisco, refused to follow the American Medical Association's telegraphed request to condemn compulsory health insurance. Instead, the 8,000 delegates tabled a resolution declaring that compulsory health insurance, wherever adopted, "caused a decline in national health and deterioration of medical standards and facilities," until they had examined thoroughly both the view of the medical association and the government plan advocated by Oscar R. Ewing, Federal Security Administrator.

On other matters a definite stand was taken by the sixteenth biennial convention of the American Nurses Association, National League of Nursing Education and National Organization for Public Health Nursing. Resolutions passed favored government-subsidized research to improve nursing education, extension of federal social security benefits to all nurses and closer fraternity with Negro nurses groups.

Full participation was voted for Negro nurse organizations in all activities of the nurses association. All but four state nursing associations now include Negro nurses, and since 1946 eight southern states have voted to include Negroes in their membership.

Officers of the three groups for the coming year are: American Nurses Association president, Mrs. Elizabeth K. Porter, professor of nursing at Western Reserve University, Cleveland; re-elected president of the National League of Nursing Education, Agnes Gelinas, director of nursing education at Skidmore College, New York City, and president of the National Organization for Public Health Nursing, Emile Sargent, Detroit Visiting Nurses.

Housing Nurses

Graduate nurses decidedly prefer living outside the hospital, according to a study of the need for housing of graduate nurses made by the Hospital Survey and Planning Division of the New Jersey Hospital Association. Conclusions are based on the replies of 51 of the 79 voluntary hospitals polled and cover a total of 2,846 employed graduate nurses.

Although 77 per cent were not living in the hospital or nurses homes, 85 per cent of nurses seeking employment do not desire to live in. None of the hospitals said they refuse to let their nurses live out; however six per cent did not answer this question. Compensation to nurses is made entirely in cash by a quarter of the hospitals, 71 per cent offer part cash plus maintenance, and the remaining four per cent did not answer this question.

In planning future construction, 53 per cent of the hospitals would not build a nurses home; 43 per cent would provide one, and of the hospitals with homes, 48 per cent would not build one today.

Requiring student nurses to live in was advocated by 55 per cent. The remaining hospitals were evenly split in believing students may live out, housing should be optional for students, and only out-of-town students should be required to live in. Fifteen per cent of the hospitals did not reply to the question.

Revision at Baylor

Transfer of the school of nursing and enlargement of the program were announced recently by the board of trustees of Baylor University, Dallas. Beginning in September, the school of nursing will be on the Waco campus of the university.

Under the new nursing school program, students will receive a diploma in nursing after completion of 12 months of class work in the Baylor college of arts and sciences and two years of hospital training. Following an additional year of advanced courses, students will receive the degree of bachelor of science in nursing and will be qualified for a basic public health job. Zora N. Fielder, dean of the school of nursing, is in charge of the reorganization.

Baylor's 12-month course in practical nursing will still be conducted in the Dallas hospital of the university.

Nurse Recruitment for Polio

Procedures for the recruitment of nurses for poliomyelitis have been drawn up by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis and the American Red Cross. A similar program for physical therapists will be administered jointly by the foundation and the American Physical Therapy Association. Both procedures are designed to facilitate the recruitment of trained workers in emergency periods.

Local polio nursing committees will be developed from the nursing section of the Red Cross chapter disaster committee to evaluate the need for nurses and arrange for recruitment and training. Nurses so recruited by the Red Cross will become employees of the hospital to which they are assigned. Because interstate recruitment is necessary in an emergency, salary scales and range of working hours have been set up by the national organizations.

"Made real purty, but whut's it fer?"

That looks like a Rongeur you're holding, Sacramento Sam. It probably was made by Fred Haslam & Co., who started to make surgical instruments in 1848 (the same year your grandpappy dug for gold at Sutter's Mill). And the time your grandpappy stopped that claim-jumper's bullet, it's quite possible that an old model Haslam instrument helped clean up his clavicle where the .44 slug had smashed it to splinters. For even in the first year of their production, Haslam Instruments were accepted as ideally suited to the needs of the medical profession.

Now, after 102 years of technical advancement, Haslam Surgical Instruments are internationally recognized for their dependability.

Our present day double action Stille-Luer Rongeurs are masterpieces of precision. A century of experience enables us to produce some of the world's finest surgical instruments — strong and sensitive as the hands that use them.

Foreword to the directory issue

THE 1950 Statistics and Directory supplement of HOSPITALS differs from its predecessor in two respects. Sixteen tables of special information have been added to the statistical section, and the names of hospital chief executive officers have been restored to the directory section.

In all there are 27 tables. Eleven of these are standard in that the data are compiled from the answers to questions which are asked year after year.

Such standard information falls into three general classifications: Hospital facilities, hospital services and hospital operation. It is assembled from questionnaires mailed to all hospitals of record, and in this issue it covers the year October 1, 1948, to September 30, 1949, with certain corrections made up to March 15, 1950.

When brought up to date annually, the statistics in tables 1 through 11 provide a continuing report on the progress of hospitals and hospital service. With a few exceptions this information is not available elsewhere. While its primary purpose is to establish dependable guideposts for the administration of hospitals, it is useful in many other ways.

Most of the information in tables 12 through 27 has never been assembled before. It is planned that these same statistics will be gathered at intervals of three to five years, rather than annually. Meantime similar facts will be sought each year, with each set presented at intervals of three to five years.

In studying the tables, close attention should be given to column headings and footnotes. Some of the data are projected and reported figures will be found. No projections are attempted in the state tables.

The directory listing of hospitals, starting on page 65, is unusually complete. Because the pertinent facts about a hospital are numerous, a report on each must be greatly condensed. Before any attempt is made to use this section, readers should familiarize themselves with the directional information to be found on both sides of the heavy paper insert between pages 64 and 65. By reference to the code symbols explained there, it is possible to check the profile of any hospital against a total of 63 pertinent facts.

During the fall of 1949, questionnaires were sent to 7,300 hospitals. Returns were received from 6,796. This is a remarkably good return and we express appreciation for this cooperation. These tabulations are only possible as the majority of hospitals cooperate.

The directory figures should be studied regularly by every hospital administrator. Public contact requires knowledge of figures contained there if the individual administrator is to appear informed in regard to the hospital field. Further, many of the statistics are valuable for comparative purposes in indicating the position of the individual hospital. Such comparative results can have important bearing on administrative decisions.
—GEORGE BUGBEE, Executive Director.

LEADER

For over a half century Ohio Chemical has pioneered in providing the purest of medical gases. Ohio developed the improved purification processes that brought several of our modern anesthetics to present standards. It was first to deliver completely reconditioned cylinders, cleaned, inspected, and sealed against tampering and dust.

SAFETY

Now Ohio cylinders offer never-before-possible operating ease and safety. Extensive research and testing have led Ohio to introduce specially formulated Nylon valve seats, tough, self-sealing Teflon valve packing, and Fluorolube lubrication for added safety and smooth, trouble-free performance.

SERVICE

Ever-increasing numbers of Ohio supply outlets in principal cities offer unmatchable delivery service of medical gases in all eight standard size cylinders. The same trained Ohio representative who can supply you with medical gases also calls frequently to check and service your Ohio-made anesthesia, resuscitative, and oxygen therapy apparatus, as well as sterilizers, lights, operating tables, and other equipment and supplies. Ohio meets your medical and surgical needs completely.

About the Association

SINCE IT WAS founded more than 50 years ago, the American Hospital Association has grown from a nucleus of eight persons to an organization of 4,563 institutional and 3,594 personal members.

It was in September 1899 in Cleveland that the original group of eight superintendents met to establish the Hospital Superintendents Club which, in 1906, became the American Hospital Association of the United States and Canada. The original purpose of the superintendents' club, the first of its kind, was to serve as a means through which members could get together to exchange information and discuss new techniques and ideas.

Since its establishment, the Association has reflected the growth and development of hospitals in America. As the hospital system has expanded, the Association has broadened its scope of activity and its services to members.

One of the major changes in the Association structure was institutional membership, which was approved in 1918. Another was appointment of a fulltime executive secretary in 1919 and, a year later, establishment of a headquarters office in Chicago. The House of Delegates, governing body of the Association, was set up in 1938, at the same time the present constitution and by-laws were adopted and the first four types of institutional membership defined.

Within the past 10 years, Association activities have expanded to include a year-around program of institutes for administrators and department heads; an architects' approval program; publication of a second journal—TRUSTEE; establishment of the Washington Service Bureau; addition to the headquarters staff of specialists in accounting, dietetics, purchasing and personnel; inauguration of a national program for hospital auxiliaries; accelerated publication of manuals and many other services.

In recent years the Association has become increasingly active in national affairs that affect hospitals. Active support of the Hospital Survey and Construction Act was a major factor in passage of that bill in 1946. An official stand against compulsory health insurance has been published and a three-point program for improvement in the distribution of hospital care offered as an alternative.

The Association today has seven main purposes as set forth in the by-laws. These are:

"To promote the welfare of the people through the development of hospital and outpatient service;

"To encourage professional education and scientific research;

"To aid in the health education of the public;

"To cooperate with other organizations having similar objects;

"To distribute factual knowledge in regard to the various specialized services and functions of hospitals;

"To coordinate the plans, problems, actions and needs of all hospitals for the benefit of individual members."

Hospital facilities

A GENERAL EXPANSION of hospital facilities in the United States is still under way. Replies to a questionnaire sent to all hospitals of record show an across-the-board increase in number of hospitals, number of beds, number of bassinets and total assets.

Statistics in this 1950 inventory for the most part are reported as of September 30, 1949. A comparison with reports one year earlier indicates the extent of gain:

	1949	1948
Hospitals	6,277	6,160
Beds	1,435,288	1,411,450
Bassinets	88,891	87,241
Total Assets	$6,945,805,000	$6,489,794,000

While a general expansion of facilities continues, reports for 1949 show one notable reversal in trend. Short term proprietary and governmental hospitals gained both in number of institutions and number of beds, something that has not happened for several years.

Between 1948 and 1949 the gains were as follows for the three ownership categories, short term and excluding federal hospitals: Proprietary, 48 hospitals and 1,095 beds; governmental, 32 hospitals and 1,368 beds; voluntary nonprofit, 6 hospitals and 2,566 beds.

While new proprietary and governmental hospitals together outnumber new voluntary nonprofit hospitals about 13 to 1, the latter report slightly more than 50 per cent of the new beds. It is highly improbable that the 2,566 new voluntary nonprofit beds are within the walls of six new hospitals, an average of 641 beds. In the absence of statistical detail, it may be assumed that a high proportion of the new voluntary nonprofit beds represents additions to the existing plant.

The sudden upturn in number of short term proprietary and governmental hospitals is nevertheless newsworthy. A regional tally of the one-year change in number of hospitals reveals that the new proprietary hospitals are concentrated in three areas, with more than half in the West South Central region which embraces Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana.

A further review shows that short term hospital bed capacity increased most in an area stretching west from the Mississippi to the three coastal states.

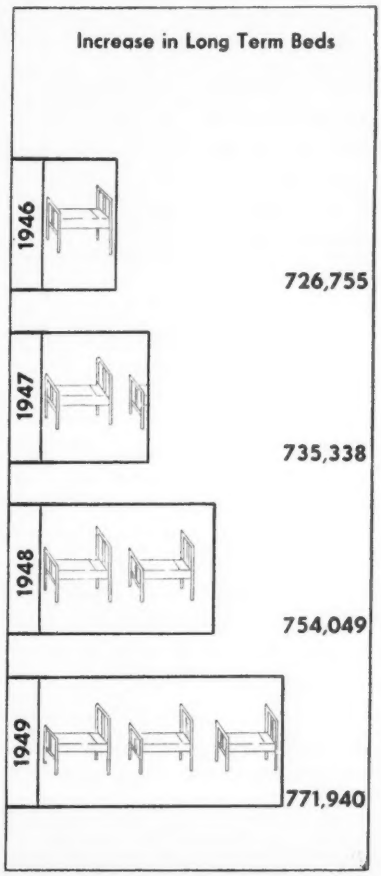
In recent years the need for more long term hospital facilities has been emphasized often. In themselves the 1949 figures on increasing bed capacity suggest that this need is being filled gradually. Excluding federal hospitals, the net increase in beds over one year was 22,920, and 17,891 or 78 per cent of these were long term beds. During the previous year, however, the net gain in all beds, excluding federal, was 25,057, and 18,711 or 75 per cent of these were for long term service.

Special interest has attached to the long term hospital classified as general and special. Built and fitted to care for the chronic disease patient, it is assigned an important role as medical science centers more attention on this type of disease.



A review of expanding facilities over the last three years indicates but little progress in this direction. Between 1946 and 1949 there has been a net gain of 48,710 beds. Included are all hospitals in the United States except those owned by the federal government. Ninety-four per cent of this net gain represents beds in hospitals classified as mental and allied. A three-year recapitulation shows these gains and losses:

General & special long term	—4,270*
Mental & allied	45,992
Tuberculosis	3,463
NET GAIN	48,710

*Loss.

The net loss of 4,270 general and special long term beds is accounted for by a 7,718 decline between the years 1947 and 1948. Returns for 1949 show a gain of 2,105 beds.

Hospital assets reported for 1949 in general are greater, although the increases are far from uniform.

The survey questionnaire asked for a breakdown as follows: 1. Fixed assets, net—land, buildings and equipment (original cost less depreciation). If not recorded on books, please estimate). 2. Building funds—cash and pledges receivable on hand for new construction and equipment. 3. Endowments. 4. All other assets.

Between 1948 and 1949 the value of total assets of all hospitals in the United States rose almost a half billion dollars, from $6,489,794,000 to $6,945,805,000. The value of assets per bed rose from $4,598 to $4,839. This increase per bed was distributed as follows:

Type of Hospital	1949	1948
General & special short term	$8,255	$7,844
General & special long term	5,491	4,525
Mental & allied	2,052	1,902
Tuberculosis	5,640	5,199
Federal	4,681	4,867

Even among short term hospitals there are great variations in the asset values reported. The average per bed figure for voluntary nonprofit hospitals of 250 beds and over is nearly three times that found for hospitals with 50 or fewer beds.

Hospital services

During the year that ended September 30, 1949, more people received hospital care; they found the hospitals less crowded, and on an average they were discharged earlier than during the year before. A statistical comparison for all United States hospitals shows: Admissions up . . . Average daily census down . . . Occupancy percentage down . . . Average length of stay down.

Data in Table 6, set beside that gathered for 1948, may be used to show in considerable detail the trends in demand for hospital service. The figures on admission:

All hospitals	Up	5.9%
General & special short term	Up	2.3%
Voluntary nonprofit	Up	4.5%
Proprietary	Up	0.7%
Governmental	Down	4.6%
General & special long term	Up	2.7%
Mental & allied	Up	0.6%
Tuberculosis	Up	13.5%
Federal	Up	50.3%

The most striking fact revealed here is the towering increase of admissions to federal hospitals—more than 50 per cent—while no group of non-federal hospitals other than tuberculosis could report as much as 5 per cent. The federal government owns all kinds of hospitals—short term, long term, general, special, mental, tuberculosis. Since these are operated by several agencies, and the statistics submitted are not broken down, an explanation of the increases cannot be found in the tables.

This pre-eminent position is further emphasized by examining the distribution of new admissions. All hospitals together reported admissions numbering 17,821,765 for 1949 against 16,821,483 for 1948, an increase of 1,000,282. The 376 federal hospitals admitted 62.4 per cent of these million new patients, leaving but 37.6 for the 5,901 non-federal hospitals.

Excluding federal hospital admissions, most of the remaining 15,956,362 patients reported for 1949 received general or special short term care. This number was 15,427,726, or 96.6 per cent. Among these short term hospitals, those classified as voluntary nonprofit admitted a higher proportion of patients than in any other postwar year. For 1949 this was 71.7 per cent, for 1948 it was 70.2 per cent,

- Average Daily Census
- Number of Admissions
- Per Cent of Occupancy
- Length of Stay
- Newborn Daily Census
- Births
- Outpatient Visits
- Specified Facilities and Services for 1947 it was 68.7 per cent, and for 1946 it was 69.9 per cent.

The average daily census was down in all except mental and allied, tuberculosis, and federal government hospitals. General and special short term hospitals as a group reported a census drop of 2.4 per cent, with the loss distributed as follows: Voluntary nonprofit, 2.0 per cent; proprietary, 2.5 per cent; governmental, 3.4 per cent.

In percentage of occupancy, the reduction was even more general, with only federal hospitals showing a gain, as the following tabulation shows:

All hospitals	86.4%	87.9%
General & special short term	73.9%	76.5%
Voluntary nonprofit	75.9%	78.1%
Proprietary	61.2%	64.7%
Governmental	72.6%	76.0%
General & special long term	86.0%	91.2%
Mental & allied	97.2%	99.0%
Tuberculosis	83.9%	86.5%
Federal	84.2%	80.3%

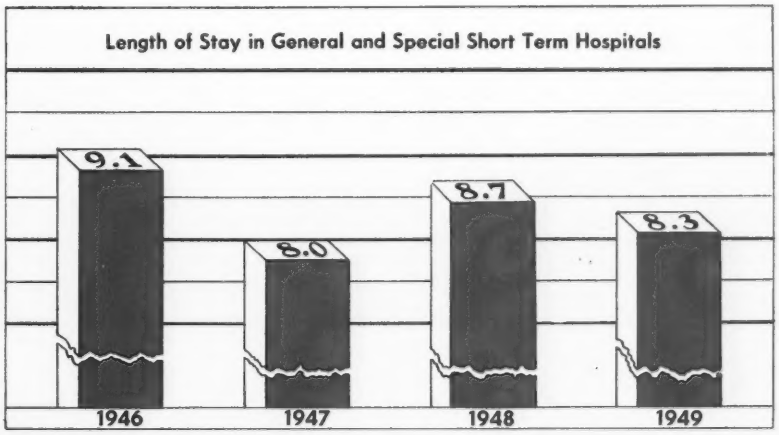
A significant figure each year is the average length of stay. For all short term hospitals, excluding federal, the figure was 8.3 days in 1949 against 8.7 in 1948.

In 1949, as in earlier years, the shortest stay was reported by proprietary hospitals, and this was 5.6 days, a reduction from 5.8. Voluntary nonprofit hospitals reported 8 days, down from 8.5. Governmental short term hospitals reported 11.2 days, an increase from 11. In terms of benefit to patients, the average reduction of 0.4 of a day in all reporting hospitals was impressive. For the 15,427,726 patients admitted to short term hospitals, this meant a saving of 617,109 days of hospitalization.

The days of overcrowded infant nurseries appears to be permanently past. Over a period of three years the number of bassinets has increased, the number of hospital births has decreased, and the newborn daily census has decreased. These figures cover only short term hospitals, federal excluded, since they represent all but a fraction of facilities available for maternal and infant care. Also, the figures are not projected, but the number of hospitals reporting this information has been consistently near 90 per cent of all hospitals of record.

The number of outpatient visits reported continues to climb, rising from 45,431,338 in 1948 to 47,721,353 in 1949. Short term hospitals, federal excluded, reported an increase from 34,791,676 to 36,828,618.

More hospitals continue to offer more of those service that make for well rounded, scientific medical and hospital care. These services are provided by a group of so-called specified services and facilities, 21 of which are inventoried in tables 4 and 5.



Hospital operation

- Expenditures
- Payroll
- Patient Income
- Total Income
- Fulltime Personnel

AFTER A BRIEF setback, short term hospitals in the United States were operating in black figures for the year that ended September 30, 1949. Their total income exceeded total expenditures by a small margin, which was not the case in 1948.

This return to a healthier financial condition was accomplished in a period during which new high marks were touched by all operating figures—total expenditures, payroll expenditures, number of employees, total income and patient income.

Although patients paid an additional $69,369,000 for hospital service, they were still $333,443,000 short of meeting the expenditures necessary to provide that service. To meet this deficiency, hospitals had to rely on income from other sources, including subsidies, grants and appropriations from governmental agencies, other contributions and endowments.

The short term classification embraces nonprofit, proprietary and governmental hospitals, other than federal, and 72 per cent of expenditures for short term service was disbursed by nonprofit hospitals. During the 1949 report year these nonprofit hospitals expended $1,333,372,000 on service to patients and received from those patients $1,195,243,000. Patient income fell short of expenditures by $138,129,000, or $1.56 per patient day.

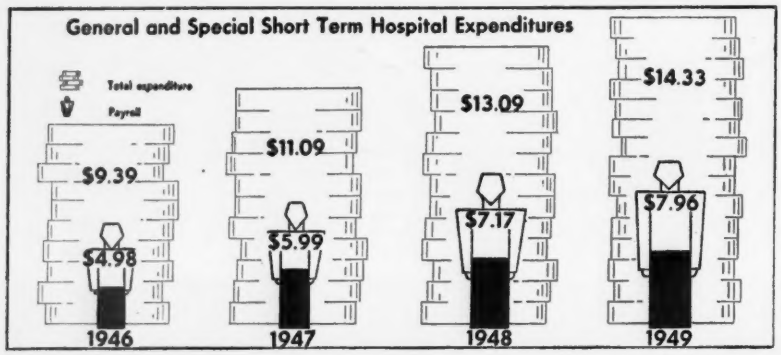
This burden of finding other income to pay for patient care becomes heavier by the year for short term hospitals as a group. Last year this excess of expenditures over income was $2.59 per patient day, the year before $2.16, and in 1947 it was $1.38. In contrast to the $1.56 for nonprofit hospitals last year, the figure was $6.15 for governmental hospitals, or 51 per cent of expenditures.

Short term proprietary hospitals recovered, from patients, their expenditures, but not a great deal more. The excess averaged 21 cents per patient day, or $46 per bed per year.

The nation's hospital bill (total expenditures) rose more than a half billion dollars during the last report year, the greatest gain recorded since comparisons first became possible in 1946. This new high for total expenditures by all hospitals was $3,486,109,000, or $7.70 per patient day. The year before it was $6.35 per patient day, in 1947 it was $5.42 and in 1946 it was $5.21. In three years the nation's hospital bill has risen from $1,963,355,000, an increase of 77 per cent. This paid for much more hospital service in 1949 than in 1946, however, since 2,000,000 more people were hospitalized.

A two-year comparison shows that, among short term hospitals, the rise in expenditures was steepest in those owned by government:

Type of Hospital	Average Expenditures Per Patient Day 1949	1948	1947
Nonprofit	$15.14	$14.06	$11.78
Proprietary	14.89	13.79	11.83
Governmental	11.96	10.27	8.91
Total	$14.33	$13.09	$11.09



For all short term hospitals the two-year rise was 29.2 per cent; for nonprofit, 28.5 per cent; for proprietary, 25.8 per cent; for governmental, 34.2 per cent.

A two-year comparison of nonprofit short term hospitals alone shows that operating costs, expressed as expenditures per patient day, have risen fastest in the largest hospitals:

Bed Capacity	Average Expenditures Per Patient Day 1949	1948	1947
Under 50	$11.35	$10.92	$10.13
50—99	13.40	11.93	10.30
100—249	14.46	13.12	11.76
250 & over	17.35	16.55	12.76
Total	$15.14	$14.06	$11.78

The average rise during this two-year period for all nonprofit short term hospitals has been 28.5 per cent. For those under 50 beds, 12.0 per cent; 50 to 99 beds, 30.1 per cent; 100 to 249 beds, 22.9 per cent; 250 beds and over, 35.9 per cent.

A similar comparison of total expenditures by other reporting hospitals discloses a disproportionate increase by two of the four groups:

Type of Hospital	Average Expenditures Per Patient Day 1949	1948	1947
General & special long term	$4.07	$3.81	$3.03
Mental & allied	2.84	1.95	1.60
Tuberculosis	6.68	6.25	5.44
Federal	13.30	8.81	7.39

The two-year increase for these hospitals has been: General and special long term, 34.3 per cent; mental and allied, 77.5 per cent; tuberculosis, 22.8 per cent; federal, including facilities for all kinds of care, 79.9 per cent.

How much was the reduced length of stay worth to consumers of hospital service? The length of stay figure reported by short term hospitals only, excluding federal, was reduced 0.4 of a day between 1948 and 1949. Without this reduction the 15,427,726 patients admitted to these hospitals last year would have spent an additional 617,109 days in hospitals. With total expenditures at $14.33 a day, the total saving could be computed as reasonably near $8,000,000.

A 1948-49 comparison of regional reports on total expenditures by short term hospitals follows:

Region	1949	1948
New England	$16.81	$14.23

Mountain	12.71	11.36
Pacific	16.99	15.58

It may be observed that the Pacific region no longer stands out as a high cost region. Total expenditures last year were but 18 cents a day above those in New England. In 1948 the margin was $1.35 per patient day, and in 1947 it was $1.80. A comparison of other operating figures, 1947 vs. 1949, shows several reasons for the changes in costs in the Pacific region:

Admissions: New England, up 61,205; Pacific states, down 142,159.

Per cent of occupancy: New England, down 2.6 percentage points; Pacific states, down 0.7 percentage points.

Daily census: New England, down 129; Pacific states, up 1,393.

Payroll: New England, up $2.56 per patient day; Pacific states, up $2.27.

While this paralleling of factors that affect operating costs is less than conclusive, it suggests some reasons why New England hospitals have all but overtaken Pacific Coast hospitals in per patient day operating costs: A greater loss in percentage of occupancy and a relatively greater increase in payroll costs.

The average payroll per patient day in all reporting hospitals continued its upward course last year. The nationwide average of $4.53 was an increase of 25.8 per cent for the year, and a large factor in this was the federal government's jump from $6.19 per patient day to $9.53, an increase of 53.9 per cent. While the nationwide average payroll cost rose 25.8 per cent per patient day, total expenditures rose only 21.2 per cent.

Short term hospitals necessarily spend more on payroll than long term hospitals, disregarding those owned by the federal government in both classifications and with the exceptions to be noted. Nonprofit hospitals traditionally stand at the top.

The short term payroll figure for 1949 was $7.96 per patient day, up from $7.17. The nonprofit hospital average was $8.37, up from $7.57. Exceptions are provided by the largest proprietary hospitals. The highest payroll figure reported for 1949 is for a single proprietary hospital of more than 250 beds. This is $12.41 per patient day, out of total expenditures of $28.01.

One reason for a steady rise in payroll expenditures is a continuing rise in the number of hospital employees per 100 patients. While this is a natural consequence of the shorter work week, it adds substantially to the cost of hospital service.

In general and special short term hospitals, excluding federal, the number of employees grew 10,358 in the last year, bringing the figure for fulltime personnel per 100 patients to 169, up from 162 in 1948.

The average for all hospitals was 78, against 76 in 1948. Although the trend is upward, there were exceptions. The highest national average ever recorded was 209, reported in 1948 for nonprofit hospitals of more than 250 beds. Last year this figure came down to 205.

Special information, 1949

AIR CONDITIONING—see Table 12. The question: Check areas in your hospital of which some or all are air conditioned—operating rooms, delivery rooms, infant nursery, private rooms, other.

Replies from 1,884 hospitals of 6,277 asked show: That 30 per cent of all hospitals have air conditioning in one or more areas; that 60 per cent of federal hospitals have it; that, excluding federal, 29.5 per cent of short term against 14.4 per cent of long term hospitals have it; that even among short term hospitals of fewer than 50 beds, 23 per cent have it. The specified areas have been air conditioned in this order of frequency: Operating rooms, delivery rooms, infant nurseries and private rooms. Approximately 1.5 per cent report the entire hospital covered.

POLIO ADMISSIONS—see Table 13. The questions: Will your hospital admit polio patients? If yes, estimate number admitted last year.

Only a few years ago, polio was regarded as a highly contagious disease for a long period after onset, and the stricken could not be admitted to a general hospital. The extent to which this fear has passed is indicated by the current study which reveals that more than a quarter of all hospitals now admit polio patients. In the general and special short term classification such patients were admitted by approximately half the governmental, a third of the nonprofit and a seventh of the proprietary hospitals.

SPECIFICALLY ALLOTTED BEDS—During the last few years general hospitals have been urged to become "more general" by opening their doors to patients who as a matter of custom have been cared for in separate institutions. Among these patients are the tuberculosis, the psychotic and those with contagious disease.

This year three questions were addressed only to all short term general hospitals. The question: Have you allotted beds specifically for tuberculosis (psychiatry and contagion)? If yes, give number. Do not report beds used only for temporary occupancy pending transfer of patients to other institutions.

TUBERCULOSIS—see Table 14. Of the 3,944 short term general hospitals, 160 reported 4,380 beds allotted. The score for short term general hospitals providing beds specifically for tuberculosis patients is 3.5 per cent.

PSYCHIATRY—see Table 15. Of the 3,944 short term general hospitals, 199 reported 4,356 beds allotted. The score for general hospitals providing beds specifically for psychotic patients is 4.2 per cent.

CONTAGION—see Table 16. Of the 3,944 short term general hospitals, 594 reported 5,755 beds allotted. The score for general hospitals providing beds specifically for contagious disease patients is 13 per cent.

ROUTINE X-RAY—see Table 17. The question: Do you routinely x-ray all hospital bed patients at the time of admission?

This was asked of all 6,277 hospitals. Among the 5,702 answering, 1,142 or 20 per cent reported they do thus screen all patients.

VOLUNTEER WORKERS—see Table 18. The question, asked of 4,585 general and special short term and long term hospitals: How many volunteer workers? Replies from 2,987 hospitals show that 718 received help from 28,940 workers.

SURGICAL OPERATIONS—see Table 19. The question: Give number of surgical operations performed during past 12 months; major, minor, total. (Show major and minor only if you so classify.)

Hospitals numbering 4,372 reported operations totaling 7,076,953. Of the 6,002,465 operations classified, 41 per cent were major operations. Approximately 90 per cent of all operations reported were performed in short term hospitals. If these "reported" figures are projected to cover 6,277 hospitals, it may be calculated that more than 9,000,000 operations of all kinds were performed in all hospitals during the year. A further calculation indicates that there were approximately 15 operations per bed and 1.9 admissions per operation in short term hospitals.

EXTENT OF USE—see Tables 20-24: Presented here for the first time are regional computations which relate statistics on admissions, patient days of care and expenditures to population and per capita income figures.

LONG TERM DEBT—see Table 25. The question: What is your long term debt (outstanding bonds and mortgages payable; if none so state)?

Although hospitals were assured that such information would not be identified with any individual hospital, only 754 of 4,980 general and special hospitals reported long term debt, and the total reported was $95,642,000. Short term hospitals carry 98 per cent of this reported total, and short term nonprofit hospitals carry 83 per cent of it.

DISTRIBUTION OF DIETITIANS—see Table 26. The questions:

1. Do you have a qualified dietitian (eligible for membership in the American Dietetic Association) on duty? 2. Give total number on duty.

This study removes all possible doubt about the shortage of hospital dietitians and the maldistribution of those available. Among other things the table reveals:

1. That there are not enough dietitians now working in hospitals to provide one for each hospital.
2. That three out of five hospitals in all categories have no qualified dietitian.
3. That 11 out of 12 general and special short term hospitals of fewer than 50 beds have no qualified dietitian.
4. That three out of four general and special short term hospitals of fewer than 100 beds have no qualified dietitians.
5. That among reporting general and special short term hospitals of 250 and more beds, 15 have no qualified dietitians and 55 have only one.

RAW FOOD COST—see Table 27. The question: What was your raw food cost per meal last year (do not include labor, supplies, etc.)?

Although it is of limited value for comparison with an individual hospital's figure, the national average was 31.8 cents. Among the nine regions, average cost ranged from 29.2 cents in the West North Central area to 34.3 cents in the Pacific states. The highest single figure is the 43.5 cents average for short term proprietary hospitals of 50 to 99 beds in the East North Central states. Lowest in the short term classification is 22.0 cents for nonprofit hospitals of 250 and more beds in the Mountain states.

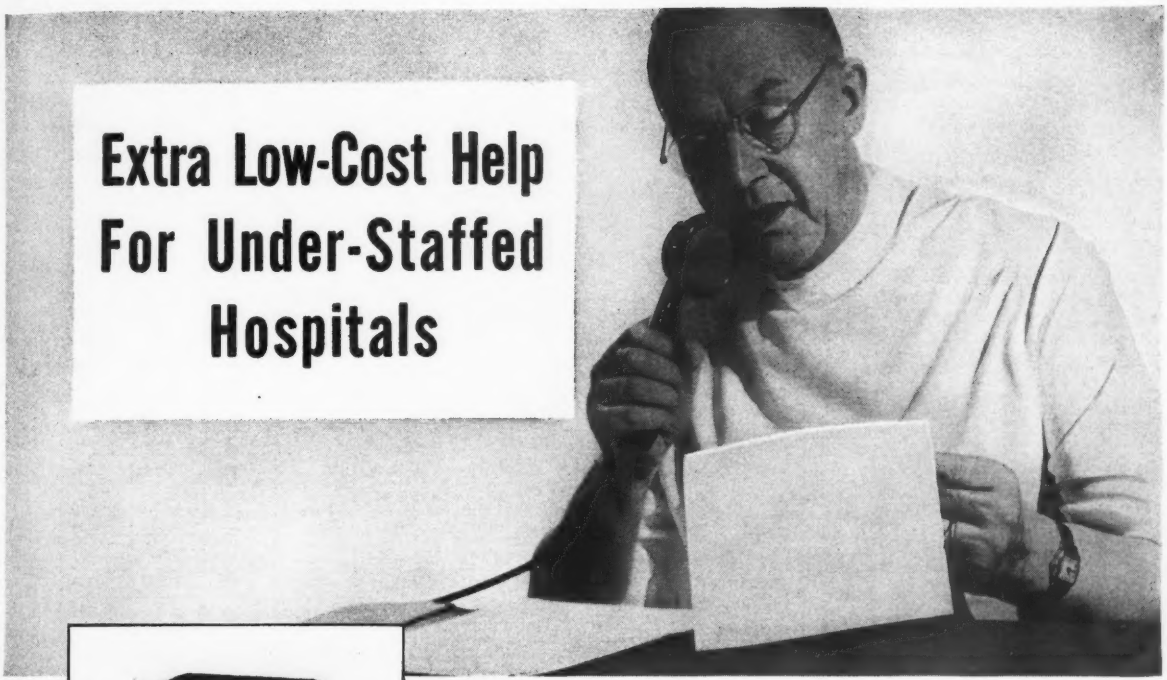
Extra Low-Cost Help For Under-Staffed Hospitals



Here's a valuable aid for busy doctors and short-handed stenographic departments.

Use Disc Edison Voicewriter to record instructions, reports and notes. Dictation can be done while information is fresh in the mind . . . transcription can be made when stenographer is available.

Disc Edison Voicewriter gives unmatched understandability. Exclusive Ear-Tuned Jewel-Action faithfully reproduces the tricky s, f, z, th sounds that often lead to mistakes.

It's the one machine that combines the convenience of machine dictation and the understanding of direct dictation. Only Edison has Ear-Tuned Jewel-Action.

HELP YOUR STAFF TO SAVE PRECIOUS HOURS

A graphic presentation of the advantages of the new Disc EDISON VOICEWRITER in modern hospital administration can be made in five minutes. Phone "EDIPHONE" or write Thomas A. Edison, Incorporated, West Orange, New Jersey. In Canada: Thomas A. Edison of Canada, Ltd., Toronto 1, Ontario.

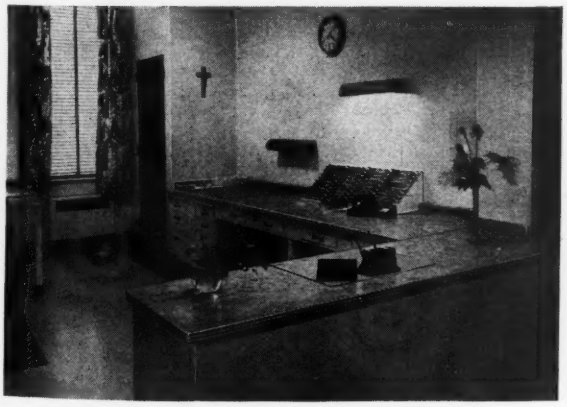
1. VIEW OF GENERAL LABORATORY Evident here is the functional simplicity typical of Hamilton Laboratory installations

2. NURSES STATION AND LABORATORY Clean, tasteful design, perfectly adapted to the requirements of the installation

3. COMPLETE HOSPITAL LABORATORY Compact, efficient and workable; available at less cost under the Hamilton Unit Plan



4. TYPICAL CHART COUNTER Designed with the job in mind, an installation like this looks new and modern for years

Equipped by

Hamilton

of course

Because widely differing requirements must be met perfectly, no two Hamilton installations are exactly alike. Yet there is a strong "family resemblance" in all Hamilton-equipped hospital installations—in their obviously efficient layout . . . their clean, functional lines . . . their readily apparent work-design.

These highly desirable qualities are the result of close cooperation with architects and hospital authorities. By working with a Hamilton Engineer from the start, it is possible to draw on his experience in planning facilities which offer the utmost in efficiency and attractiveness now, and in years to come.

Write today for the name of the Hamilton District Engineer nearest you — let him help solve your laboratory planning problems.

Preferred Adjuvants in the treatment of

TUBERCULOSIS

Dihydrostreptomycin and Streptomycin are unquestionably the most potent antibiotics now available for use against tuberculosis. Extensive clinical results have defined the important role of these antibiotics in suppressing the activity of the tubercle bacillus.

You Can Cut Medication Time and Work as much as ½!

THE DEBS Medi-Kar*

Now saving nurses hours of time and thousands of wasted steps every day—in leading hospitals from coast to coast.

You can cut medication time and work as much as ½. The DEBS MEDI-KAR* eliminates those unnecessary, costly, time-wasting, fatiguing back-and-forth trips from the patients' rooms to the drug room. By using the MEDI-KAR* one nurse can wheel, without effort, up to 36 medications at once (24 medicine glasses and 12 hypo syringes) with everything she needs to give the medications right with her—water glasses, fresh water, and a tray for used syringes. This enables you to handle your present medication periods in as little as one-half the time—with less work and with less bother than before.

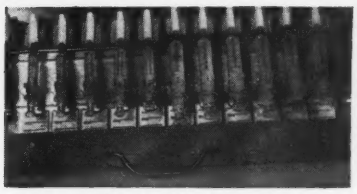
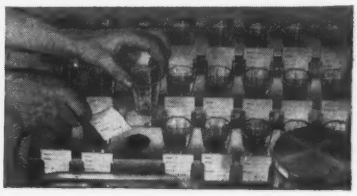
You must try the MEDI-KAR* to appreciate it. Add it to your nursing staff and you too will report savings in medication time from 30% to 53% depending upon the floor arrangement of your nursing section.

Time "saved" is money "earned" for your hospital. The DEBS MEDI-KAR* will return its modest cost in a very short time, and its precision construction of gleaming, durable, stainless steel assures you of years of long, lasting, time-saving service.



Unique rack holds 12 loaded, sterile hypo syringes (2cc or 5cc) — individually identified.



The stepped-up medicine tray holds 24 medicine glasses—individually identified.

Carries 24 MEDICINE GLASSES and 12 HYPO SYRINGES at one time

36 medications all ready to administer—with each medicine glass and each hypodermic syringe individually, clearly, accurately marked by cards in permanent holders. These cards are available in 11 colors and list the patient's name, room, medicine, hour, dose, etc. Each card is with its own medication and will not drop off on the way to the patient's room.

The stepped-up medicine glass tray is easily removed for loading and cleaning. The hypo syringes are housed in the drawer in a special removable syringe rack. Clips keep the syringes in place at all times.

MEDI-KARS* are equipped with a glass rack to hold 24 water tumblers, a stainless steel water pitcher and covered tray for used syringes.

Read what Mrs. Mabel Henry Mooney, Adm. of the Levering Hospital, Hannibal, Mo. says:

"The nurses feel the MEDI-KAR is the greatest time and labor saving piece of equipment we have had in many years. It is loaded with all medication at the same time, along with clean glasses, drinking tubes and ice water. Insofar as possible, the medication is put on the same schedule. The Medi-Kars are easily cleaned and prepared for the next trip. We have one on each division, and with the extreme shortage of graduate nurses we would not be without it."

pHisoderm®

with HEXACHLOROPHENE 3%

a surgeon's "hand prep" in only 2 MINUTES

pHisoderm with Hexachlorophene (G-11) 3% is so rapid in its disinfecting action that "a two minute preoperative scrub is bacteriologically feasible."[1] Not only does this new bactericidal agent reduce scrubbing time by several minutes, but it also provides prolonged antibacterial action because it is adsorbed by the skin where it exerts a continuing inhibitory effect on resident flora.

For the busy surgeon, reduced scrubbing time with nonirritating pHisoderm with Hexachlorophene 3% means reduced skin trauma and a chance for irritated hands to recover. For preoperative preparation of the patient's skin it is more effective than any detergent commonly employed. pHisoderm with Hexachlorophene 3%, actively sudsing, is nonalkaline, nonirritating and nonsensitizing.

SUPPLIED in bottles of 16 oz. and 1 U.S. gallon, and 3 oz. refillable hand dispensers. Hand operated 10 oz. wall dispensers and pedal operated 30 oz. wall or portable stand dispensers are available.

Reciprocity: Colorado has no reciprocal relations in the true sense of the word with any other state. Licenses to practice medicine are granted to qualified applicants from other states at the descretion of the Board, when satisfactory credentials are presented and if all standards are equal to those of Colorado. A license from another state presented for endorsement must have been in force at least one year. No application for licensure can be filed until the applicant has secured a Colorado Basic Sciences certificate. Graduates of medical colleges located outside of the United States and the Dominion of Canada are not accepted for licensure by examination or endorsement.

Examination: January and June of each year.

Fees: For license by examination, $25; by credentials, $50.

Re-registration: Fee of $2 for resident and $10 for non-resident due on Jan. 1 of each year and delinquent on the succeeding March 1.

Reciprocity: Upon written application the board may issue a license without examination to any nurse who has been licensed to practice professional nursing under the laws of another state, and who possesses qualifications equivalent to the standards provided by the state and the board.

Fees: By examination, $10; by reciprocity, $15.

Re-registration: The license of every nurse must be renewed annually by Jan. 1; fee $1. Failure to do so automatically forfeits the right to practice, and reinstatement may be obtained only by showing good cause for failure to comply with the law and payment of $5.

"BEST OF ITS KIND..."

Laudatory comments are heaped upon the Library of the American Hospital Association. "Best of its kind . . .," they say. "What would I do without it."

As a service to members, the American Hospital Association maintains the world's foremost collection of literature on hospital administration and related subjects.

In addition to close to 9,000 books, the Library has thousands of magazine and newspaper clippings, plus kits of material dealing with specific subject areas.

Some 500 requests are handled by Library personnel every month . . . requests by mail, by telephone. In addition, hundreds of people visit the library for personal research.

Members of the American Hospital Association may use the Library as often as they like. Packet libraries on any hospital subject may be borrowed by mail for one month . . . with renewal privileges.

Is a FUND RAISING CAMPAIGN FEASIBLE for your HOSPITAL?

Without Cost or Obligation...

LET US MAKE A PRELIMINARY SURVEY

Does your Community NEED Hospital expansion?

Can your Community adequately SUPPORT a fund-raising appeal?

Will the citizens of your Community devote the time and effort needed for a successful campaign?

Those are some of the questions which must be answered before you engage the services of ethical fund-raising organizations or before you make the expenditure for a hospital program. Without any cost or obligation to you, our experienced fund-raising engineers, with a successful background in the field dating back to 1911, will make a careful, scientific analysis to determine whether such a campaign can be successful in your community.

Organization

Blue Cross Plans make it possible to prepay hospital bills on a voluntary, community-sponsored basis. Each Plan is organized locally and governed by a board of trustees composed of community leaders, hospital representatives and the medical profession, all of whom serve without pay.

Although Blue Cross Plans coordinate national enrollment, public relations, statistical research and other activities through the Blue Cross Commission of the American Hospital Association, they exercise independence in local operation so that each Plan may best fulfill the specific needs of the area served.

Non-profit operation and guaranteed service to Blue Cross subscribers by participating hospitals are the foundation stones on which Blue Cross Plans are built. Thus, maximum service at minimum cost to subscribers is fundamental in Blue Cross.

Blue Cross approval is granted by the Board of Trustees of the American Hospital Association to hospital service plans which meet prescribed approval standards. These standards include non-profit operation, adequate public and professional representation on a governing board of trustees, maintenance of adequate financial reserves to meet emergencies, and a reasonable record of growth. All Blue Cross Plans are required to submit evidence of conformance to these requirements annually in order to obtain re-approval.

Highlights

Every fourth person now has Blue Cross.

Blue Cross is within reach of 150,000,000 people in the United States (including Puerto Rico) and Canada.

During the year ended December 31, 1949, hospital bills totalling more than $322,000,000 were paid by Blue Cross for more than 4,400,000 people.

4,000 hospitals, with 85 per cent of all general hospital beds, are Blue Cross member hospitals.

More than half a million Blue Cross babies were born during 1949.

Out of every dollar received from subscribers, a national average of 85 cents is paid to hospitals for subscribers' benefits.

Subscribers who change residence usually may transfer to another Blue Cross Plan.

Free from financial worry, Blue Cross subscribers enter and leave the hospital sooner than the average patient. Prompt care means speedy recovery.

Medical/Surgical Plans

Eighty Blue Cross Plans are coordinated with companion non-profit plans to cover the costs of medical and/or surgical care. Enrollment in these medical/surgical plans is now more than 14,500,000 and is growing rapidly. Combined with Blue Cross, they provide a comprehensive program to meet costs of unexpected illness or accident.

Blue Cross Plans

The Inter-Plan Service Benefit Bank is a reciprocal program for providing service benefits to subscribers of one participating Plan when hospitalized in a Member Hospital located in the area served by another participating Plan.

With one exception, when only one Plan is listed under a State or Province, that Plan covers the entire State or Province. The exception is Kentucky; the Plan with headquarters at Louisville covers most of the State, but 24 counties in the northeastern section are covered by the plan with headquarters at Huntington, W. Va.

Library of the American Hospital Association Asa S. Bacon Memorial

To provide the administrator, trustee, department head, student, or any other individual or organization interested in hospital administration, with both current and historical material on hospitals and allied fields, the American Hospital Association maintains a specialized library of books, journals, clippings, brochures, pamphlets, reports, kits and blueprints. These resources are available for a month's loan at no charge to the borrower except for return postage.

Requests may be made by letter, telephone, telegram, or personal visit to the library. Each request is given personalized attention by the skilled staff of the library and the "package library" which the borrower receives is in no sense "prepackaged"; each item in the collection has been carefully chosen with the individual problem in mind. If the library's material seems inadequate, the request is referred to appropriate members of the headquarters staff for additional information. Referrals also are made to related agencies. Usually a request is answered the same day it is received.

The library endeavors to bring to its patrons the experiences of hospital personnel in solving problems similar to theirs. While ready-made answers to specific questions always cannot be found, the library assumes the responsibility for locating appropriate and pertinent information quickly. Scientific indexing, classification and filing make such information immediately available.

The Index of Current Hospital Literature is compiled in the library. A five-year cumulative index covering 1945 through 1949 was published in 1950. Until another cumulated volume is ready, the index will appear semi-annually.

One of the world's finest collections of rare items in hospital literature is in the library. Because of their value, these materials are not available for loan but research workers may use them in the library.

A handbook entitled "The Magic Key to Hospital Literature" describes the library's facilities and services and is distributed without charge upon request; this little manual lists six hundred subject headings under which clippings are filed and several hundred suggested books, grouped by subject. A list of Basic Readings for Hospital Administrators, compiled by the library committee, also is available upon request. "The Literature" section in HOSPITALS familiarizes the reader with current publications in both book and journal form.

Loans are made to foreign countries as well as in the United States and Canada, and many hospital and health officials from abroad visit the library when in Chicago or request material by mail. Requests for package libraries or information should be directed to:

Master Menu

The Master Menu is an Association service offered to all hospitals. Designed as an aid to food service planning, it supplies menus for three meals a day every day of the month, including one general diet and the seven most commonly used special diets. There are three parts to the Master Menu:

1) The complete daily menu for eight diets. Menus for every day of the month, prepared by the Association's dietetics specialist, are published in each issue of HOSPITALS;

2) Daily transfer slips on which numbered selections from the published menus may be typed or written;

3) A set of three permanent wall cards for morning, noon and evening meals, to be kept in a convenient place for ready reference by the chef or other cooks.

Kits containing cards and samples of the transfer slips have been supplied to all hospitals. Extra cards and slips may be purchased from the Association.

Public Relations Department

Public Relations Program

A basic public relations service for member hospitals is the "Telling Your Hospital's Story" program. This was designed to help member hospitals strengthen relations with their communities through the most effective use of promotional media and the cooperation of hospital employees, patients, visitors and the entire "hospital family." Material provided includes six kits supplemented by a series of special bulletins and other specially prepared aids.

The kits explore hospital public relations as related to 1) employees; 2) patients; 3) auxiliaries; 4) National Hospital Day; 5) civic, church and school groups, and 6) special events.

The bulletins augment the kits and contain detailed accounts of how hospital public relations can be improved through better use of a public relations committee, the press, radio and other public relations media usually available in the community.

These kits and bulletins offer hospitals a basic reference source for the development and year-long conduct of hospital public relations.

Public Relations Newsletter

In addition to the material prepared as part of the "Telling Your Hospital's Story" program, the Association's public relations department also publishes six to eight times during the year the "Public Relations Newsletter," which acts as a clearing house of information and news about hospital public relations.

Periodicals

The Association publishes: two monthly magazines, HOSPITALS and TRUSTEE; a monthly headquarters news report, THIS MONTH; a monthly newsletter for hospital auxiliaries, and the INDEX OF CURRENT HOSPITAL LITERATURE, published semi-annually.

The editorial offices for these periodicals are at 18 E. Division St., Chicago 10.

HOSPITALS, the official journal, is edited for administrators, department heads and others interested in the techniques of hospital operation. Technical information, in the form of articles and departments of special interest, is supplemented by a comprehensive news section. It is the most widely circulated journal of hospital administration.

HOSPITALS is sent as part of the membership service to all personal and institutional members of the Association without charge.

Subscription rates: To employees and others associated with member hospitals, $2 a year; to others, $3 a year. Single copies, 30c, except two-part June issue, $1.50.

TRUSTEE, the journal for hospital governing boards, has been published since October 1947. It is a pocket-size magazine that carries no advertising. TRUSTEE is the only magazine written and edited especially for hospital governing boards.

The journal is distributed to the chairman of the governing board, or equivalent officer, of each institutional member hospital at no extra charge. Subscription rates: To anyone connected with an institutional member and to personal members, $2 a year; to others, $3 a year.

THIS MONTH at the American Hospital Association is an informal newsletter sent monthly without charge to all institutional members. In addition to a personal message from the executive director, THIS MONTH provides members with an inside look at activities of the Association councils and committees, plus reports on how Association membership services are being used. Institutional members may subscribe for additional copies.

The AUXILIARY NEWSLETTER is published monthly for women's hospital auxiliaries holding Type Five membership in the Association. It serves as a medium of communication between members to assist in better selection and more efficient operation of auxiliary projects; it features project success stories, national conference papers, news of national, state and regional auxiliary meetings, and news of auxiliary women who have made significant contributions to the hospital field through the auxiliary program.

The AUXILIARY NEWSLETTER is sent without charge to the president of all Type Five member auxiliaries. Copies also go without charge to presidents and secretaries of state hospital associations. Individual members of affiliated auxiliaries may subscribe at $1.50 a year.

THE INDEX OF CURRENT HOSPITAL LITERATURE is a semi-annual index of articles appearing in 100 hospital and allied journals, listed by author and subject. The staff of the Library of the Association—Asa S. Bacon Memorial, prepares the INDEX; complete bibliographic information is given for every item. The INDEX is in its sixth year. Subscription fee is $3 a year.

A five-year cumulation, 1940-1945, is now available at a cost of $5.

Nine months of full-time study in residence are required to complete the academic work for the master's degree, or from two to three years on a part-time basis. The requirement of an administrative residency will be waived only if the student has served as hospital administrator or assistant administrator in an acceptable hospital for more than two years, and then only upon approval of the committee on residencies of the advisory council. Part-time graduate students with considerable hospital experience occasionally are permitted to take the residency concurrently with their academic work. Each candidate for the master's degree is required to have a bachelor's degree or its equivalent from an institution of accepted standing, and a scholastic average of B or better. Selection also will be made on the basis of the applicant's experience in hospital work as well as his personality, aptitude and capacity for administrative work, as determined by personal interview.

The American Hospital Association Program For Approval of Hospital Architects

Excerpts from Stated Policy of the Association

Prepared by the Hospital Architects' Qualifications Committee of the Council on Hospital Planning and Plant Operation of the American Hospital Association*

The American Hospital Association will prescribe qualifications for architects who wish to become associate personal members and will require such candidates for membership to be certified to the executive director by a special Hospital Architects' Qualifications Committee, thus providing its membership committee with informed guidance in considering these architects for membership. All architects approved for such membership will be eligible for listing in the Association's Roster of Hospital Architects whether or not they elect to apply for or to maintain Association membership.

In furtherance of its aim to promote the sound designing of hospitals and to facilitate the selection of specialized architectural talent and counsel for the many hospitals in the United States and Canada, the American Hospital Association will:

Extend to architects of proficiency in hospital design and good standing in their community an invitation to become associate personal members; and

Promote the general practice of engaging hospital architects of established qualifications for the designing of hospitals or as consulting architects to supplement the services of architects lacking specialized knowledge of hospital requirements.

The certification by the Hospital Architects' Qualifications Committee will be made only after the committee's appraisal of primarily the applicant's knowledge of hospital facilities and requirements as demonstrated by hospital buildings he has erected and the provisions for such construction made in his creation of floor plans and specifications and its study of the applicant's demonstrated cooperative spirit, professional background and the quality of his professional organization. Architect's qualifications will be considered with relation to the size and character of hospitals he has customarily been called upon to design and construct.

It is the basic intention of this program to create a roster naming the largest possible number of qualified architects. The qualifying procedure will give recognition to every architect able to demonstrate his proficiency in the field of hospital design and construction.

Experience demonstrated by a licensed architect who has carried a major responsibility for the creation of plans for hospital construction while in the employ of any other architect will be given full consideration by the Hospital Architects' Qualifications Committee.

Applications for approval under the program will be made on a standard form to the executive director of the Association, who also will notify applicants of their acceptance or rejection. The Association will be under no obligation to approve any applicant or to give any reason for rejection. It is understood that any application may be returned with a request for additional information. Documents submitted for examination by the committee will become the property of the Association, which at its own option may include them in the Association Library file of hospital plans and specifications.

The Association will have the right to remove any listed architect from the roster for cause, upon action of the Association's Board of Trustees.

Any facts bearing on the fitness or qualification of a listed architect appearing to constitute cause for removal from the roster shall be examined by the Hospital Architects' Qualifications Committee; and all complaints against any listed architect shall be made in person before the Hospital Architects' Qualifications Committee which shall grant to the architect against whom any charges are made an opportunity to appear before the committee. All information thus collected, together with recommendations of the Hospital Architects' Qualifications Committee, shall be submitted to the Association's Board of Trustees for final action.

Approval under this program will not of itself confer any degree, privileges or license for the practice of architecture; nor is it the aim of this program to interfere with or to limit the professional activities of any duly licensed architect.

This Roster of Hospital Architects will be made available to all hospitals seeking advice on the design of new buildings. The Association's aim is to encourage the employment for hospital planning of architects from the approved list. Its further aim is to encourage the engagement of approved architects in a consulting capacity to supplement the services of architects who lack a thorough knowledge of hospitals' technical requirements but whose other attributes have prompted their choice for the design of hospital projects. From association with qualified men in this manner, it is foreseen that the special knowledge needed for hospital design will be gained by architects whose careers are aimed at proficiency in this field.

Requirements for Applicants

Each applicant for approval must establish to the satisfaction of the qualifications committee that:

1. He is of good character.
2. He is the architect with a major responsibility for the design of three hospital construction projects of which at least one will have been constructed within a reasonably recent time, preferably within the previous five years. These projects, if other

"There is no better looking glass than an old friend"

More than 30 years of service to hospitals in capital fund campaigns is our mirror in which we see old friends inviting us again and again to return when the need for hospital expansion and modernization calls for new building funds

FORTY-FOUR times since Pearl Harbor alone, we have been asked to go back to communities where hospitals were built or enlarged through our specialized practice. Thirty-two old friends, our clients five, ten and even more than 25 years ago, retained us a second or third time. Twelve hospitals in cities where we had conducted programs for other hospitals engaged us for their building projects.

Moreover, most of our new clients seek our counsel on the recommendation of the hospitals which we have served.

Early this year the $500,000 goal of our third campaign for the Roger Williams General Hospital, Providence, R.I., was oversubscribed by $104,000. In two previous appeals for $1,600,000 this hospital obtained a total of $1,864,670.

The $1,500,000 sought to enlarge the Harrisburg Hospital and the Polyclinic Hospital, Harrisburg, Pa., was oversubscribed this spring, supplementing $2,159,000 raised in the 1945 campaign for a $2,000,000 objective.

A $300,000 fund for the Manchester (Conn.) Memorial Hospital resulted in an oversubscription of $55,000. In our two earlier appeals for $675,000 for this hospital, contributions reached a total of $710,000.

In Rochester. N. Y., $6,980,000 was contributed to a $6,940,000 joint fund to expand five hospitals and build a new one.

Our record, exclusively in the hospital field, has led 147 hospitals, since Japan attacked Pearl Harbor, to entrust their programs to our management. These undertakings called for an aggregate of $158,775,000. Contributions to these funds have passed $126,000,000, although more than two dozen are still to be completed.

than totally new buildings, must be alterations or additions to hospitals of such a scope that will clearly indicate the candidate's familiarity with the major departments of the hospital plant. Two may be general hospitals in the course of planning or construction.

3. He has demonstrated his readiness to work well together with both his principals and consulting talent.
4. He has adequate previous personal experience in the general practice of architecture.
5. He has had adequate training in architecture.
6. He is regularly licensed by one of the states having architects license law requirements or that his practice is limited to states not requiring licensing.
7. He has in his organization, or has associated himself with, properly qualified engineers, whenever the situation has called for such special talent in the design of hospital projects.
8. His professional organization is of a caliber satisfactory for the proper design of hospitals of the size and scope he has customarily been called upon to design and construct.

Eliminate dangerous guesswork in oxygen administration!

Revolutionary new

measure oxygen quickly, simply, accurately

Beckman Oxygen Analyzers operate on a revolutionary new magnetic principle that assures sensitive, accurate oxygen measurements with a maximum of simplicity and convenience. Hazardous and corrosive chemicals, cumbersome apparatus, slow, complicated analyses are completely eliminated by these new Beckman instruments!

You can KNOW—immediately—the exact oxygen content in incubators, oxygen tents and during oxygen therapy and anaesthesia. Readings are made in either pressure or percentage units without computations or conversion tables. No other methods provide the accuracy, speed, convenience and simplicity of Beckman Oxygen Analyzers.

Among the many types available, the following are particularly suitable to hospital and medical applications...

The Beckman Model D Oxygen Analyzer

Simple, inexpensive, completely portable, the Model D provides accurate oxygen measurements—both in partial pressures and percentages—at the touch of a button. Accuracy ± 2% of full scale. Operates from two standard flashlight cells, self-contained in case. No knobs to turn, no adjustments to make, no skill required—operation is fully automatic. Complete sampling and measurement in a few seconds. Also continuous measurements on flowing samples, if desired. Maintenance cost is negligible—only occasional replacement of flashlight lamp bulb and cells. Weighs only 3¼ lbs. complete—size only 5" x 5". Dual range—0 to 100% Oxygen, 0 to 760 m.m. partial pressure.

The Beckman Model C Oxygen Analyzer

The Beckman Model C is ideal for general-purpose oxygen measurements as well as for respiratory studies, cardiac catheterization and other medical studies where high accuracy is essential. Gives continuous indication of oxygen partial pressure on easily read scale. Available with a variety of scale ranges from 0-40 m.m. to 0-800 m.m. oxygen partial pressure. Instruments with ranges of 100-180 m.m. and 0-200 m.m. are particularly popular for expired air studies. Accuracy, ±1% of full scale.

Operates from standard 115 volt, 50/60 cycle AC current, drawing only 15 watts. Maintenance is negligible. Weight, only 8 lbs. complete. Size—5½" x 8" x 10".

Frequent Accurate Determinations are essential in modern medical practice and no hospital can afford to be without the protection provided by these versatile Beckman Oxygen Analyzers. Hundreds of these instruments are already in use in leading hospitals, laboratories and medical research centers.

Send for descriptive literature on these instruments and for full details on the unique magnetic principle employed.

MANY GOOD FUND RAISERS
. . . BUT FEW Hospital Specialists

A Fund Raising Organization —of Hospital Experts
—for Hospital Campaigns

★ Hospital campaigns present problems distinctly different from those of any other type of campaign.

★ Because of this background our staff sympathetically interprets the hospital story to the public and assists Hospital Boards in the solution of their problems.

★ When your Board's next fund raising problem arises, your first move toward campaign victory will be to request a Haney consultation . . . without any obligation or expense.

"HOSPITALS ARE A BUSINESS . . .

. . . and should be run like a business." What administrator will disagree with that reasoning? What administrator fails to follow that reasoning? Few, if any, because experience has proved to them that the practices which work for successful business also work for hospitals.

That is where the TelAutograph telescriber shown above comes into the picture. Telescriber handwritten communication systems and their value in eliminating late charges—in aiding in out-patient channeling—and in ordinary filing procedures, are well known to all experienced administrators. When extra features have been added to successful telescriber communication and a newly designed model becomes available, administrators who seek the best are naturally eager to get the facts.

The additions to the Model "C" are a result of the suggestions of business executives from all branches of activity including hospitals. These refinements open fields of operation which previously were unattainable. Still, the new model detracts in no way from the efficiency and value of telescriber systems now in use; for rather than improving on current telescriber applications, the Model "C" presents a greater capacity for handwritten communication.

Your inquiries concerning the TelAutograph telescriber Model "C" are invited. Write to Department Z-6D.
